Astrology Explained

COMMENT: One of the questions most frequently asked any astrologer is: How is it possible for a planet, such as Neptune, which is many millions of miles away from us in space, to affect our lives? The questioner usually gives an explanation of the moon's tides, stating that it is easy to see that the ocean is affected because of the weight of the moon, but the planets are so far away that it seems impossible they could affect us.

This is a valid question, and if I may, I would like to give you the explanation of how this is possible. To begin, we need a brief lesson in Physics. Nature is made up of atoms. An atom is the smallest particle in nature. Everything, animal, mineral and vegetable is nothing more than a collection of these tiny particles. A group of atoms make up a molecule and to give you an idea of the size of particles we are dealing with, one drop of water is made up of a great many molecules. Now, the nature of an atom as far as can be determined, is nothing but energy. There is nothing in nature that is not energy. It is another characteristic of nature that everything radiates its energy, and the type of energy radiated is determined by the NATURE of the makeup of its component parts. Therefore a planet, a star, or one of their satellites, such as our moon, radiates its own individual type of energy. That is to say that planets, etc., have their own nature.

There is only one source of light in the universe. That source is the Sun, of course. Light is energy since it is in existence, and I might add, that the nature of the Sun and the energy it produces is a particular type which is found to be expressed in direct relationship to the place that the Sun occupies in space at the time. That is not to say that the Sun changes character, but that its character manifests differently, as does ours, depending where in the heavens it appears. The relationship of the sun to the rest of the solar system is the same as the relationship of the human heart to the rest of the human body. That is why the sun is said to be the life force of the solar system.

All light in the solar system, then, is of the nature of the sun, and it is cast on the planets and their satellites. When the earth is in a particular area of the heavens in a particular relationship to the sun, we say that the sun is in the sign of Pices or Aries or wherever it may be. When the energy of the sun is directed off one of the planets, our life is forever stamped with the nature of the planet from which it comes. At the moment of birth the new born infant is stamped with many characteristics that will last all through life. Some of these characteristics will determine his ability to make money, to be either healthy or not, to learn easily and many, many more things that can not be covered in an article as small as this.

One of the things that makes it so difficult for the average person to accept astrology is the fact that the child is stamped at birth and that he will demonstrate these characteristics all through life. What is more difficult to accept is the fact that the planets, stars, etc., can affect things like war, the stock market, earthquakes and even the way your automobile operates. If you will think about it for a second you will see that the automobile is an energy operated unit (electrical energy at that) and this is an electrical universe.

I have been challenged many times by highly trained men in nearly every scientific discipline and while I have not convinced them all, I have persuaded many that there was enough factual evidence to justify their more open minded consideration in the future. We all like to think that we have free will and that we are in control of our lives. The truth is that we are not as much in control as we would like to think.

Recently a young lady wrote into the column stating that her husband had deserted her and she wondered what she could have done wrong or where she could have failed him. The truth of the matter is that any competent astrologer could have stated at the time of his birth, when the planet Mars moved by progression to a conjunction with the planet Venus, he was sure to have a love affair. It may not be the most reasonable love affair, as we would see it, but it would most surely occur.

Now the point is Mars is not going to ask if he is married, it is simply going to cast its tremendous energy into his life. The fact is that he will respond to Mars. This is a certainty, he will respond, and this is the point on which even astrologers disagree, whether he has free will or not. It is my experience that he will respond. I have known people who have tried to resist a strong aspect, the author included, and they have suffered as a result.

This is contrary to all that we are taught, I know, but I stand ready to prove it to anyone who will make it possible for me to do so. There is one further question and that is; does one need to respond in a particular way? There is in lies the free will, or as I prefer, free choice. Not more than two weeks ago I was covered in a restaurant by a reader and given a stern lecture on the power of the will, but I stand on evidence, not on how I feel. If I had free will I can assure you I would look a lot more like Rock Hudson and a lot less like Mickey Mouse.

Not only do we respond but the earth does also, as a local program director on a radio station found out, when I predicted that we would have an earthquake on the 28th of July and it occurred early on the morning of the 29th. I hope he has forgiven me for being one day late.

Address your questions to Astro-Advice, Virginia Beach Sun, P.O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23451. All questions will be answered as space permits but must include date, time and place of birth.

Trapped In Wreck

A single car accident in the Beach Borough early last Saturday morning claimed the life of an Oceanside Naval Air Station enlisted man and raised the resort city's traffic fatality toll for the year to 21. Authorities said Vance L. Larrabee, 19, attached to Squadron VA-42 was killed when the car in which he was a passenger careened out of control on York

Lane near Willor Lane, struck two trees, overturned, and burst into flames. Larrabee was trapped under the upturned wreckage of the car.

The driver of the car, identified as Ronald L. Azzerello, 20, also attached to Squadron VA-42 was thrown from the car and sustained lacerations over the major portion of his body.

Alanton Kids Protest

By JAMES TURNER

Taking a cue from the big kids, about 20 Alanton children, protesting parental concern and pressures, staged a march Wednesday in the 1600 block of Stephen Road under the watchful but restrained eyes of Virginia Beach police. Organizers of the Children's Independence Movement, founded only two days ago, said they were sick and tired of being told what to do and when to do it.

Carrying banners asking for independence and the CIM flag, with the letters C, I, and M colored red, green and blue respectively, the children were the object of an intense two-car search by police in Alanton.

"We had to play it like it was," said patrolman C. W. Cover, who was at the scene. "We didn't know what we had until we got there." Cover said the protesters told him they were demanding that they be allowed to ride mini-bikes at 12 and 13 instead of 16, as the law now requires.

But the organizers said it was much greater than that. "We want to live our own lives and live with our own thoughts and not the thoughts of our parents," said 12-year-old Betsy Cowan. "I didn't exactly want it, but we went ahead anyway," she said.

Miss Cowan didn't elaborate on the other methods they would use in upcoming marches but said she hoped they wouldn't be violent.

Miss Cowan, replete with long blonde hair and braces, said the protest started after her co-organizer, Joe Collins, ran away from home in July and was caught after only one day out on the road.

"When Joe got caught, they told him he couldn't leave the house without their permission and then he decided he was getting sick and tired of it," she said.

Collins, 12, said the issues of the protest were the fact that he only gets a 50¢ weekly allowance, that he gets yelled at and that he is forced to clean his room and cut the grass.

"I think I should get at least 75 cents a week," he said. "But I do want to work for it."

"We're people too you know. And we have a right to decide what we should do," he added.

Joe's brother nine-year-old Lee Collins, who is also the CIM president, said the youngest member of the CIM is his sister Jennifer, age three.

"She yells a lot," Lee said. "I guess she likes it."

With $2 in the treasury, Lee said that several more marches were in the making, but did not elaborate on the dates or places, fearing a reaction. "But this one was a success."

Miss Cowan said that despite the success of the march, she expected there would be some pressure put on them. "Joe's mother wasn't too happy about it. She said it was embarrassing and the kids were making a fool of themselves."

"My mother said we were flipped and that we'd lost our minds," Miss Cowan added. "Joe's mother will probably have him committed," Mrs. Cowan said, "and give him his freedom that way."

Police did not indicate whether any follow-up action would be taken against the group.

The march, which lasted about 15 minutes, drew no crowds. The only sounds heard were of barking dogs and children playing.

Last Council Session Is Busy

In the last meeting for its elected term, City Council Monday adopted three resolutions dealing with city employee retirement status, making all city employees eligible for benefits under the retirement system.

Employees who participated in the pension system before the city-county merger in 1963 under the Police and Fire Pension Fund may now obtain service credits by paying an amount of money into the fund for services from the initial date of service to Jan. 1, 1960.

In addition, all salaries for weekly employees will be considered as annual amounts, making that group eligible for retirement benefits.

The third resolution adopted makes law enforcement officers eligible for pensions comparable to those available to state police officers.

The City also received and accepted a bid on $3.25 million of public improvement bonds at an interest rate of 5.25 percent from the Chase Manhattan National Bank.

Bond Advisor Lawrence Wales told Council the other low bidders were Anderson and Strudwick, at 5.362 percent, and the First National City Bank, with an interest rate of 5.4296 percent.

The bonds will be used to pay off a $2 million short term loan from Virginia National Bank and for future sewer improvements.

Council also approved an appropriation of $104,403 for the Bayshore Health Building. Bids had been accepted almost two years ago for its construction, but were considered too high at the time. The present cost of construction is $2,734 above the cost of construction when consideration was given to the building in August 1969.

The only request for planning approval, a use permit for an 800 seat theatre near Pembroke Square Apartments by Pembroke Square Associates, was approved with no opposition.

The session was the last for five council members, John McCombe, Lawrence Marshall, C. Dewey Simmons, A. L. Bonney Sr., and Kenneth Whitehurst Sr.

Whitehurst and McCombe have served on council for 18 years and 18 years and nine months respectively.

Bulletin

Virginia Beach detectives are scheduled to leave the city today for Dayton, Ohio in extradition proceedings against a man whom officials say is suspected of the murder of a woman who is believed to have been killed last weekend in a Virginia Beach motel. Officials said Wednesday warrants have been issued against a 20-year-old sailor identified by authorities as Richard Carl Denney stationed aboard the USS "Suffolk County" based at Little Creek Amphibious Base. Denney has reportedly been listed as absent without leave from his duty station since 7 a.m. Monday. Full identification of the victim has not been released by officials who said her body was found in a field near Dayton.

Tourism Is On Increase Here

Despite complaints by innkeepers and restaurateurs that business is down, figures released by the Commissioner of Revenue's office for the month of July show 34.77 percent increase in business as compared with the same period last year.

Restaurants did $3,018,411 in business as compared with $2,008,521 for July, 1969 while lodging business took in $3,493,062 as opposed to $2,820,735 for the same period in 1969.

The total volume for the month of July is about $6.5 million according to the tax-based figures. The increase comes on the heels of a 21 percent advance for the month of June.

According to Irby Hollans, the State Chamber of Commerce's director of activities tourism and its related businesses are up through out the state.

Reports from 60 stations indicate a 29.75 percent increase in visitors to attractions in the state for July as compared with July, 1969.

Virginia Beach experienced a 15.22 percent increase in visitors for the first seven months of the year and 13.9 percent increase during the month of July, he said.

Hollans said that the important set of figures to consider are the number of tourists and not the increase in business volume, because the tourists are not necessarily spending money on the restaurants and lodging but in other areas in the city.

Other factors to be considered, he said, are the increases in the cost of operation for the various businesses.

What is important is the fact that the people are coming, he said. "They may not be spending the money in hotels and restaurants, but they are coming."

Hollans said that queries concerning the state, received by mail, over the telephone, or in person numbered 355,569 in seven months, or 84,526 over the same period last year.

If restaurants have suffered, it is due to the increase in the number of drive-in businesses, he said. "It's easier for a man to go to a place like that, where he doesn't have to worry about how he's dressed; not only that, he can eat in his car."

Another point that will be interesting to note, will be the number of trailers on the road when the State Highway Department's report comes out in October, he said.

A greater number of people are buying the campers and trailers and traveling all over the state, to the advantage of campground owners and grocery stores, he said.

People would rather pay $3 a night for a place to park the camper than pay for a motel room, he said, because it's obviously cheaper and represents an investment to the individual.

Hollans said another factor to be considered is the desire of the individual to do something or go someplace different. Now tourist attractions are having to compete with other forms of entertainment and recreation to get a piece of the financial pie, he said.

That minute slice up of the financial pie, however, may be having an adverse effect on many motels and restaurants here.

According to several innkeepers, the cost of operations have risen, and the number of rooms available have increased but the number of visitors hasn't climbed comparably.

The only way to derive an accurate index of how well the restaurants and lodging facilities are doing would be to do an in depth research project, based on the number of rooms available, the number added each year, how full each individual motel is during the season, including intangible factors such as the appearance of the motel, or the appearance of the bell boy, Hollans said. Even then, he added it still wouldn't be accurate because the base changes each year.

According to Roy Neil, president of the Virginia Beach Innkeepers association, one of the biggest factors affecting tourist business is the institution of the minimum wage law almost two years ago.

With its enforcement, the businesses were forced to raise their room rates to pay the personnel, he said.

The actual increase in business is probably around 10 percent, and not 34.8 percent, Neil said. "We have an increased capacity but not a comparable rise in visitors," he said.

As for campers, Neil said the trailer business is good for restaurants because the campers are good prospects for dinner guests. "They may be here for five days, and out of those five days, three of the dinner meals will be eaten in restaurants."

But several innkeepers have complained bitterly about increasing costs of linens, personnel, equipment and maintenance, coupled with a reduction in visitors.

The people are coming, but there are more places for them to stay causing a reduction in the overall profit, said one innkeeper.

Where can the blame be placed? Many have pointed to the young people who have flocked to the beach resort this summer, saying that the "hippie" influence has affected the city's image of a family beach.

SCHOOL OPENS--Capt. George K. Bryan, Police Traffic Division C.O., is joined by E. Wallace Timmons, Tidewater Automobile Association Safety Director, in placing signs along Virginia Beach thoroughfares to remind motorists to drive carefully as public schools reopen. The Police Department, Tidewater Automobile Association and Virginia Beach Highway Safety Commission are conducting a joint campaign to remind motorists to be alert while driving in order to protect children traveling roadways during the coming school year.

Free Grandstand Events Featured Nightly at Fair

Free grandstand attractions every night will be one of the features of the Greater Tidewater Fair this year.

"We are planning the most diversified fair since we began in 1966," promoter Steve M. Rose said. "This year we are striving to have enough exhibits and events to appeal to every age level," Rose added. The most popular midway attraction in the fair's history, according to Rose, was the James E. Strates Shows. "We had the Strates Shows two years ago and we are delighted that they have accepted an invitation to return," Rose said. "What sets the Strates Shows apart is the program continuity. It's a complete show, not just a collection of rides. They have a complete kiddieland and free animal exhibits."

The Tidewater Fair will have commercial and industrial exhibits, a livestock exhibit and a poultry and pigeon exhibition. "We've got 20,000 feet of exhibition space and every product that is raised in Tidewater will be on display," pointed out Rose.

Another special exhibition will be a T-38 aircraft display. Arrangements have been made with Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio to have this display from Sept. 26 through Oct. 5.

The fair itself will run from Sept. 24, with a special preview day, until Oct. 5.

Missiles also will be on display, including one of the Air Force's most potent weapons, the supersonic Hound Dog. This is an air-to-surface missile which can actually be programmed to proceed toward a pseudo-destination and then abruptly change to a course which will bring it over the real target.

A decoy missile, the Quail, also will be shown. It is designed to dilute and degrade an enemy's defenses. Released from the weapons bay of an attacking B-25, the Quail electronically simulates the full-sized airplane.

Because it will show up on radar screens as a nuclear-armed missile or bomber, the Quail will draw the fire of enemy defenses and saturate their tracking systems. The B-25 Quail has a range of approximately 250 miles.

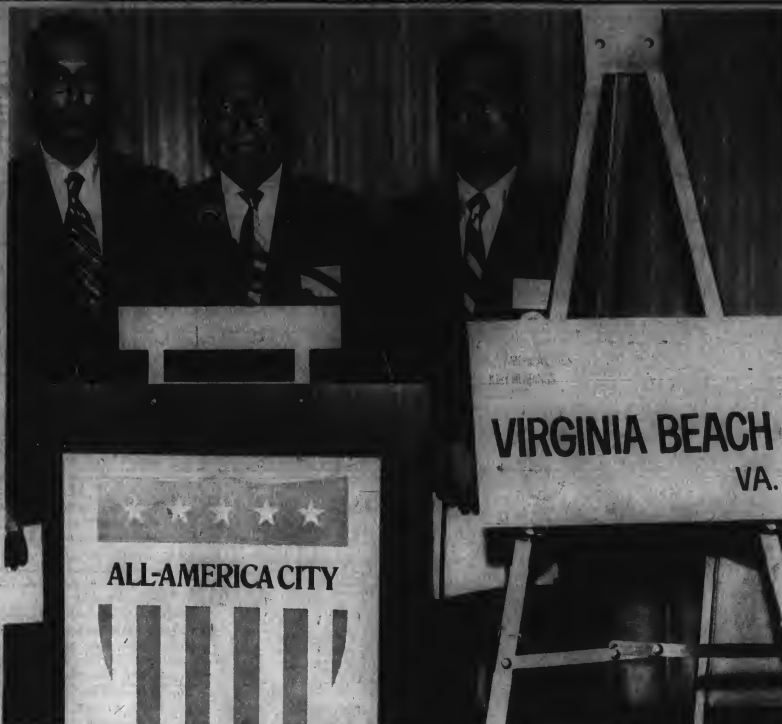

Rose said there will be no increase in fair admission ($1 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12). Inside parking will be 25 cents.

The fairgrounds is a 51-acre site that once housed Pungo Air Field.

Proudly pointed out Rose: "We have enough paved area to park 10,000 cars and people will never have to walk on the ground."

Pvt. Kenneth R. Kavula has been assigned to the North American Air Defense Command headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo. as an administrative clerk in Audio-Visual Services. He moved to the joint U. S. - Canadian command responsible for the air defense of the continent from Fort Polk, La.

Pvt. Kavula attended schools in Virginia Beach where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kavula, reside at 25th Street.

'Fantastics' Held Over By Popular Demand

The Lake Wright Dinner Theatre has extended the musical comedy "The Fantastics," through September 19. It is now in its fifth smash week.

Dennis Stephens and Lou Ann Nelson have the leading roles in this rousing fantasy about the difference between love by enchanted moonlight and as it is exposed to disillusioning morning-after sunlight. They are seen as a pair of sweethearts who romantic imaginations have been turned toward each other by the simple ruse of their fathers pretending to oppose the match they hope for.

John Chester and Dave Lang are seen as the two fathers who hold to the theory, revealed in a patter song called, "Never Say No," that the way to get children to do what is wanted of them is forbid it.

Mac McMannus as the Narrator, not only holds the freshly pastoral story together with connecting comments between the scenes, but he also plays the part of a roving vagabond who is hired to stage a fake abduction of the heroine so that the hero can win glory in her eyes by rescuing her.

Others featured in the cast are Rolia Nuckles as a tottering old Shakespearean actor who keeps gabbling the famous lines he has been spouting for years, and B. Dent as another actor with a specialty of being able to die effectively these two being assistants for the staged abduction. Margaret Lunford plays the highly important, though non-speaking role of the arranger of props and scenery—hanging out a cardboard moon or sun to indicate changes from night to day, scattering confetti to underline moments of gaiety, flinging scarves, boxes, planks about to set new backgrounds, and even to provide a wall separating the sweethearts with her own arms.

Bentley Anderson has staged this public musical hit at the Lake Wright Dinner Theatre, and Althea Waites presides over the music department.

Real Estate Course Set

The Distributive Education Service of the city schools of Virginia Beach will offer a course in real estate communications beginning September 14 and ending September 23.

The course will be conducted Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in room 5-09, Princess Anne High School. For further information call 427-4574.

Instructor will be Robert A. Kight president of Kight Realty Corporation. Kight has thirty years of sales experience. He has lectured at the University of Virginia Real Estate Association and has taught real estate courses for many years in this area. The 10 hour course will provide adequate instruction in the person to person communications field of real estate. Several of the topics covered in this course are: management's role in communication, employees' role in communications, telephone communications, and communication between the salesman and the customer.

Cost of the course is $10 which includes all fees for instructional materials. For further information call 427-4574.

Delegation Optimistic Over Winning Title

The 10-man Virginia Beach delegation returned from Portland, Oregon, last week optimistic that this resort city stands a good chance of being named an All-America City.

Three of the delegation presented the city's side and verbal presentation before a panel of 20 judges—City Manager Roger M. Scott, Councilman George R. Ferrell and Realtor Lawrence A. Sancilio.

Others making up the delegation were Algy W. Cohen and Aaron A. Parsons, both private citizens, Public Information Officer Frank L. Creasy, and Councilmen Albert L. Boney, Lawrence E. Marshall, Earl M. Tebbutt and Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Sr.

"We are optimistic but realistic," Creasy said. "Anytime you are in competition you run the risk of losing, but I feel we're in pretty good shape."

He also said that even if Virginia Beach doesn't win one of the 11 All-America City awards, "we still didn't lose because we have already had definite industrial inquiries from the presentation."

Creasy explained that two "large industries" had requested, and have been sent, information on the area, pertinent to their particular fields "as a direct result of our display."

The expense of the trip fell short of the anticipated cost. Total costs amounted to $4,700 rather than the expected $6,000 to $7,000, Creasy said.

The Virginia Beach delegation was backed by some very high-ranking well-wishers. Before leaving for Oregon, Scott received telegrams from two U.S. senators (William B. Spong and Harry F. Byrd Jr.), this area's congressional representative (Thomas N. Downing), two Norfolk officials (Mayor Roy B. Martin and City Manager Thomas F. Maxwell) and Governor Linwood Holton.

Perhaps it was the optimism this backing sparked that spurred the group on to such a fine presentation, for Creasy reported that rumors were flying that Virginia Beach would be a winner come next January when the winners are announced.

Despite the controversy over the size of this city's delegation—it started out at six, increased to 13 and ended with 10—there was only one other city in the competition with a smaller delegation.

The next step in the competition will be a visit by a team of investigators who will see first hand whether or not the city merits the award.

"They just want to make sure we didn't gild the lily too much," Creasy said.

Dentists Meet

College Gains Art Center

A $10,000 building which for four years has served as a multi-purpose academic building will become a "fine arts center" for Virginia Wesleyan College in the fall.

The one-story, brick structure, located adjacent to the College's first Village complex, has housed the library, science laboratories, some classrooms and some faculty offices. The library activities moved to the award winning Henry Clay Hofheimer, II Library last fall and the science activities will move to a new $1,000,000 science center in September. Classrooms and faculty offices are being moved to the library and the science center.

Two rooms in the building are being renovated for the College's art program, according to Barclay Sheaks, who becomes fulltime associate professor of art at Virginia Wesleyan this fall.

Sheaks has been teaching part-time at Wesleyan during the past academic session. Two part-time persons will assist Sheaks in ceramics, drawing and design and a third part-time faculty member, Mrs. Lucy S. Herman, will continue to teach art education. Sheaks plans to have special facilities in the fine arts center for ceramics and sculpture as well as other art forms. A curriculum for a major in art will be instituted this year.

Two other rooms have been assigned to H. Rick Hite and the College's drama department. Hite has been a fulltime member of the Wesleyan faculty developed. The Library and fine arts center were priority use one large room (which was a biology lab) for rehearsals and the physical expansion program as well as conducting acting and technical workshops. A smaller room will be used as a workshop to design sets and other props needed for College productions.

The College bookstore will also be located in the building. Hite expects to present two regular College productions this year, one in the fall and spring as well as some special programs. He has plans for some student directed productions and the possibility of premieres here of a new play.

Both Sheaks and Hite express interest in special cultural programs on and off campus. Sheaks plans a series of art exhibitions in the new Hofheimer Library. Hite is interested in dramatic productions similar to the one given last year on drugs by the College drama group in cooperation with the Child and Family Service Bureau.

Both men are interested in inter-related programs within the two departments. "We hope to have Barclay work with us on some of our scene design," says Hite.

"This facility will now give us a good start, although we look forward to the day when we can develop the projected fine arts complex," says Sheaks. The long range site plan for the four year old liberal arts college calls for three buildings in a fine arts center including an art building, music center and theater. No projections have been made at this time as to when this complex might be developed. The Library and fine arts center were priority use one large room (which was a biology lab) for rehearsals and the physical expansion program as well as conducting acting involves two dormitories now under construction. Wesleyan will have fulltime enrollment of more than 600 students in the fall. This is up from 481 last fall.

Will Speak

Prime F. Osborn III, President of the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad is the featured speaker at the National Board of YMCA's Transportation Consultation luncheon to be held on Friday, Sept. 11 at 1 p.m. The subject of his speech will be "The Need for Spiritual Values in Industry." Osborn will join other speakers and members of the Transportation Department at that organization's luncheon which will be held Sept. 10-13 in the resort city.

Alexander Melley, Executive for Health and Physical Education, Y.M.C.A. of Greater New York will present a special program highlighting the combined research findings of medicine and physiology in combating degenerative diseases associated with modern society.

At the program which will start Friday, Sept. 11 at 7:30 p.m., Melley will present established knowledge, not commonly known, that today's man is forced to live a life that is not designed to sustain the efficiencies of his several systems.

Osborn, while presently serving as a member of the Board of Directors of 16 railroads, was appointed to his current position this year. He is a member of the Florida Safety Council and the YMCA of Greater Jacksonville. Melley has written a number of articles on fitness and is co-author of the book entitled "Jogging Away." He is a member of the Public Health Association of New York City and the American College of Sports Medicine and serves on the Board of Directors of the National Jogging Association.

An Odyssey-A Chinese Beauty Finds A New Home

RUBY JEAN PHILLIPS

In China a junk is a way of life. It is both home and profession to a people who live only to survive—many of whom never leave the boat on which they were born.

In American waters a Chinese junk is about as inconspicuous as a Toonerville Trolley chugging along the Virginia Beach Expressway.

On the Chesapeake Bay and the Lynnhaven River tributaries the sight of an oriental craft, sails billowed, ornate carvings gleaming in the sun, creates a situation bordering chaos... cameras click, people gape, youngsters jump up and down in their life jackets, and boatmen forget their water manners as they dash in front of, and around the unique vessel.

Of course, it takes a particular person to own a Chinese junk—a person with a bit of adventure in his soul, perhaps a flair for the dramatic, and personality as individual as the boat itself.

Phil Uhler of Virginia Beach is just such a person.

His junk is a lovely lady from Hong Kong. Her name is Chin Loon, which means "Golden Dragon," and she's like nothing else.

Uhler and his lady met in July. She had been living with friends in Woodbridge, Va., near Washington, D. C. ever since coming to this country from her native China three years ago.

The Potomac River was too calm for the talents of Chin Loon. The water is scummy green with algae—or pollution—and scarcely a breeze would unfurl her three sails. She was ready for a new home.

When Uhler first set foot on Chin he was sold. She is 30 feet of golden oak wood with a 12 foot beam. Her cabin in sleeps four and her deck is unusually spacious. She is a comfortable boat, built, of course, for the Chinese who spend their lives aboard.

Last Thursday Uhler backed by a crew of three—Bev and Berkeley Hudson and this writer—set sail from Woodbridge to bring the Chin to her new home. Virginia Beach was three days away and before the trip was over the Chinese junk and her American skipper would be in the throes of a nautical "battle of the sexes."

The Start

The trip started peacefully. Chin pulled out of Woodbridge under power about 6 p.m. Thursday and docked at Quantico harbor shortly before dark. Her unique design always causes a flurry of interest and even the disciplined Marine officers couldn't resist her charms.

One officer came aboard for a visit. "I haven't seen a junk since I lived in China," he said. "The only difference with this one is it doesn't have 100 or so Chinese onboard."

Dawn didn't have a chance to break on Chin and her crew Friday morning. The Marines took care of that—several thousand strong shouting cadence to their callisthenics at 4:45 a.m.

The first sign of trouble came Friday afternoon. The Chin had been underway about eight hours, the temperature was near 80 there wasn't a hint of breeze...and the engine died.

"You owe me a nickel," Uhler told Bev Hudson. Only that morning he had commented that he and Hudson had never made a boat trip without having engine trouble. "I'll bet you a nickel you make it this trip," Bev said. Eight hours and about 35 miles later she lost her bet. And the skipper lost an hour getting underway again.

Late afternoon the Chin was lost on the Potomac River. The only thing Uhler and Hudson were really sure of was that Smith Point was too far away to reach before dark. After much bony-searching they settled for a "marina" at Lewistown, Va. on the Coan River. "What is Lewistown near?" a crew member asked a man on the dock.

"We ain't near nothin'," was the answer.

For a community that "ain't near nothin'" the Chin Loon was a sight to behold. People gathered along the dock to get a closer look and the commercial fishermen scoffed at that "crazy looking thing." Well past dark the crew still fought for privacy while the curious still peeked through the windows.

Into Open Water

The Potomac River is a long, long body of water. Not until mid-morning Saturday did the now slightly weary crew clear the river and set out across the Chesapeake Bay. All seemed well with the engine. No more trouble was expected. Of course, trouble is never expected.

The trip across the bay was long but not monotonous. A school of porpoise performed gracefully around the craft. And the crew did much pondering over some of the happenings in the middle of the Chesapeake—like where'd a speedboat towing a skiler (on one ski, no less) come from; what in the world is a building doing way out there (an old bombing range, they were later told), and how can stinging flies survive so far from land?

A considerable part of the day was spent teaching the only novice—this writer—some of the fundamentals in sailing. Perhaps it was the delay these instructions caused, or perhaps it was a miscalculation of distance, but by 7 p.m. the Chin had only reached Cape Charles and the old ferry slip at Kiptopeke was her destination.

The sun faded slowly but plunges into darkness with surprising suddenness when you are on the water and every moment of light is precious. Daylight was becoming scarcer by the second when Uhler hailed a passing boat and asked the fisherman how much farther to Kiptopeke.

"About five miles down that way," he yelled. It would be pushing it, Uhler knew, but it wouldn't be dark for another hour and the Chin could easily cover five miles in that length of time.

It may have been Chin's Chinese disposition, she may have been bucking a back of a tide, or that fisherman may not have known what he was talking about, but an hour later there was no sight of the slip. The crew scanned the fading shoreline for any protective cove. Nothing. Time was running out. The Chin was in trouble and her crew knew it.

Anxious Moments

The Chesapeake is an awesome and ominous sight after dark. The sky seems to close in around you with its blackness and the waves seem to turn into black patches of dangerous floating debris. The Chin's crew did not relish the idea of anchoring offshore for the night. It might not cost them their lives but it would surely cost them frayed nerves and hours of sleep.

These were anxious moments. Very little was said. Uhler stayed at helm; Hudson manned a hand spotlight while his wife searched the shoreline through binoculars; and the fourth member hung over the bow to keep an eye out for fish net markers, sunken objects, anything that might damage the boat.

For two-and-a-half hours the Chin bucked a strong tide to reach Kiptopeke. About 9 p.m. the flashing lights marking the slip were spotted through the darkness. In another half-hour the boat and her crew were safe inside the breakwater, the anchor was down, Uhler cut the engine...and the battery was dead.

The crew was unbelievably tired. The past two-and-a-half hours had taken a lot out of them. Uhler said the battery might recharge itself overnight and on this glimmer of hope the four collapsed.

It was a rock-and-roll night, even inside the breakwater, but the crew slept on, thankful they weren't fighting the roll outside their protected cove. They slept later than expected and it was about 8 a.m. before they tackled the problem of getting out to open water where they might hail a boat for help.

For the next hour Uhler's sailing abilities were put to the test. There was very little wind. Every time the anchor was raised, the Chin drifted closer to the beach. For over an hour he maneuvered the sails in hopes of catching a breath. The Chin was a couple hundred feet off the beach, in about five feet of water, when the sails finally billowed. With great dignity, she sailed through the breakwater, into the open bay and traveled perhaps a mile before someone, somewhere flipped a switch and the wind died.

For the next hour the crew scanned the horizon for a boat. Of all mornings for the Sunday fishermen not to be out! The radio kept a running account of the day's good fishing spots, but none of them were near the Kiptopeke. Shortly before 10 a.m. a boat appeared and, after a desperate signal with a red cushion, bore down on the Chin Loon.

The Ginger Snapp out of Norfolk was probably the best sight the crew members had ever seen.

Water safety and good sportsmanship combined are the things that save lives on the water. The two men aboard the Ginger Snapp practiced both. They had an extra battery aboard, passed it over to the Chin Loon and insisted that Uhler keep it until he could reach port.

"We'll pick it up at the Bay Harbour sometime," they yelled as they pulled away. "We sure won't have any trouble finding you!"

"Wait! What are your names?" They just waved and moved on.

Final Lap

Now Chin's crew became excited. Home was just a few hours away, a life-saving battery was on board and all was well with the world.

The trip across the Baltimore and Thimble Shoal channels and into Lynnhaven Inlet will long be remembered by the 4-man crew. Fishermen ignored bites on their lines as they gaped at the proud and splendid boat in full sail (encouraged by a smoothly running engine). It was like being the prize-winning float in the Rose Bowl Parade.

When Chin hit Broad Bay a wind blew out of nowhere, the first decent wind on the entire trip, and she sailed through the Narrows and into Linkhorn Bay as if she had sailed around the world, her crew tired but happy, the Chin majestic in her beauty.

There really was no winner in this "battle of the sexes." Uhler certainly didn't conquer Chin, nor did she get the best of him—although she had her moments. It was more like the formation of a partnership between two high-spirited beings. An it was an experience never to be forgotten.

The Ginger Snapp comes alongside.

Getting out of the Kiptopeke Ferry slip challenged Uhler's sailing skills.

May Be The Answer

Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell Monday came up with a suggestion in solving the Virginia Beach Little Theatre's dilemma which may well be the best idea to date.

He suggested, informally in an informal session, that the city consider donating property for a proposed theatre building so that the theatre group, in turn, could sell its site on 24th Street and Barborton Avenue.

Cromwell said that Theatre President James English believed the theatre property could possibly be sold for $20,000, the amount needed to get a construction loan from the bank. With this amount in hand, and another building site free and clear, the group could proceed with their plans.

The Little Theatre has struggled for months to raise money for its badly needed building. Last fall was the first time in over 20 years the group remained "dark" all season, producing only a Shakespearean play primarily for the benefit of local high school students. Their efforts were greatly missed on the cultural scene. It is such activities as those provided by the little theatre that lend much to the social life of Virginia Beach during the winter months.

English approached council earlier in an informal session on the possibility of obtaining about $15,000 from the city to give them the needed start on construction. The matter has been pending now for some weeks and, again, the theatre season may remain "dark" if action isn't taken soon.

The theatre need not be restricted to the resort area, for certainly this is not the most populated part of the city, but it would seem that a site in or near the resort borough would be quite conducive to theatre activities. The group plans to build a facility that will not only offer the usual theatre fare, but will also provide a smaller stage and auditorium for civic groups, small conventions, art exhibits, and possibly certain entertainment for the tourist.

Just what properties the city owns in this particular area is not known but there are several that come to mind which might be considered. The park site at the end of 23rd Street, near the Virginia Beach Expressway, is a very picturesque piece of property which has never been fully developed as a park. Its size and location would be very apropos but its access is limited. Twenty-third Street is too narrow for a more than normal flow of traffic; the access from Birdneck Road is strictly a hide-and-go-seek situation. But it is a good piece of property and deserves consideration.

The old land fill area at the corner of Laskin Road and Arctic Avenue is another which offers an ideal site, plenty of room, but the improvements would surely be prohibitive to the theatre's pocketbook. Unless the city gives them a hand, it might be worth the city's consideration. That piece of property has long been an eyesore to tourists approaching the oceanfront. It has been ugly and odorous and polluted for years, while the area around it has continued to build and improve. The property eventually must be improved... that is inevitable. It would benefit all concerned if a gleaming new theatre and cultural center complex could be built on what is now nothing more than a swampy land-fill.

Perhaps the most ideal site of all, however, is the acreage owned by the city near Virginia Beach Junior High School. The theatre group has many times in the past used the school's auditorium, even though it is far from suitable to their needs, and the location is not unfamiliar to local residents or inaccessible to visitors.

These are but three of the city-owned sites that come to mind. Regardless of which site the city offers--and we urge them to pursue such action--it will be a boost to a group of people who have done much for their city over many years. This may be the solution to their problems. Cromwell is to be commended for his consideration of them.

I SEE NOTHING - I KNOW NOTHING!

Urges Action

To the Editor:

A large number of long-time residents and property-holders of Virginia Beach are both shocked and indignant at the summary brushoff accorded those citizens who attended the recent public meeting of the City Council. In an apparently muzzling move, the subject of billboards on the Virginia Beach Expressway was placed 28th on the agenda (see Mrs. Harvey Lindsay's excellent and informed letter on the subject in the Virginian Pilot of Aug. 24th).

The fact that the opinions of two representative civic bodies (the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission and the Council of Civic Organizations), and countless citizens (without doubt, every member of every garden club in the city) were totally ignored in what appeared to be a grasp at the fast buck from the advertising interests is disturbing enough; but what about the by-passing by the Council itself of its own prohibition of billboards on the Expressway? Cannot an injunction be obtained against this high-handed action? Please publicize Mrs. Lindsay's letter; she has selflessly given of her time and energies towards the solution of this problem for over 20 years. Mrs. Conrad Little

To the Editor:

Your editorial of August 27th was most timely. It is a great pity that the outgoing City Council, at its final session, saw fit to approve four large billboards along the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway over the opposition of a number of organizations and interested citizens. For the past several years there has been a moratorium on the granting of use permits for billboards along the Expressway, Shore Drive, Northampton Blvd. and Gen. Booth Blvd. Just why a change of policy was made is hard to understand.

A large number of residents, property owners, and organizations have worked long and diligently to beautify this City over the past twenty or more years, and the results may be seen in many spots; and it is most unfortunate that billboards will now be permitted along the Expressway and along Shore Drive. Having granted permits for four signs, it will be difficult to refuse others, and already six new applications are to be presented to the Planning Commission on Sept. 8th.

The Expressway and Shore Drive now present an attractive entrance to our City--not only for the tourists, but more important, to those who live here. The Expressway, being somewhat elevated, gives one an interesting eye-relating the attractive view of the countryside, and it will be a shame to have it now dotted with forty foot gaudy billboards. The State Highway Department has plans for the beautification of the Expressway and these billboards will certainly detract from this effort.

It is questionable as to why the billboards are needed--as there is a quantity of advertising on the newspapers on TV and radio.

The States of Vermont and Hawaii have banned all billboards; the same is true of portions of California, and other states are now taking steps in this direction. Now is the time to stop more billboards here before more are authorized. It is far easier to stop now than later on, after there is a proliferation of them.

The time for action is NOW. And the hope is that the new City Council will take the necessary steps.

Mrs. G. L. Tibbcock.

To the Editor:

Mr. Hasler and I wish to express our displeasure at the recent action of City Council granting permission to erect large billboards along the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway.

At present it is a pleasure to use the Expressway, both for convenience and the fact that it is not cluttered with advertising.

Since it is a toll road, it serves to us a lack of good faith to the public to impose billboards, especially at a time when we are becoming aware of our environment.

Please do all you can to stop this trend in our City, and add our names to those who are truly interested in making Virginia Beach an attractive place in which to live.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hasler

To the Editor:

Do we want visitors approaching "The World's Largest Resort City" to see a maze of billboards similar to that of East Ocean View?

Why plant and attempt to beautify Virginia Beach when the City Council permits such a sacrilege?

Visitor Comments

To the Editor:

As a visitor, my response to your survey on Billboards is "yes". Probably this is partly due to having been a weekly newspaper editor, who resented loss of revenue to them--as well as the affront to my aesthetic sense!

As for response to the College Pitch--you can't win 'em all! But, if the pitch for the college was written by the same person who chose the words in this brief piece (in last week's Sun)--perhaps you have the answer to the lack of enthusiasm.

Keep pitching!

Name Local People

To the Editor:

As a taxpaying citizen, I have become more and more disturbed over the practice of our City Council and City Manager of appointing so many outsiders to positions of key prominence in our city government. The Assistant City Manager, the administrative assistant, the Director of Community Services, the Director of Planning, and many more men have been demoted. I think this is something that ought to be looked into. Some people are just trying to make a name for themselves at our expense. I am for promoting local people.

Can you imagine 413 recipes for eggs or 257 recipes for chicken? How would you like a cookbook that suggested over 100 variations for potatoes? A new book in the library is the LAROUSSE GASTRONOMIQUE, considered by many cooking experts as the world authority. It tells the reader how to prepare anything one has ever fancied as food!

However, LAROUSSE GASTRONOMIQUE is much more than a cookbook. It is also an encyclopedia. There are articles on the history of food and cooking, table service, diets, methods of preserving foods. As an example, look for the article about wine. The reader can learn how wine was made by the Greeks and Romans, how it is made today, how to care for the finished wine, how to serve it, and what years are especially good or poor for particular wines.

For a unique, exciting guide to the culinary world, read this encyclopedia of cooking. The novice will learn useful cooking techniques; the professional will find hundreds of new exciting recipes. Anecdotes, legendary tales, and regional comments add flavor to the text and the recipes. Thus, it makes interesting reading for those who enjoy learning about the history of foods and the development of the art of good eating.

KEEP OFF

THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavel, Ph.D.

When an individual becomes ill, the accepted procedure today is to go to a physician, find out what is wrong, arrive at a prescription to cure the illness, if one is possible, and then following this until things are normal again.

What do you do when a country becomes ill? It seems that most of the people in the U. S. A. share the belief that the country is ill. Just about everyone has an opinion about what is wrong and most believe they have the prescription that will cure things and bring us back to normal.

While I am not a physician, let me join the group and put in my two cents worth. My services are free and they might be overpriced at that but I expect my diagnosis and prescription will be as good as those of the experts.

It seems to me that the illness of our country is more of the spirit than anything else. While we have many policies and politicians that are less than desirable, many administrators who are in a perpetual fog, and incapable of grasping the problems we face, I don't think we can blame them for the total illness. They are more symptoms than causes.

The root causes of the illness seems to come from the type of people we have become, as a nation. Most of our citizens no longer have the qualities upon which citizenship is a free and great nation depends. They just don't care enough to make the personal sacrifices necessary to keep domestic order or international integrity. Something means to have gone out of the people and many backbones have turned to wish-bones.

The people want all things that go with being a first class free citizen in a great nation but they want them on credit. They don't want to pay now. Things don't work out that way today. The price of freedom comes high.

Most people in the U. S. A. have become collections of individuals who place a higher priority on the personal pleasures, joys and delights than on the collective future of the country and all its people. Our citizens no longer seem to have the spirit it takes to turn people into a great, powerful and free country.

This lack of spirit has brought on an attitude of self-centered interests that overshadows the people as a whole and prevents them from meeting the public obligations free people must face. They just don't seem willing to be governed under any set of rules that do not please them at the moment.

This sickness of spirit is evident all around us. It has caused us to lose our sense of history. In our schools, the history of our nation and its goals has been traded in on what is called "Social Studies", and our glorious past plays second fiddle to what is wrong with our social structure. In our churches the effort to change society has taken the place of saving our souls. Our literature no longer seeks to inform and entertain but to preach social commentary.

The public desire to have everyone equal, everyone love everyone else and to have eternal peace today has over-shaded the need to have a free country and a world in which these goals can be worked for tomorrow.

The birth and growth of this great country has proved beyond a doubt that a nation does not have to be as one in all things. We can be different and we can still be a nation. We can be black and white, rich and poor, smart and dumb and even good and bad and still be a great nation. Our future does not depend on everyone being perfect and as one. Our future depends on everyone having the same basic rights, the same basic opportunities and the legal framework to seek what ever it is we seek so long as we keep our country free.

We must take the bitter medicine and stop worshipping our young people. We must stop believing that education can do everything. Education is learning what you don't even know you don't know. It is not God that can do everything.

Our educators have led us down a dead end street and we must find the way again. If one single illness must be pointed out in our country today it has to be our educators and the system it has inflicted on our youth.

I don't accept the idea that our country has to face decline. Decay is not the price of progress. We just need to develop the intelligence, the will to face up to the consequences of our illness and do something to solve the problems. If we rebuild our spirit as a people, we can restore America to its rightful place in the world.

Pollsters Condemn Billboards on Roads

Readers this week more than made up for their lack of interest in the question of a week ago. It was unanimous, and strongly so, that billboards have fallen into disfavor with local citizens. There was not one reply favoring them.

Not only did readers vote, they expressed their opinions on the subject also (see "Letters to the Editor"). The question was "Do you think the city should be more restrictive in its approval of billboard applications?" Several readers commented that they thought billboards should be completely banned from the Expressway.

Another expressed the fear that soon Virginia Beach Blvd. would look like East Ocean View. There seems to be no general agreement that billboards do little to beautify the entrance to the city.

A number of billboards have been erected along Northampton Blvd. since its completion with more applications filed at almost every Planning Commission meeting. Readers point out that they are more of a traffic hazard than an effective means of advertising. They point out that there is enough advertising in magazines and newspapers and on radio and television.

The Beautification Commission and Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs have long fought the extension of billboards in the city. Maybe City Council will pay heed.

Now, with schools ready to open for another year, another question comes to mind, and that is about the purchase of textbooks for school children. Virginia Beach, according to school officials, cannot afford to provide free books and free transportation both. However, one school in the city, W. T. Cooke Elementary, has another alternative--a book rental system. Textbooks are rented for a year at a cost of $6 per child--much less than the price of new books. During the summer books are repaired as needed.

Books, along with everything else, are becoming more expensive. Often a family cannot get but a year's use from a set of books. Service families are at a disadvantage because of their frequent moves.

Another World

For the past three or four weeks, many young men who attend the six Virginia Beach high schools have been rising at early hours, and forsaking surfing and late hours on the beach, to begin the season complete with hot dog stands, cold Friday nights and girls all screaming for their teams to go harder and faster.

To many, the sacrifice becomes too great, and they leave grumbling about how nobody ever gives them a chance to "show what they've got." But to those few who remain, the game of football becomes more than hot dogs and cheerleaders, it becomes a glorious challenge, a challenge to the physical and mental spirits of man to excel.

"There are two needs to play a game of football," said Princess Anne head coach John Grady, "violence and compatibility. I agree with Doug Dickey when he says that football and organized athletics are the last chance for us to straighten out our youth."

"We have to hang on to what we're doing," Grady said. The boys learn how to work as a team and that life, like football, is rough, he said.

Kempsville coach Tracey Moon agrees with Grady. "It's life out here," he said. "You get knocked around out on the field, and you get up and start again. These boys realize that there's no one else to depend on but themselves," he said. And if one point can be emphasized said Moon, it's that the challenge is what's most important.

First Colonial coach Frank Webster said that football is the only thing a kid can get that trains him for life. "It's the desire that counts; the will to excel and accomplish something," he said. "There's nothing more fair than football on the field," he said. "It doesn't make any difference what color a man is," Webster added. "It's you and what you can do that counts," he said. "Nobody has ever found an easier way to get out of it," Webster continued. "Football asks a man to put it all on the line, and if they put it on the line and come through, then it's self-imposed pressure." Both coaches Bill Ralph of Kellam and George McGovern of Cox said that football is a game of hitting and violence. "It better be," said Ralph, "because it's the only way to play the game. Our motto here is make good or make room." But Ralph added that football has gotten a great deal more sophisticated. "The boys are a lot faster, a lot more intelligent."

At Cox, the application of the hitting theory is impressive, if not a little scary. McGovern's defensive linebacker, senior Kelvin Petty, isn't allowed to hit other players during team scrimmages. Last week, Petty hit two Cox players during practice and knocked both boys out, said McGovern.

But the fact that this year Cox has the best hitting team it's ever had, McGovern said, has given the team a great deal of pride and the individuals a larger measure of pride in themselves. "Pride in the individual is what we try to convey, because it's a world unto itself out there."

"Actually, it's controlled violence," said Bayside coach Tom Hird, not to hurt a man but to stun him. "What the player ends up learning, he said, is how to control himself, as he must when he leaves the field and goes out in the world, and function as part of a unit.

McGovern talks with team captains Kelvin Petty and quarterback Allan Williams Jr.

Largest Dope Crack-down Here Over Week-End

By LES LEHIGH

The massive crack-down on drug "pushers" in the resort city last Friday night and Saturday morning, believed to be the largest on the East Coast, indicates an increase in the amount of "hard drugs" flowing into Virginia Beach.

This indication was reflected in a statement issued by Capt. R. C. Davis, head of the Detective Division, it was Capt. Davis who commanded operations which resulted in the arrest of 38 adults and 4 juveniles and the impounding of five motor vehicles during the 13-hour raid on suspected drug peddlers.

"This operation not only shows we've got more marijuana, LSD, hashish, and amphetamine, but also that we are now seeing an increase in such drugs as heroin, cocaine, and morphine," Davis said.

Davis said the list of suspected drug pushers has been compiled during a six months special investigation "aimed at gathering information on illegal drug sources in and about the Virginia Beach Borough."

He also said indictments on each of the suspected drug peddlers had been obtained earlier Friday from a Circuit Court grand jury. Police deviated from the usual procedure of arresting suspects then taking them into Municipal Court. This time they went directly to a Circuit Court grand jury, Davis said, in order to avoid possible confusion.

The enormity of the task of rounding up suspected peddlers was pointed out by Davis at the start of the night's operation. He said: "We are aware of the fact that some few of the individuals we are seeking have departed and some others may successfully leave the city during this busy weekend and avoid immediate arrest, but they can rest assured that we will eventually return them to this city for prosecution."

The search was aimed at locating about 66 people and resulted in the filing of approximately 202 charges in connection with the sale of illegal drugs.

Men of the Detective Division were assisted in the round-up of suspected drug pushers by members of the Juvenile Division and 2nd Police Precinct, as well as the city's Commonwealth's Attorney's office.

Officials present during the long crack down included City Manager Roger Scott, Mayor Frank A. Dusch, Police Chief Col. W. W. Davis, 2nd Precinct C. O. Capt. W. J. Moore, Jr., Juvenile Division C. O. Lt. Henry Cappe, Commonwealth's Atty. Andre Evans and his assistant, Paul A. Scortino, and City Councilman Floyd Waterfield.

Suspects were arrested by teams of police officers after they were located walking along the streets, or gathered in various homes or places of business.

The suspects were taken to the 2nd Precinct where they were fingerprinted and photographed by secretaries from police headquarters and members of the police Central Services Division.

Bonds ranged from $5,000 to $20,000, and those unable to post bond were placed in detention cells to await transportation to city jail where they would be held until they could post bond or to await further legal proceedings.

Adults arrested on felony charges involving alleged sale of drugs and/or narcotics, and the number of charges filed against them, were identified by police as John D. Parker, Route 2, Virginia Beach, one count; Joseph H. Bratten, Five Points Road, Virginia Beach, seven counts, and one count of alleged possession of a depressant drug; William V. Evans, V. 22, 23th Street, Virginia Beach, one count, plus one count of alleged possession and sale of hashish, as well as two misdemeanors consisting of alleged possession of marijuana and assaulting a police officer; Carl T. Cochran, 23 W. Olney Road, Norfolk, Va., four counts; Gary E. Amman, 22 S. 5th Avenue, Phoenix, Arizona, seven counts; Michael R.

27th Street, Virginia Beach, ten counts; Donald K. Instone, 23, Lorton Avenue, Toledo, Ohio, three counts.

Also Nathan M. McGraw, 20, Scott Lane, Virginia Beach, five counts; Paul C. Mauricis, 22, Raintree Road, Virginia Beach, three counts; Douglas L. Lachman, 18, First Colonial Road, Virginia Beach, three counts; Frank L. Kuhn, 23, Beverly Street, Annandale, Va.; William W. Whitehead, 23, Grimes Court, Norfolk, Va., one count; Michael V. Scattarella, 19, First Street, Central Nyack, N.Y.

Also Joseph (nmn) Saduska, aka Leo Salerno, 30, Virginia Lee Motel, Virginia Beach, 11

Virginia Beach, three counts; Patrick A. Powers, 21, 37th Street, Virginia Beach, one count; and Terry L. Melhard, 21, Frostburg Lane, Virginia Beach, three counts.

Juveniles charged in connection with alleged sale of drugs and/or narcotics, which are classified as felonies, included a 17 year old boy, three counts sale of narcotics; a 15 year old boy, three counts sale of narcotics; a 15 year old boy, three counts sale of narcotics; and a 17 year old boy, three counts of narcotics violations. A fourth juvenile, a 17 year old girl, was charged with one count of alleged possession of marijuana, which constitutes a misdemeanor.

Five other adults were charged with misdemeanors of various descriptions when they became involved in the round up. Officials identified these, and their charges, as Kristin R. Kerkela, 19, Baltic Avenue, Virginia Beach, one count of alleged possession of marijuana; Mary V. Ker, 20, Bedford Avenue, Altavista, Va., one count of alleged curse and abuse of a police officer; Frank L. Young, 16th Street, Virginia Beach, one count of disorderly conduct.

Some 200 young people gathered outside 2nd Police Precinct headquarters Saturday night in protest of what they referred to as "police harassment of long-haired young people."

The majority of the group gathered on an 18th Street parking lot opposite the headquarters building, with the remainder forming a line along the building.

About 50 regular and auxiliary police officers formed a security line between the group and the Precinct headquarters. Officials said that, except for minor jeering and shouting peace slogans, the protest was carried out quietly and without incident.

L. F. S. Krahenbill, in charge of the Precinct at the time, and Sgt. N. C. Morse conferred with four spokesmen for the group and assured them the previous night's activities were aimed only at suspected drug pushers. The group was also invited to file any formal complaints they may have against police.

Following the meeting the four representatives returned to their associates and the group dispersed without incident.

Saturday morning Davis said the search for those being sought in the crackdown on suspected drug pushers would continue. This was evident with the arrest of a 43rd suspect on Monday morning who was identified by officials as Edward T. Flynn, 22, of 27th Street, Virginia Beach, Flynn, according to authorities, was arrested on three felony charges in connection with the investigation.

As of noon Monday City Sgt. John E. Marr said most of those who had been arrested during the round-up were still in custody at the jail because they had not been able to post bond.

Marr said his staff had not witnessed any difficulty in handling the unusually large number of persons which were placed in the jail at the time, nor had they created any disturbance in the jail.

Marr also said each of those brought in were put through standard procedures established to maintain the cleanliness of prisoners. According to Marr this included haircuts and shaves for male prisoners, who were wearing extremely long hair and/or beards at the time of their arrest, and providing bathing and laundry facilities for those who required them.

Each of the suspects were afforded hearings Monday in Juvenile Court before Judge Thomas F. Betz, Jr., or in Circuit Court before Judge Paul W. Ackiss. Those who could not afford their own counselor had attorneys appointed for them by the court. Each of the cases were continued until a future date, and those who still had not been able to raise bond were returned to the city jail.

Policemen Promoted

C. W. (Bill) Simmons, Training and Personnel Officer in the Virginia Beach Police Department, has been promoted from Lieutenant to captain, Chief Col. William W. Davis has announced.

At the same time, Col. Davis announced that Richard F. Lippert and Franklin R. Scarborough have been promoted to sergeants.

All three of the new ranks became effective Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Lippert, 32, has been a Beach policeman since July 1965. He has been in the Traffic Division but as he puts on his new stripes he will go to the Second (Beach Borough) Precinct.

Scarborough, 29, joined the force in May 1963, and has been assigned to the Second Precinct aboard the Police Patrol Boat. His new assignment will be in the Traffic Division.

Simmons, 38, has been on the Beach police force since 1959, serving as a patrolman, in the K-9 Corps and in the detective division. He became a sergeant in 1962, and a Lieutenant in 1968.

As Training and Personnel Officer, Simmons is responsible for recruitment and keeping the 206 members of the Police Department abreast of new techniques—including the city's well-equipped Special Weapons Range. He has had the position since January 1969.

Born in Thorpe, W. Va., Simmons grew up on Staunton, Va. After business college, he was a federal employee for six years and in private industry one year. Since joining the Virginia Beach Police Department, he has graduated from the Southern Police Institute in Louisville, Ky., and has completed specialized courses at Michigan State University and Virginia Commonwealth University.

Simmons now is on the faculty of the Tidewater Police Academy at Old Dominion University and is a past president of the Fraternal Order of Police, Lodge 8.

He is married to the former Peggy Bright of Woodbridge, Va. They have one daughter, 6-year-old Tracey Jean.

When you're not like yourself, Lydia Pinkham understands

All of a sudden you might feel you're changing—not a good feeling. You're tired, edgy, out of sorts and that's not you. Lydia Pinkham understands.

A long time ago, when ladies couldn't be as frank as we can today, Lydia Pinkham recognized the problem and set about finding a remedy. She knew it was not natural for women to have to suffer with what was obviously a natural process.

So she turned to nature for a remedy. She developed a marvelous compound of medicinal roots and herbs that turned the trick for the women she knew. Because it is a natural answer to your natural problems, it can turn the trick for you, too.

Try Lydia Pinkham's root and herb remedy to help you feel better, more like yourself.

Becker Dies
A Medical Examiner's report Wednesday listed a heart attack as the cause of Herman Frederick Wolfgang Becker's death. Becker, 60, who was also known as Herman Lee Becker and Bookie Beck, was taken by ambulance from his home in the 4600 block of Valley Forge Drive at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoon to Virginia Beach General Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

A native of today's East Germany, he had since 1935 been linked with alleged gambling operations in Virginia Beach.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues caused by inflammation

Doctors have found a medication that in many cases gives prompt, temporary relief from pain and burning itch in hemorrhoidal tissues. Then it actually helps shrink swelling of these tissues caused by inflammation. The answer is Preparation H®. No prescription is needed for Preparation H. Ointment or suppositories.

Candle coffee planned

It's a Candle Coffee for the Cavaliers.

There will be everything from Williamsburg to Christmas candles displayed.

That is their fund raising project planned for Oct. 9. For those not familiar with candle coffee, it is an opportunity to see different types of candles from different companies, then order any so desired.

The Cavalier Junior Women's club is sponsoring the coffee from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Jack Gibson at 1440 Waters Edge Drive, and candles will be displayed all over the house. Refreshments will be served all day.

Invitations will be sent out a week or 10 days before the coffee.

Mrs. Leon Ware is project chairman.

What a way to end summer

There's just no way to avoid the last minute rush before school starts, it seems.

Like books. Of course it's not practical to get them at the beginning of the summer and have to store them for three months, but it sure is expensive to purchase $30 or so worth of books at one time when your pocketbook is already suffering from malnutrition from buying new school clothes, etc.

That et cetera is what's really expensive. Everybody has to have a new notebook. They all have to have new pencils. And crayons. And erasers. And book covers.

Then you have to listen to "how come she got that kind and I didn't?" from all three of them--the youngest is finally starting first grade. It will be the first time in six years we haven't had somebody in kindergarten.

You suddenly discover (or remember) that the seven-year-old's lunchbox will not survive another winter. Then, as you dig farther in the cabinet where they're stored, you make the horrible discovery that the six-year-old's vacuum bottle was never washed out after his kindergarten picnic last May.

After getting all the books, you discover that the fourth grader will have to have a book bag--it's physically impossible for her to get that load to school otherwise. She's a big girl for her age. You can't help but wonder how the petite little thing next door can even pick hers up.

Then there are shoes. The kids are "lucky" enough to go to an elementary school with a gym. Great. That also means that they have to have tennis shoes in addition to school shoes all except the second grader that is. She loses everything not attached to her physically, so she's either going to wear tennis shoes all day, all winter, or she's going to go barefooted in the gym. I haven't decided yet. Two pairs of tennis shoes for her was enough to buy last year.

Somehow or another we've got to teach the first grader to tie his shoes before tomorrow. His sisters have tried, his parents have tried. He just likes to run around with the laces dragging. The other two learned when they were in kindergarten.

September seems to come around every year to mess up what would have been a beautiful ending to summer.

Miss McMillan

McMillan-Byrne engagement

Col. and Mrs. Jents C. McMillan of Worms, Germany, have announced the wedding plans of their daughter, Terri Christine, to Thomas R. Byrne of Newport News. The wedding will take place Sept. 5 in the post chapel at Ft. Monroe, Va.

Miss McMillan is a 1970 graduate of Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va. She will join the Chesapeake school system as an English instructor this year.

The groom, son of Col. and Mrs. Daniel Kevin Byrne, served a three-year tour in the Army, attaining the rank of sergeant. He saw service in the Republic of Vietnam, after which he was assigned as a member of the 3rd Inf. Regt., the renowned Old Guard unit at Ft. Meyer, Va. He is now enrolled as a student at Thomas Nelson Community College in Newport News.

The bride's father is currently Deputy Chief of Staff for Services at U. S. Theater Army Support Command, Europe (TASCOM) headquarters at Worms, Germany.

The groom's parents reside in Newport News. Col. Byrne is stationed at Continental Army Command (CONARC) headquarters at Ft. Monroe. He was Commanding Officer of Ft. Story until Aug. 1.

The bride and groom plan to reside in Virginia Beach.

Miss Hood

Hood-Wieser engagement

Capt. and Mrs. Alexander H. Hood, U. S. Navy, of E. Bay Shore Drive announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Ann, of Pittsburgh, Pa. to Frederick James Wieser of Turtle Creek, Pa.

Mr. Wieser is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Wieser of Turtle Creek. He was graduated from Saint Fidelis College in Herman, Pa., and from Capuchin College in Washington, D. C. Miss Hood was graduated from Westhampton College, University of Richmond, Richmond, Va. She is employed as a research physicist at the Brucetown Laboratory U.S. Bureau of Mines, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The wedding will be held on Oct. 24 in The Chapel of the Good Shepherd, Oceana Naval Air Station.

Mrs. Tant

Schwegler-Tant wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Robert William Tant are residing in Elon, N. C., following their wedding at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22 in Good Shepherd Lutheran Church. The Rev. Dickson W. Taylor officiated.

The bride is the former Miss Ingrid Anna Marie Schwegler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Frederick Schwegler of Carlson Lane.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Green Tant of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mrs. Robert Earl Doolittle Jr. was her sister's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Susan Lynn Reider of Brownsville

Texas, Mrs. Leslie M. Rutledge of Newport News, Miss Cynthia Malbon and Miss Leslie Hogan of Virginia Beach. Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. David W. Jackson and Mrs. Edwin L. Wood of Richmond, Miss Marylin Crawford of Burlington, N. C. and Barbara Todd of Virginia Beach. Rebecca Schwegler, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

Mr. Tant was his son's best man. Groomsmen were James Compher of Percyville, Joseph E. Tant and James A. Tant, both of Tuscaloosa, and Robert Earl Doolittle Jr.

Consider viburnums

Viburnum shrubs should be considered when you are planning or improving the landscaping of your home. These are very dependable and have increasing ornamental value for all seasons of the year.

The special features of viburnums include fragrant white flowers in the spring, glossy green foliage during the summer, conspicuous autumn foliage and bright-colored fruits in late summer and fall.

Viburnums are sturdy shrubs, which are easy to grow. Most varieties are hardy in all parts of Virginia. They are troubled by very few pests, except some of the snowballs which are attacked by aphids.

Use viburnums as specimen shrubs, or in a border planting. If you select an appropriate size for the location, they will need only moderate pruning to retain desirable form and gradually renew the bush.

Select a well drained, fertile soil for viburnums. A mulch of wood chips, sawdust, peat moss or other organic material extending several feet out from the base will conserve soil moisture and help suppress weed growth.

On good soils, viburnums will make sufficient growth without the use of fertilizer. If the growth is somewhat weak, or the foliage is light green, apply one cupful of 5-10-5 around each medium size shrub. Use half this amount on small shrubs, and twice as much on large shrubs. Remember, use fertilizer only on weak growing shrubs.

The Korean Spice Viburnum is a favorite because of its fragrant spring flowers. The Fragrant Snowball has better foliage and slightly larger flowers.

ers, which are somewhat less fragrant. Each of these grow to a height of about six feet.

The Japanese Snowball, or Doublefile, has conspicuous flowers in flat clusters, somewhat like a dogwood. It grows about eight feet tall and has attractive red fruit in the fall which gradually turns black.

The Leatherleaf viburnum has excellent foliage which hangs on throughout the year. It grows to a height of fifteen feet, but can be pruned heavily to maintain a lower, more compact bush. The red to black fruit is effective in the fall.

A large viburnum to use as a specimen or mass planting is the Black Haw. It grows 15 feet tall, has attractive flat flower clusters, blue-black fruit and shiny red leaves in the fall.

The Wright viburnum is a medium size plant about eight feet tall. It has attractive flowers in the spring and an abundant crop of bright red berries from August until October. During October and November the foliage turns bright crimson.

Low forms of viburnum are now available. The Compact European Cranberry bush grows only five feet tall, with good flower and fruit production even when young. A more dwarf type, the Nanaum, seldom exceeds two feet and does not produce flowers or fruit. These low species are useful as hedge plants.

The Withered viburnum is available in a dwarf form which reaches a height of three feet. This shrub produces an abundance of blooms in June followed by fruits which gradually change color from green to pink, red and black.

The Orange-fruited Tea Viburnum is unusual because of its orange-colored flowers in flat clusters in late June.

If you have room for one more quite large viburnum, try the American Cranberry bush. This one becomes 12 feet tall. It has fine white flowers in late May, conspicuous edible scarlet berries during the fall and winter and striking red foliage in the autumn.

Approximately three-quarters of Virginia's 1970 community college graduates completed occupational-technical programs of study.

WOMEN PAST 21 WITH BLADDER IRRITATION Suffer Many Troubles

After 21, common kidney or bladder irritations affect twice as many women as men and may make you tense and nervous from too frequent, burning or itching urination both day and night. Secondly, you may lose sleep and suffer from headaches, backache and feel old, tired, depressed. In such irritation, CYSTEX usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by curbing irritating germs in strong, acid urine and by analgesic pain relief. Get CYSTEX at drugists. See how fast it can help you.

Understand decorators

Names are being dropped all over these days. Whether it's at the beauty salon, on a trip, or at a party, the "in people" are using words like Longueville, gauche, and La Belle Epoque. And, when it comes to decorating there's Toile de Jouy, monochromatic and Shidd.

Even if you do your own decorating, United-Desoto, Chicago based wallcovering manufacturer, suggests you drop a few of these names:

Toile de Jouy: Line-engraved landscape-with-figure patterns first printed in one color on cotton or linen in the city of Jouy, France. The term also refers by extension to all such patterns, many of them "commemorative" wallpapers from other countries.

Shidd: Hand-made Oriental silk (shantung) glued to paper backing.

Monochromatic: Of one color, sometimes in different light-and-dark shades.

Adam Design: Designs recognized by their motifs, such as urns, lozenge forms, plaques with dainty scrollwork. Named after the Adam brothers who designed wallpaper, fabrics and furniture during the late 18th century. Many early homes boast "Adam" windows.

Art Nouveau: Also known as Psychic art is characterized by natural forms, distorted into whiplash curves. The "new art" which flourished rather briefly in Europe at the end of the last century and staged an extraordinary comeback in the 60's.

Cartouche: A motif in the shape of an unrolled scroll with inscriptions or other emblematic decorations.

Chinoiserie: Designs now applied to most Chinese or Oriental themes.

Directoire: Period just preceding Napoleonic (1795-99), marked by the emergence of military motifs.

Quatrefoil: An ornamental motif consisting of four foliate leaves.

Trompe L'Oeil: Literally, fool-the-eye; a design that creates a three-dimensional illusion through shadows and textural effects.

Then there are some plain old American terms in wall-coverings which are misunderstood -- words like strippable and pre-pasted. Today's modern wallcoverings are pre-pasted at the factory for easy installation in the home. Just dip in water to activate adhesive. They are also strippable, which means they are easy to remove at redecorating time. No steaming, or scraping. Merely loosen a corner and pull.

Chives lend distinction to chef-inspired souffle

Souffle is the French word for "puffed up", which is exactly what happens when you cook a souffle. There are generally two types of souffles, main dish entrees and dessert souffles.

Basic to the main dish type is the time honored bacon souffle. To create a distinctive bacon souffle for his guests at the Las Vegas Riviera Hotel dining rooms, Chef Raymond MacCurtin created a bacon and chive souffle.

The secret of making a better souffle is organization, baking correctly and serving immediately. Smooth white sauce is essential, and while it is hot, beaten egg yolks should be stirred thoroughly in. The egg whites should be whipped until stiff, then gently folded in the mixture. Working lightly, scrape the mixture into the prepared souffle dish, and smooth the top if desired. Put the dish in the center of the oven and on the bottom shelf.

The addition of chopped chives to this souffle accomplishes two desirable results. It adds color and mild onion-like flavor to the dish. And, for convenience sake, chives are available at your market in two ready-to-use forms: freeze-dried chopped chives in glass jars in the spice section, or in full-fresh packets throughout the grocery department; or frozen chopped chives are stocked in the frozen food cabinet.

CHIVE AND BACON SOUFFLE
3 tbs. butter
3 tbs. flour
Dash white pepper
1 cup milk
2 tbs. frozen or freeze-dried chopped chives
1 tbs. Parmesan Cheese
1/4 cup cooked & crumbled bacon
4 eggs, separated
3/4 tsp salt

Preheat oven to 325 degrees (slow). Set a 1 1/2 quart casserole or souffle dish in a shallow baking pan; place in oven. Pour boiling water around casserole to depth of at least one inch; let casserole heat while souffle is prepared.

Melt butter in a sauce pan. Add flour and pepper; blend well. Cook over medium heat until bubbly. Add milk all at once and cook stirring constantly until smooth and thickened. Stir in chopped chives, cheese and bacon.

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Fold into hot white sauce.

Add salt to egg whites; beat until stiff but not dry. Fold yolk mixture into stiffly beaten whites.

Pour into heated casserole. For an attractive serving appearance, cut into souffle mixture with a spoon about 1-inch from side of casserole and 1 inch deep, completely drying the mixture. Bake in a 325 degree (slow) oven for 55 to 60 minutes, or until puffed, delicately browned, and a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve immediately. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

1st meeting is scheduled

The Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach will have their first full meeting on Tuesday Sept. 8, at 11 a.m. at Scott Memorial United Methodist Church, with luncheon following the business meeting.

Mrs. John E. Yeates, president of the Tidewater District, will be the guest speaker.

Mrs. Alfred Mugglesworth, Jr. will be guest soloist, accompanied by Mrs. George Aldridge at the piano.

Almost 50 archers some of whom spent a week stalking their prey, were unable to bag a single Sika deer during the 1969 bow and arrow season on Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge on Virginia's Eastern Shore. The bow and arrow hunt for the elusive oriental deer is an annual fall event at the Refuge, which is less than 100 miles from the modern Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

Rose Hall's BRIDAL LANE

When Pamela Shaw Hunk arrived at Lee's McRae College in Banner Elk, N.C., for her first year of study in physical education, she found that an orientation dance was scheduled for all freshmen. She couldn't help but feel a bit dejected since she didn't know any boys.

During breakfast everyone else was greeting those they knew from the previous year of school. A very nice looking young man walked into the dining area and spoke to Pam's girlfriend who, in turn, introduced him to Pam. His name was Barry Swing, a sophomore just arriving to begin the new term. He was obviously impressed with Pam and did ask if she would let him escort her to the dance.

Happy once again, Diane prepared for the party - the young man arrived but just as they were walking out the door, who should they run smack into but her out-of-town date who had been delayed. What to do??? Diane made explanations and finally arrived at a decision. They should all go to the party.

Mrs. Swing Pam was impressed with Barry and was simply delighted that he should ask her to the dance. Evidently her delight didn't show through because Barry says he just knew she wasn't going to meet him and he had second thoughts about going to the dance at all. However, being a gentleman, he decided he had best go just in case she did show up. She did, too, and they had a grand time at the dance.

Barry asked Pam out frequently after that and they have been a two-some for three years, with this last year on a more serious vein. They were married Aug. 22nd.

Pam's "Something Old" was a Cameo ring belonging to her great grandmother, Mrs. Charles Morgan. Pam believes wholeheartedly in tradition and is very proud her grandmother allowed her the honor of wearing the cameo on her wedding day.

Diane is now Mrs. Gary Litchfield and she looks back on that New Year's party as a lot of fun and funny! Gary frowns and says he didn't think it was a bit funny! However, he can't help chuckling.

Perhaps his toast "Should Old Acquaintance be forgot?" had a different connotation; rather that Diane's other friend not be forgotten, but never brought to mind!

Hints to the Bride: Engagements should never be announced more than a year ahead.

Where engagements are broken, the engagement ring and other gifts must be returned.

Anyone with items of interest on engagement and/or wedding, tell your story to Mrs. Evie Myatt, Bridal Consultant at Rose Hall.

The couple are living in North Carolina.

Championship Successful

The orange in the beach umbrella matched the orange in Dewey Weber's flowered visor as he watched the four young surfers in the calm Atlantic before him.

"The surf is adequate for a contest," said the West Coast impresario of surfdom, "but it's not like it was here four years ago when the waves measured eight feet."

Surf was just about all the East Coast Surfing Championships couldn't provide last weekend at Camp Pendleton. It had enthusiastic participants, enthusiastic Jaycees Backers, enthusiastic spectators and even an enthusiastic governor to present the trophies. But when Sunday's finals rolled around, the surf became indifferent.

As one surfer put it, "He who can master the sloop can some day hit the top." But, despite the Atlantic's meager offering, the surfers plunged in for the finals, occasionally ferring out a decent wave and riding it to success.

Gov. Linwood Holton, representative in a sweatshirt bearing, "Lifetime member of Virginia Surfing Association," was on hand to present trophies to surfers from throughout the nation. Before the presentation Sunday afternoon, Gov. Holton found time to discuss surfing with the Australian champion.

Weber, namesake of Dewey Weber Surfboards and a judge at the championships, arrived from Los Angeles Friday for the Championships and was impressed with the Atlantic surf by Saturday morning. Unfortunately, it didn't linger for the finals.

Weber was impressed, however, with the surfing championships. "The East Coast used to be way behind, but now it's producing some of the best surfers in the world."

Weber, who travels throughout the U.S. promoting his surfboards and surfing, called the ECSC the most popular contest on the eastern seaboard. "A lot of that is because of the great backing of the Jaycees," he said.

"Besides that, Virginia is definitely capable of great surfing," said the surfboard dealer. "In waves three feet and larger, it's the form and shape more than the size anyway."

Virginia Beach's contribution to the championships, 19-year-old Bobby Holland, agreed. "The surf wasn't particularly high, but I've ridden worse," he said Sunday after the men's finals. He was one of four in the finals.

More than 1,000 surfing enthusiasts turned out for Sunday's finals.

BADGER & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Capt. H. C. Terry, 3rd Police Precinct C. O., was in Tulsa, Okla., last week attending a meeting of the F. O. P. National Board of Directors. Terry said the F. O. P. Grand Lodge officially went on record opposing police officers becoming members of any union. Terry indicated the F. O. P. took this stand on grounds that a police officer has no place in a union because of endangering the fulfillment of his responsibilities to his community in the event of labor disputes.

Neal Stevenson who has served the City of Virginia Beach this summer in the issuing of identification cards and photos at the 2nd Police Precinct headquarters building will be leaving this Friday, to resume his duties at the T. C. Williams School of Law at the University of Richmond, Va. Stevenson indicated he will be leaving with many picturesque recollections of unusual incidents which he became exposed to in the performance of his duties.

This week witnessed the return of Daniel E. Mitchell to duty with the Virginia Beach police department after a brief absence. Mitchell has taken up duties in the 1st Police Precinct. Gerald G. Franklin, formerly of Lynchburg, Va., is the last addition to the department's duty roster. Franklin has been assigned to the 2nd Police Precinct and is scheduled to enter the Tidewater Police Academy next month.

We understand from highly reliable sources that police officers R. F. Lippert and F. R. Scarborough who were both promoted to the rank of Sgt. this week have received a number of rather unusual and personal items in honor of the achieving of their new status.

The arrival of a Chinese "junk" in Virginia Beach this weekend, purchased as a personal pleasure craft by a resort city resident, resulted in a large number of unusual reactions as it moved through the waters of Broad Bay and Linkhorn Bay, including those of police officer B. C. Zelms and Shore Patrolman CPO Steve Clarke patrolling those waters in the police boat. Zelms said he couldn't believe he was seeing what he thought he was and exclaimed aloud, "That can't be a 'junk' coming in here". Zelms indicated that Clarke and he suddenly became engrossed in an exchange of opinions as to what was, or was not, suddenly bearing down on them until the craft reached a close enough distance that there no longer was any question as to Virginia Beach becoming the home port for what is believed to be the only pleasure craft of its type in the United States.

Ground To Be Broken

Ground breaking ceremonies for a million dollar addition to the Bachelor Officers' Quarters at the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center are scheduled today at 3 p.m.

Rear Admiral Paul E. Seuffer, Commander Atlantic Division, Naval Facilities Engineering Command will join FAAWTC Commanding Officer, Capt. Alwyn Smith, in the ceremonies.

The four-story steel-framed building will feature an elevator and 119 rooms housing 100 men with separate toilet and shower facilities for each man.

Construction on the project began on August 12 and is expected to be completed in September 1971. The contract was awarded to Fox-Sadler Company, Inc.

Tournament Action

Australian Dick Crealy returns a serve from singles winner Ray Ruffels during the doubles finals in the Virginia Beach International Tennis Tournament Sunday. Ruffels and teammate Brian Fairlie went on to beat Crealy and his partner Alan Stone in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. Ruffels defeated Joaquim Loyo-Mayo in the singles finals 6-1, 6-1.

Single Parents Meet Sept. 13

Chaplain Vernon Berg of Oceana Naval Air Station will be guest speaker at the September 13 meeting of Tidewater Chapter, Parents without Partners.

The meeting will be held at the Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Building, 944 Independence Blvd., starting at 8 p.m.

Ray Garland, GOP candidate for the U.S. Senate, addressed local Republicans at a breakfast Friday morning at Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan office on Independence Blvd.

Safety Patrols are 35

WINNER OF TRAFFIC SAFETY POSTER CONTEST

"Dedicated, well trained School Safety Patrols perform an especially valuable function as both population and traffic flow increase," stated Frank W. Cox, Director of Tidewater Automobile Association. The School Safety Patrols now number about one million and serve in more than 50,000 schools. They have been largely responsible for a decrease by over 50% in the pedestrian death rate for school-age children. The AAA Club official continued: "1970 is a special year for us; it marks the fiftieth anniversary of the national partnership between AAA and the School Safety Patrol and the 35th anniversary in our area. We are all very proud to have been associated with these fine young people, who have sacrificed their lives to save their fellow classmates."

He pointed out that the experience in the School Safety Patrol helps to train boys and girls to be responsible leaders and good citizens. He added: "Our School Safety Patrols deserve our complete respect and cooperation."

This traffic safety poster illustrating "Help Your Safety Patrol" was designed by Denise Roe, age 15, a student at Styler Rd. Junior High School in Gahanna, Ohio. It was a first place winner in the AAA National School Traffic Safety Poster Contest, and will be reproduced and distributed throughout local schools as a part of the safety education program of T.A.A.

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, which measures 92,928 feet in length, is the longest structure of its type in the world. Completed in 1964, the Bridge-Tunnel is constructed of two sections, two tunnels, four concrete viaducts and more than 100 miles of beach roadways.

Lt. McAfee Breaks Record

Lt. Larry McAfee of Fleet Composite Squadron FOUR cruised easily to victory in the Interservice Tournament Saturday.

At the close of the contest Lt. McAfee had a ten stroke edge with a total of 278. The separate rounds were 71, 65, 72, and 70. The 65 stroke round was a new record for the Long Beach, Cal. course.

Lt. McAfee is currently qualifying for the United States Amateurs Tournament. He will also represent the services in the Bob Hope Desert Classic to be held next year.

Pungo Pals are Feted

A celebration party was held recently for the Pungo Pals, teenage softball team, who captured the City Championship by defeating the Wipe-Outs by a score of 16-7. They also capped the American League Championship, winding up with a 11-1 record. Awards were presented to each girl for her achievement.

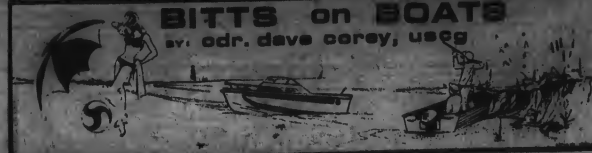

The Pals first started playing together in 1968 as a pre-teen league. They took the league championship that year. They moved up to the teen league in 1969 without as much success. This year, however, they made a great comeback by holding both titles.

The Pungo Pals' coaches were Clyde Hathaway and Melva Riggs. Members of the winning team were: Susan Hathaway, Meg Hathaway, Carol Grimstead, Sherry Singwald, Kathy Swanner, Karen Nichols, Janet Riggs, Karen Bryant, Debbie Hanks, Melissa Canady, Lynn Pepper, Karen Stafford, Binita Ashworth, Laurie Dowdy and Tina Carroll.

Cmdr. Richard S. Hopper relieved Capt. Thomas S. Rogers, Jr. as commander of Attack Carrier Air Wing SIX Wednesday at NAS Oceana.

Attack Carrier Air Wing SIX was originally commissioned at NAS Norfolk as Carrier Air Group SEVENTEEN on Jan. 1, 1943. The Air Wing is presently preparing for its next deployment aboard the USS Franklin D. Roosevelt.

WHAT HAPPENED?

Boating fatalities in Virginia are running appreciably ahead of last year. In fact, as of August 1st, there was 30% more loss of life in boating accidents in 1970 in Virginia than all of last year. Fatalities in Maryland waters are occurring at about the same pace as last year and North Carolina can boast of a slight decrease.

The question is: why is there such an increase in Virginia? The number of boats has increased, but only slightly. There does not appear to be an appreciably greater amount of boating activity. The factors which create the possibility for accidents remain about the same - operators, boats, environment. What happened?

An analysis of the accidents involving fatalities in Virginia boating reveals that the fault lies with the operator in a majority of the cases. Falls overboard accounts for almost half of all deaths. And a very small percentage of those who fell overboard were using life-saving devices. It should be remembered that the operator is the "captain" of the vessel and the safety of his boat and its occupants are his responsibility. It could reasonably be expected that a certain percentage of these accidents are just that - accidents. Perhaps some of them were unavoidable. But the chances are that a great majority of them were preventable and it could have been as the operator extending the duties of his responsibility.

Of course, there are other reasons for boating mishaps than the fault of the operator. There are such causes as fault of the hull, machinery, or equipment. Weather conditions and hazardous waters can play a part in boating accidents. And add to these other faults such as wake of passing vessel, improper water skiing, insecure moorings, fault of other persons as in a collision, natural causes and so on.

Since most of the accidents can be credited to fault of the operator, it must be assumed that either (1) he doesn't care about his boat and its operation, or (2) he doesn't know what he should do to be safe, or at least he doesn't do it. It is not likely that many boat operators fall into the first category, so it must be assumed that much of the problem must be due to ignorance or apathy. It must be assumed that many operators just don't know what they are supposed to know - and they don't do it.

BE SURE: BE SAFE
There are many sources of information on boating safety. As has been pointed out so many times before in this column, there are many formal and informal classes available on the subject. The Coast Guard Auxiliary, the United States Power Squadrons, the Red Cross and other interested organizations offer such courses on an almost regular basis. This is the best way to be prepared. However, if it is not opportune for the boatman to attend these classes, there are a great number of publications available offering a wealth of information on boating.

The Coast Guard distributes many such pamphlets among which are:

-CG-151, EMERGENCY REPAIRS AFLOAT. Because almost half of all search and rescue cases involve breakdowns, this publication was created in an effort to help the boatman help himself. It does not try to replace the owner's manuals, but rather offers basic advice on how to handle simple problems aboard boats before they turn into major distress situations.

-CG-290, PLEASURE CRAFT. This pamphlet explains the Federal laws pertaining to recreational boats and offers a variety of safety and related information.

-CG-340, RECREATIONAL BOATING GUIDE. This 32-page booklet also details the Federal laws, but much more extensively. In addition it offers comprehensive information on boating safety and other items, such as emergencies, the Auxiliary, rules of the road, etc. (Available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402. 45 cents.)

-CG-387, BOATING STATISTICS. This is the annual report by the Coast Guard on boating accidents. The information included is broken down in several ways. (Limited publication and available only from Commandant of the Coast Guard)

"Overloading and Improper Loading" - a flyer emphasizing those dangers and offering preventative actions.

All of these publications are available for the asking except those with specific availability information listed with them. In addition, there are many, many other publications available on the subject of boating distributed by oil companies, boating industry, marine organizations, etc. There is no good reason why a boatman should not be aware of boating information. DID YOU KNOW...

...that if you take anyone with you on a boating trip and if that person pays any of your boating trip expenses, you could be considered as taking passengers for hire?

...that if you are taking passengers for hire, you must be licensed by the Coast Guard? Make safe boating your "cruise - aid". Address any questions to the writer at Commander, Fifth Coast Guard (db), Portsmouth, Virginia 23705.

Capt. Galvani Relieved

Capt. Amedeo H. Galvani was relieved as commanding officer of the Naval Guided Missiles School at Dam Neck Wednesday. His next assignment will be that of commanding officer, U.S. Naval Station, Boston, Mass.

Capt. William M. Cossaboom is new commanding officer of the Guided Missiles School. His last assignment was as Director of the Fleet Ballistic Missiles School at Dam Neck.

Before his assignment at Dam Neck, Capt. Galvani was commanding officer of the USS Bryer Canyon. He has been at Dam Neck since April 4, 1967.

Oceana Command Changes Fri.

A former member of the Joint Strategic Target Planning Staff at Offutt Air Force Base in Omaha will assume command of the Naval Air Station Oceana, Virginia Beach, on Friday, Sept. 4, when Capt. William A. Schroeder, Jr., departs Virginia Beach for the Naval Air Systems Command in Washington, D. C.

Capt. John E. Ford, deputy chief of the single integrated operational plan division for the past two years will be the new commanding officer at NAS Oceana as Capt. Schroeder becomes the director of the financial management division of the Naval Air Systems Command.

Capt. Ford was born in New Orleans, La., but spent most of his childhood in Massachusetts. He received a bachelor's degree from Harvard University where he majored in comparative government. He began his naval career in January 1943 and was designated a naval aviator in June 1944.

Capt. Ford

It was back to school from January to December 1951 when Capt. Ford attended the General Line School. January 1952 through August 1953 found him serving as aircraft weapons officer at the Naval Proving Grounds in Dahlgren, Va.

In April 1966 Capt. Ford became the commanding officer of the USS Caloosahatchie (AO-98) and remained there until September 1967 when he returned to Harvard University. Included among his decorations and medals are: the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medals for World War II and Korea, two Navy unit Commendations, the Pacific Campaign Medal and the Korean Service Medal received for service aboard the first aircraft carrier in combat in the Korean Conflict.

Capt. Ford's wife is the former Jean Arrendale. They have three children: Donna, who is married to Navy Lt. Scott Redd; Ensign Tony Ford, recent academy graduate who is proceeding to flight training and Midshipman John B. Ford, NROTC unit at Duke University.

Vepco gas casing pipe can support 2,100 men like Bill Copeland.

When a natural gas line is put underneath a street or highway, it's subjected to unusual punishment. Heavy trucks pound across it hundreds of times a day.

As protection against the shake, rattle and roll going on above, Vepco puts an 8-inch gas line inside a 12-inch casing pipe which is so strong it can support 35,000 pounds, or 17½ tons, per square inch. Pipes with muscles! (The gas line itself is just as strong, too.)

Which means that no matter what comes down the pike, the gas line bringing natural gas to you is virtually unbreakable.

Man and Wife Strangled, Autopsy Shows

One man arrested, second sought in murder of couple

By LES LEHIGH

The bodies of a Virginia Beach couple were found Tuesday afternoon floating in the Chesapeake Bay off Little Creek after they apparently had been strangled to death in what has developed into one of the most bizarre cases in resort city police annals.

Authorities said the bodies of Samuel Willard Jones, 52, and his wife, Jane, 49, were found by an unidentified fisherman, in 20 feet of water less than a mile north of the Little Creek jetties. They were fastened together with a length of boat anchor chain, police said.

A spokesman at the State Medical Examiners' Office in Norfolk, where the bodies were taken for identification and an autopsy to determine cause of death, said Wednesday both Jones and his wife had died of strangulation.

According to the medical examiners' report Mrs. Jones had been strangled with two handkerchiefs and a boat pennant, while Jones had been strangled with a length of 1/8-inch parachute cord. The report also said that the state of decomposition indicated the couple died sometime Friday night.

Positive identification of Mrs. Jones, according to the report, was made through personal belongings and scars on her body. Jones was identified through a check of dental records.

The Jones' had been missing from their Lynnhaven Colony home since late Friday afternoon when they were reportedly seen leaving with two men believed to have been interested in purchasing the couple's 28-foot sailing trimaran, "Skat".

The Jones' and these prospective buyers reportedly boarded the craft at a nearby mooring and moved into the bay several hours before a severe storm hit the area.

Records at 5th Coast Guard District Headquarters in Portsmouth, show receipt of a phone call about 1 a.m. Saturday from a neighbor of the couple to report that the trimaran had not returned.

The Coast Guard cutter Point Huron began searching the area near the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel in hopes of locating the "Skat", and aircraft at the Elizabeth City, Coast Guard Station were alerted to join the search at daybreak.

Officials said the wreckage of the craft was found at about 8 a.m. Saturday on rocks of the bridge-tunnel third island, approximately 30 minutes after pieces of boat wreckage were spotted from a helicopter.

"The Bureau of Customs, which has responsibility in great part for enforcing the 'Neutrality Act' is interested in confirming the allegations and is endeavoring to identify the persons purported to be involved."

"The Customs Agency Service is coordinating its investigation with the local office of the FBI, U.S. Coast Guard, and the Virginia Beach Police Department."

"Thus far no information has been developed to substantiate the report that explosives were loaded aboard a particular vessel at the location in question."

Shortly after the discovery of the bodies of Samuel and Jane Jones, Virginia Beach Detective Division Sgt. R. F. Buzby and Det. Allen Sinclair travelled to Norfolk in search of Woody and Tillman for questioning in connection with the deaths.

Buzby and Sinclair were joined by a member of the Norfolk Police Detective Division near Woody's home in Norfolk at about 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Authorities said Woody, 40, of the 100 block of W. 80th Street in Norfolk, was arrested at his home shortly before midnight on a warrant charging him with the murder of Samuel W. Jones.

Holiday Crash Raises Toll

A triple fatality accident during the waning hours of Labor Day Monday in the 2300 block of East Indian River Road raised the Virginia Beach highway death toll for the year to 24.

Police identified those fatally injured as Percy L. Harrison,

23, of East Indian River Road, driver of the car, John R. Woodhouse, 24, Norfolk, and Johnny Snowden, 18, East Indian River Road. Officials also said Charlie Snowden, Jr., 27, East Indian River Road, received multiple body bruises and lacerations and internal injuries. He was listed as being in poor condition at Virginia Beach General Hospital.

Witnesses said the car careened off the roadway at a high rate of speed and slammed into a tree. According to authorities Harrison's body was pinned in the wreckage of the car and had to be pried free.

Callis said he was pleased with the idea that he was joining a relatively young group of councilmen, since the future of the Beach youth is of great concern to him. "The greatest problem this city has is with its young," he said. "We have to listen a little more carefully to the youth and see what they can provide."

The biggest problem the youth in Virginia Beach has is drugs, and solution lies in education, Callis said. Another (continued on page 6)

Open House Invites Residents

The Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center is planning an open house for all residents of the area to acquaint them with the center and its staff.

The open house will be from 1-4 p.m. Friday, Sept. 11 in the Center's new building at 1876 Wildwood Drive, just across First Colonial Road from the General Hospital of Virginia Beach. Ample parking is available.

The Center is the only city/state supported mental health clinic available to Virginia Beach residents. It has as its purpose the diagnosis and treatment of all emotional problems and mental illnesses. The all-purpose psychiatric out-patient clinic is supported financially by city, state and federal tax funds; by patient fees and by the contributions of local individuals and civic organizations. It also serves the Eastern Shore Counties of Accomack and Northampton.

Patients are referred by doctors, ministers, schools, courts, social and welfare agencies, parents and relatives and by the patients themselves. The Center operates on an appointment basis weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Emergencies are seen at any time.

The Planning Commission declared a 90-day moratorium on billboards along the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway Tuesday until guidelines can be drawn for a billboard policy along the route. Seven applications for billboards along the expressway were deferred from the docket following an informal request by the City Council that the Planning Department draw up a policy statement for the use.

But before the request was made, Council approved four requests for billboard construction along the road.

The seven applications were made by Atlantic Displays, Inc.; John and Kathryn Mote; and Turner Advertising Co. The commission approved a request by the Rev. John Gimenez and the Rock Church to construct a new church in Kempsville Colony, but placed severe restrictions on its uses. Some area residents voiced opposition to the church's proposed location because the Rev. Mr. Gimenez operates a drug rehabilitation center as well as a church in Norfolk, and they feared he might add another rehabilitation center to the Virginia Beach church. But Gimenez told the commission he doesn't intend to operate a rehabilitation center at the church, since the Proclaim Association operates a farm for that purpose.

Appearing before the commission on Gimenez's behalf was the Rev. John Jordan of Callee Episcopal Church, who told the group that although he was not in agreement with some of Gimenez's methods, "before he came I had no place to send my drug users, not one single place."

Rev. Jordan pleaded with the commission not to place restrictions on Gimenez's ministry, saying that one-tenth of his ministry was done in church on Sunday, the rest of it taking place in small groups helping people as Gimenez does.

But despite Gimenez's reassurances and Jordan's pleadings, the commission approved the application postponed earlier, with three exceptions:

*That the facility would not be used to provide drug rehabilitation in any manner.

*That the facility would not be used to house drug users.

*That no mass buying of drug users from the Proclaim center would be allowed except for attendance at church services.

In other matters, the Commission:

*Approved the application for a change of zoning and a use permit by J. T. Crosswhite to construct 16 efficiency apartments on Arctic Avenue near Norfolk Avenue.

*Denied an application for a change of zoning and a use permit to construct a gasoline supply station on the West Side of Holly Road south of Laskin Road.

*Approved an application by John and Mary Vogel for a use permit to construct a dog house on the North side of London Bridge Road west of Oceana Blvd.

*Approved an application by Bernard Kroil, Al Kroil and Ruth Cohen for a use permit and change of zoning to construct a gasoline supply station on the southeast corner of South Lynnhaven and Holland roads.

*Approved an application by J.D.C. and D.K. Rochester for a use permit to construct 20 townhouses and 96 mobile homes south of Lakeside Road on the Kings Arms Apartments.

QUESTION: My husband and I are getting a divorce, and after a full year I am still unable to feel anything for anyone else. It is said that Virgo's have only one true love in their life. Is this correct? Signed Virgo.

ANSWER: The fact that Virgo's are only supposed to have one great love in their life is another of those myths about astrology that has no basis in fact. You can dismiss it completely, I assure you.

The reason that you are getting a divorce is that when the sun (in your horoscope) moved to a good aspect with the Moon (ruling the emotions) you were attracted to one of the opposite sex. The most natural thing one can imagine if one understands the nature of the energy emitted by the planets involved and the workings of astrology. It seems to me, after years of seeing this sort of thing happen, that it would be impossible to prevent a person from "falling in love" under this type of aspect. I have often warned couples that if they married under this sort of aspect, it would not last, but they do it anyway.

You need not be concerned about not being able to feel affection for someone at this time. The planet Mercury, has moved by progression, to a conjunction with the planet Neptune. Mercury governs the mind and mental processes and Neptune, as I have stated many times in this column, tends to confuse or cloud over anything with which it comes in contact. It is reasonable then, is it not, that at this time you are not able to sort out your feelings or be able to express them.

You will surely find someone in the future, and when this aspect passes, you will be able to feel more than you have felt before. That is if you have learned from this experience. This is a certainty. You are a person capable of a great deal of affection and one day you will surely meet someone and this experience will be only a dim memory. The problem is that we want to hang on to the things that give us security and protection. This is not love, but more possessiveness. To love someone is to want their well being more than our own desires, even if this hurts, which it almost always does.

If you can let this experience go and look to the future you will be able to love freely in the future, but if you try to drag the past with you, it will spoil any future happiness you may find. This is the reason that there are so many bitter people in their later years. It is impossible to make someone continue to love us if they are not able to do so. We should not take the fact that they change, as we all do, as a personal failure. But we do.

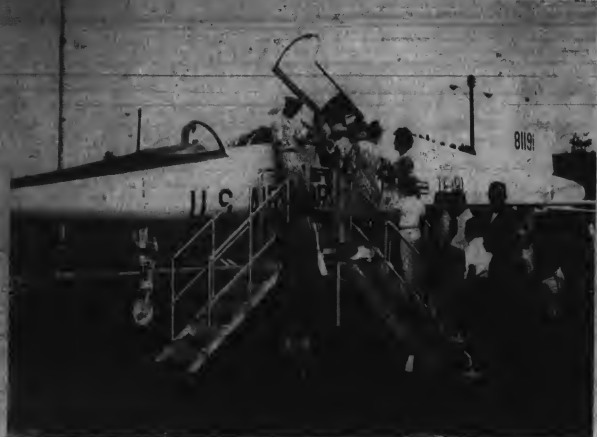

I know it is natural to want some consolation at times like this, but the real and lasting consolation, comes through understanding. People change, time moves forward, life is a moving experience, living is filled with both joy and sorrow. If I could write like Gibran I might say that "Your joy is your sorrow unmasked".

You are one of those rare and fortunate persons who is capable of a great deal of affection and you surely will feel a strong love again. It would appear that you will finally find happiness with someone older than yourself, since Saturn (governing those older than the person) is stationed in the seventh house, the house of marriage. I would advise that you not seek too hard for someone to love, because when that person arrives into your life you will not have to seek. In fact, if I am right, after studying this for years, you will not be able to escape.

The new Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center will hold open to the public Friday.

A full-size T-38 Talon, like the one above, will be displayed at the Greater Tidewater Fair on Sept. 26-Oct. 3. The T-38 was the world's first supersonic jet trainer.

Record-Setting Jet Displayed At Fair

An Air Force aircraft that set four world records in 1962 the T-38 Talon, will be on display at the Greater Tidewater Fair from September 26-October 3. The fair itself will open with a preview on Sept. 24.

The Talon, the Air Force's twin-engine supersonic advanced pilot trainer, performs as well as many of this nation's front line combat aircraft. It achieves speeds over 600 miles per hour, has a ceiling above 55,000 feet and a range of more than 1,150 miles.

In its 1962 record breaking performance, the T-38 rose from a standing start to 3,000 meters (about two miles) in slightly over 35 seconds; 6,000 meters in 51 seconds; 9,000 meters in 64 seconds; and 12,000 meters in 95 seconds.

The T-38 is designed for flight training in the following categories: supersonic flight, take-off and landing techniques, multijet engine operation, night flying, instrument instruction and cross-country navigation. It fills the gap between the Air Force's primary trainer, the T-37, and the century series fighters and other supersonic aircraft.

The Talon is powered by two high thrust-to-weight turbojet engines equipped with afterburners. It is capable of successful mission performance with only one engine operating.

The T-38 cockpit is designed with a high degree of visibility for both student and instructor and is completely pressurized. It includes a zero altitude rocket-type pilot ejection system.

The F-5 Freedom Fighter is a light tactical fighter version of the T-38. It is flown by the South Vietnamese Air Force and more than a dozen other Free World nations.

The exhibit, sponsored by the Greater Tidewater Fair in cooperation with the U.S. Air Force will be open to the public at no charge from 3 p.m. to closing daily.

The fairgrounds is located off Va. 615 in Pungo.

Sailor Charged

Richard Carl Denney, 20, of Dayton, Ohio, is scheduled to appear in Municipal Court September 28 charged with the murder of Mrs. Nellie M. White in a Virginia Beach motel.

Officials said Denney was taken into custody shortly after the body of the woman was found in a field a short distance from Dayton. The body, according to officials, was clad in a nightgown when found.

Authorities said Mrs. White, 59, of Philhower Drive, was strangled to death in a room of the El Camino Motel, on Diamond Springs Road during the weekend of August 29 and 30.

Officials said the body was placed in the trunk of the woman's car and driven to Dayton. The body was discovered on Tuesday, Sept. 1 and Denney was taken into custody on Wednesday Sept. 2. He was returned to Virginia Beach late Friday, Sept. 4.

Authorities said at the time of Denney's arrest he was listed as being absent without leave from the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base where he was attached to the USS Suffolk County.

Judge P. B. White in setting Denney's trial date represented John N. Parker to represent Denney in legal proceedings.

At last reports Denney remained in custody at the Virginia Beach City Jail, and as yet there had been no request for the setting of bond.

MILITARY JUSTICE IS TO JUSTICE AS MILITARY MUSIC IS TO MUSIC, by Robert Sherrill, New York, Harper & Row, 1970 $6.95

The subject of Robert Sherrill's book should be particularly interesting to a nation which has, through the notoriety of such cases as the Pueblo affair and the My Lai incident, been made increasingly aware of the inadequacies of military justice.

Sherrill supports his condemnation of the system by concentrating on three contemporary trials: the Presidio mutiny trials, the court martial of Captain Howard Levy and the court martial of Lt. Henry Howe.

The Presidio affair involved the killing of a prisoner by a guard and the subsequent protest by 27 other prisoners resulting in the grievous charge of mutiny. All 27 men were court-martialed and the first three tried were sentenced to 15, 14 and 16 years. The sentences were later shortened to two years. Sherrill illustrates the grossly inadequate living conditions in the San Francisco stockade and suggests that the commanding general was indeed making an example of the 27 men and disregarding their rights.

The author cites another example in the court martial of Captain Howard Levy in 1967 for refusing to teach medicine to Green Berets and for "conduct unbecoming an officer" in criticizing the Vietnam War. Sherrill points out similarities between the Levy case and the Dreyfus affair: "the real likeness between the two cases, the striking repetition of history, was in the role that society's view of militarism played in the two trials, and in the two trials."

In 1965 Lt. Henry Howe was court-martialed and sentenced to one year for carrying a sign referring to "Johnson's fascist aggression in Vietnam." Sherrill points out that Howe's participation did not violate army regulations. He was off duty and in civilian clothes. But the author speculates that the reason for the conviction "lay in the fact that at that time the antiwar ferment was reaching its first great crest in the nation."

Robert Sherrill is the Washington editor of "The Nation" and a contributor to various other magazines. In MILITARY JUSTICE... he is admittedly partisan, nevertheless all readers - military and civilian alike - will find the book revealing and oftentimes shocking look at our system of military justice. Williams displays 'back room' books.

'Back Room' Is Safe for All

There is a new bookstore in Virginia Beach, THE BOOK BARN and it may prove to be a unique experience for book buyers. The reason for this is that the owner and operator, Raymond Williams, says he is planning a "back room."

Sounds ominous doesn't it? Williams assures the public that it is on the up and up, however. When asked to explain he stated that what he had in mind was a used book department, and the only available space was in the back room of his present location at 1615 Pacific Ave. He said that there were a lot of people who purchased books and for one reason or another did not wish to keep them. Many people read very fast, and in a day or two a book was of no further use to them, so Williams decided that it might be a good idea to have a department for those people. "I might save them a lot of money," said Williams.

Williams said that he is also planning to carry a full line of new books as well. "I plan to carry books on every subject but there are many books that are not available at the beach, such as books on unusual subjects like UFO's and Astrology. "Another service

I plan," he added, "and as far as I know it is not available to the residents of the beach, is a special order department. We will order any book, from any publisher, at the regular price, plus postage. This way we will have every book in circulation, available to our customers.

"The quarters are now a little small, but we hope to find a bigger building after the first of the year. So far we have a fairly good stock of books on everything from cooking to skin diving and more are coming every day."

Veteran Figures Released Six Dropped

There are 14,870 veterans in Virginia Beach and 540,000 in Virginia according to Veterans Administration figures released today based on America's 27.3 million former servicemen as of the beginning of 1970, according to the director of the Roanoke VA Regional Office. According to the latest available figures, some 1940 Virginia Beach and 71,000 Virginia veterans were in service during the Vietnam era—that is, after Aug. 4, 1964. World War II veterans make up the largest group with 6,600 from Virginia Beach and 297,000 from Virginia. Korean Conflict veterans number 4,290 in Virginia Beach and 127,000 in Virginia. Some 1640 Virginia Beach and 60,000 state veterans saw military service only between the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam era (Feb. 1, 1955-Aug. 4, 1964).

Charges were dropped in the drug-related cases of six of eight persons who appeared before Judge P. B. White in Municipal Court proceedings last Friday.

Laurel Ann Layman, 20, of McLean, Va., was charged with possession of LSD. The charge was not prosecuted. Charges were dismissed in the case of Robert R. Finn, 22, of East Piney Branch Drive, and Richard E. McCallum, 16, of 24 1/2 Street. Both men had been charged with possession of marijuana.

There was no prosecution of charges in the trials of Louis J. Mosconi, Jr., 20, of Chester, Va.; Sherry Ann Doyle, 21, of Richmond and Stanley D. Childs Jr., 20, of Petersburg, Va., all of whom had been charged with possession of marijuana.

Mary D. Buchanan, 22, of Piney Branch Drive, received a suspended 10 days jail sentence following her conviction of the charge of disorderly conduct. She was originally charged with possession of hashish, which was not prosecuted during court proceedings.

The case of Richard H. Callis, Jr., 18, attached to the USS Orion, was continued generally. He entered court charged with the attempted sale of marijuana to a police officer.

Best Reports Record Year

Best products has announced record sales and earnings for its fiscal year ending June 27, 1970. Sales increased 44% over the 48-week fiscal year 1969, and earnings were up 54% from the same period.

Sales rose from $13,767,811 to $19,806,392, while earnings after taxes increased to $558,235 from $362,685. Outstanding shares increased from 500,000 to 675,000 by the end of fiscal 1970, due to a successful public offering in March, 1970. Earnings per share, after deducting 22,000 paid to holders of preferred stock, were up from $0.70 to $0.79 on a fully diluted basis. Computed on the basis of average shares outstanding, earnings rose from $0.71 to $0.97.

City Ranks Fifth In Employment Gain

Virginia Beach ranked fifth in the Virginia counties and cities in increase of business and industrial employment from March 1968 to March 1969, the U. S. Bureau of the Census reported in its publication "1969 County Business Patterns, Virginia."

Fairfax County was first followed by Richmond, Norfolk and Roanoke. Virginia Beach was followed by Martinsville and Arlington County.

The number of business and industrial employees reported by County Business Patterns in Fairfax County in March 1969 was 44,972, an increase of more than 7,600 over a year earlier. Richmond City which led in total business and industrial employment with 140,640 in 1969, showed a gain of more than 3,700 over 1968. Norfolk City with 88,836, gained more than 3,300. The cities of Roanoke and Virginia Beach had increases of 1,980 and 1,970 respectively over the previous year. Martinsville City gained 1,871 and Arlington County 1,600 over 1968.

For Virginia as a whole, business and industrial employment amounted to 1,090,443 in March 1969, an increase of 4 percent over the March 1968 employment of 1,043,900. Taxable payrolls in the first quarter 1969 totaled $1.4 billion, 11 percent higher than the $1.3 billion reported for the comparable quarter of 1968.

County Business Patterns, issued annually by the Bureau of the Census, includes a volume for each State plus a U. S. Summary. Each State report presents State, County and city figures on number of employees, first quarter payroll and number of reporting units in each employment size group for approximately 500 kinds of business and industry. Similar figures in less detail are reported also for the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas of Lynchburg, Newport News, Hampton, Norfolk-Portsmouth, Richmond, Roanoke and Washington, D. C. (D. C.-Md.-Va.). Appendix tables provide total Federal civilian employment and payroll data for each State and by county for most States. Information is based principally on records of the Social Security Administration and for the United States as a whole includes about three-fourths of all employees, omitting those in State and local government, domestic service, and agriculture.

"1969 County Business Patterns, Virginia," is priced at $1.25 and the entire set of State volumes plus the U. S. Summary is priced at $50.70. Single State reports or complete sets may be ordered from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402, or from the field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce, Federal Building, 400 North 8th St., Richmond 23240.

Car Dealership Opens

The long-awaited Porsche Audi dealership in Virginia Beach area opened last week, according to Fred C. Packer, general manager of Hilltop Porsche Audi.

Located on Laskin Road, adjacent to Hilltop Volkswagen, the newly constructed automobile dealership is situated on a one and one-half acre lot. The 7,200 square-foot structure uses long-span roof beams, freeing the interior from supporting columns. The building incorporates a three-point interior design system, giving customers quick and comfortable access to the sales, service, and parts departments.

Service facilities include a fully equipped workshop, featuring five workstands and four hydraulic hoists. The parts department's inventory includes parts and accessories for both product lines.

General manager of the newly formed company is Fred C. Packer, a native of Clinton, N.C. He most recently served as business manager for Hilltop Volkswagen. Packer, his wife, and three children, reside in Virginia Beach.

In announcing the department heads for the new dealership, Packer said that he sought men of broad automotive experience. They include Gerald Beasley, appointed sales manager. Beasley has served as sales manager of other retail automobile agencies in the area.

Service Manager Thomas Mooney of Virginia Beach. Mooney was previously service manager for an area Volkswagen dealership.

Edward Scott, who has been appointed parts manager and has served in the same capacity in other auto dealerships for many years.

Packer said the company's service department will be open from 8:00 to 5:30, Monday through Friday, and will be closed Saturdays. No evening workshop hours are planned.

The sales department will be open from 8:30 to 9:00 in the evening, Monday through Friday, and from 8:30 to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday.

Several Going To Campbell

Several Virginia Beach students will be attending Campbell College, Bales Creek, N.C., in the fall, their first term beginning Sept. 8. The partial listing of those students accepted at Campbell was released recently by Robert King, director of admissions.

Two graduates of Frank W. Cox High School entering Campbell are Katherine Ann Hostetler and Raymond Christopher Allen. Miss Hostetler is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome K. Hostetler of Wolfshire Crescent. Allen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Allen of Cape Henry Dr.

Gwen Anita Henley is entering Campbell from Kellam High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Henley, Jr.

Ernest Cecil Seiderman, Jr., is transferring to Campbell from Princess Anne High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Seiderman, Sr., of West Little Neck Rd.

Local Lab Accredited

The General Hospital of Virginia Beach pathology laboratory under the direction of John Jay Krueger, M. D., has been awarded a certificate of accreditation by the College of American Pathologists, a medical specialty organization of more than 5,000 pathologists.

President C. A. McWhorter, M. D., of the College, said that the laboratory received a three-year certification by the College Commission on Inspection and Accreditation. The laboratory successfully met the College's standards of laboratory performance and the criteria of an intensive on-site inspection by an examiner of the college.

"This accreditation," emphasized Doctor McWhorter, "reflects credit to the institution and means assurance to patients and physicians of the accuracy and precision of the laboratory's services."

The inspection and Accreditation program of the Chicago-based College is recognized as one of the most outstanding medical peer evaluation systems in the world. Its goal is to promote the best possible laboratory performance via a program which examines and evaluates all phases of a laboratory's operation.

Good Luck, Council

Eleven Virginia Beach men will next Monday assume the role of councilman. On their shoulders will rest the responsibility of guiding this large, sprawling city, with all its many faces, to its full and deserved potential. Five of these men—Dr. Clarence Holland, Reld Ervin, Floyd Waterfield, Donald Rhodes and the newly appointed Robert M. Callis Jr.—are stepping into public office for the first time.

With the exception of Callis, who was selected Tuesday by the other 10 council members to fill the vacancy left by the death of Frank S. Tarrall Jr., the novices were the voters' favorites. All four were leading vote-getters in the June election with Ervin and Waterfield taking the most votes throughout the city. All of the newcomers are young men, ambitious for their city and communities, and possibly for themselves. They bring to council the "new blood" needed to oil the wheels of the city's progress.

It is well for Virginia Beach to have this new enthusiasm on City Council. But let their enthusiasm not override their good judgment and the judgment of the more experienced members of council. This is not to imply that the newcomers are to be guided, or influenced, by the decisions of other representatives. They, of course, must stand on their own two feet. But, as in all new jobs, there is much to be learned from the "oldtimers"; there is much to be said for experience.

Eleven very capable men make up city council. It is hoped in the months and years to come they will stand firm in what they believe is right, even in the face of strong opposition. It is hoped they will have the wisdom to make decisions most beneficial to the city, not only financially but culturally, environmentally, and progressively. It is hoped they will give unselfishly of their talents for the betterment of Virginia Beach and that they will, at all times, place the city and its people above self. It was for these qualities that the voters placed them in control of the municipal government.

These men—Holland, Ervin, Waterfield, Rhodes and Callis, plus the six incumbents Earl Tebault, J. Curtis Payne, Robert B. Cromwell, Murray Malbon, George Ferrell and Frank A. Dusch—have a grave responsibility, a mammoth job, often a thankless one. As a new council, and as a political mixture, they will be under close scrutiny. Their terms already promise to be lively and interesting, perhaps even entertaining. We wish them well.

More Enlightenment Needed

Modern man seems to be beset with a total lack of concern for his fellow man. At least this is what the sociologists, psychiatrists and others who know claim is one of society's most devastating ills. This has been evident in Virginia Beach at least twice in recent weeks... first when citizens opposed a psychiatric clinic near Virginia Beach General Hospital and second when they rose up in arms over a drug rehabilitation center in Kempsville.

These are supposedly modern times, and this supposedly is a society of advanced, intelligent human beings. The days of chaining the mentally ill to their beds or locking them in cellular are part of our tragic past. As the cave man learned to cope with the advancements of fire so have we learned to cope with the advancements of medical technology.

Yet in these enlightened times, irate citizens opposed a proposed psychiatric clinic on the grounds that it would be detrimental to their property values and it would be hazardous to them personally. Some even commented that they didn't want crazy people running through their neighborhoods. These may be enlightened times but these hardly sound like enlightened people.

Tuesday Rev. John Gimenez, praised for his efforts in the Proclaim drug rehabilitation center, faced the same type of opposition in getting the approval of the Planning Commission to build a church in Kempsville. Citizens were afraid the Rev. Mr. Gimenez might operate a center similar to Proclaim in connection with the church. The commission approved the church but placed severe restrictions on its approval to make sure no drug activity could possibly be held in the church.

The drug problem is relatively new and it is understandable that there are many who do not understand its extent or the needs it demands. But to thwart efforts in helping those in trouble is little less than sadistic selfishness.

There are hundreds in this community suffering from mental and emotional illness. They can be helped, and cured, with proper care. The clinic which Council approved, will provide this. There are untold numbers of young people suffering from drug abuse and more than one center is needed to help them. It is hoped that those citizens who feel so strongly about allowing such facilities in this community will never know the torment generated by problems they serve.

Commands Police

To the Editor:

On Friday evening my husband, two daughters and I went for a walk along the boardwalk and Atlantic Ave. at the beach. As a result of that walk we wish to let you know how we feel about our beach policemen.

The number of young people massed along the streets have been of some amusement to us. Other than occasionally being a nuisance when we try to enter some shops, they don't seem to bother anyone. (I'm sure they feel they are just having a good time at a groovy vacation spot.) We did, however, detect a real mood of subtle hostility toward the police. We walked for about 3 blocks between 23rd and 19th or 20th Streets along with one of the police officers. In those few blocks he was called numerous degrading names. Several little types went out of their way to step in front of him to block his path. He remained polite and at one point even said "Good evening Gentlemen" in response to a derogatory greeting.

We've read and heard about police harassment of these kids but from what we observed of the policemen at the beach we think it is exaggerated. The amazing thing to us is the lack of real trouble considering the number of kids on the streets. This I'm sure is due at least partly to the restraint shown by our beach police force. I really do believe the trouble makers among the youth at the beach are a minority. I'm quite proud of your staff for their dignity in handling those few. Mrs. Harriet Marshall Virginia Beach

Clean-Up Motels

To the Editor:

A few days ago, I read that signs were going to be placed on our new beautiful Virginia Beach Highway. What a shame it's the only place left that looks decent at Virginia Beach. Beautiful Motels, along the boardwalk, Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Avenue now look like a slum area with clothes lines, all kind of towels, bathing suits, bed linens, hanging over the patios, from one end of the beach at 36th Street to 40th Street.

Why should this be allowed? When we had small cottages along the Ocean Front, we took pride in taking a walk along the Oceanfront.

Tourists who have been coming here year after year are not happy with the way things look now. John M. Jones

Open Letter of Thanks

To the Editor:

We wish to take this opportunity to thank the residents, vacationers, and the business people in Virginia Beach for their wonderful and enthusiastic support of our recent First Annual Summer Antiques Show and Sale held at the Alan B. Shepard Civic Center.

To Mr. Samuel Scott, Director of the Civic Center, his capable assistant, Mr. James Mathias, and the staff, our warmest appreciation for all their efforts on our behalf. The

The Planning Commission is to be congratulated for its decision Tuesday to hold up on issuing billboard permits along the Virginia Beach Expressway. Such action came a little too late to prevent Council from approving four signs last month but at least it has delayed, hopefully indefinitely, a decision on seven others.

Council obviously created a fire-spitting monster when it allowed those initial billboards along the Expressway. It merely opened the gates to a flood of outdoor advertising in an area previously restricted to such unsightliness. The four applicants who "made the grade" on that first go-around should thank their lucky stars because surely Council will be a bit more conservative in future decisions of this type.

And last, but not least, a special thank you to you two of your local residents, Mr. and Mrs. William Colburn, one of our participating dealers, and more importantly, good friends, for their advice and assistance in spreading the word about our show to all of Virginia Beach and the surrounding areas.

We eagerly look forward to our return next year for our Second Annual Summer Antiques Show and Sale at the Dome. Bev and Sig Muskat MUNDERLY ANTIQUES SHOWS

Probably the best plan would be a statewide one in which all needed books were free to those in public schools.

However, a rental plan which would possibly reduce the cost of books would be better than buying each year and having to keep some that cannot be resold at the end of a year. A few years ago schools in Charlottesville began a rental plan for books. It seemed to work very well.

Buying books is quite an expense at the beginning of each year, especially for those families with more than one or two children in school. This is an added burden for low-income families.

It would be a fine accomplishment if a positive response to this survey could bring about the needed change in supplying books for Virginia Beach schools. Katherine M. Crumpton

Opposes Rentals

To the Editor:

The method of financing public school books has been discussed by many and often has become a political issue. Many have been given a false impression in that they believe the can be absorbed or passed on to someone else. There is really no such thing as "free textbooks." The public we citizens, pay directly by purchase, or indirectly by taxes when they are furnished. The Sun Survey has suggested renting textbooks, with the implication that money might be saved. If money is saved by the buyer, then this has to be made up by the school administration, which leads back to more operating costs and more taxes.

The most satisfactory system still is individual purchase and ownership. We always take better care of those things we pay for ourselves and call our own. This system also eliminates the arbitrary issue of "used" textbooks in which many students or parents are not satisfied with the condition of the books issued or rented to them.

When a student or parent purchases his own textbook he has the option of buying a "used" book from a former user or the school. If he is not satisfied with the condition or price, he can buy a new one and then resell it if he desires. For those who can not afford to buy textbooks there are provisions under welfare to provide them. J. E. Weirich

Objects to Story

To the Editor:

In the light of your previous assertions on the need for law and order at the Beach, I find it inconceivable that you would give publicity to such a disgusting event as that which received prime space in this week's Sun.

I refer to the article and picture of the Alton youngsters protest against parental discipline. How proud and important you have made them feel! How repugnant of you to have done so!

It is my opinion that with this article you have done much to glorify and advance delinquency. How much better for all concerned had this incident been ignored except for a little parental discipline where it was most needed. Billie Marshall

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavelle, Ph.D.

It is time for my annual "POTATO HEAD" award. In case you don't know what a Potato Head is, it is someone whose thoughts and ideas are soft, shallow and not too intelligent. You city people might not know about Potato Heads but the good folks down on the farm know about them.

This is a very difficult award to make. Our good country is blessed with a fine crop of soft headed leaders. Such people are given excellent exposure by the liberal news media. This flock has its mushy half baked thoughts well publicized.

My list of possible contenders runs into the hundreds. It reads like the "Who's Who" of the liberal establishment. The award could well have gone to Dr. James Allen, the former U. S. commissioner of education. Dr. Allen is known as "Mr. Busing" and is an over zealous advocate of compulsory busing of students to achieve a racial balance in our schools.

It was difficult not to pick Justice William O. Douglas as the winner. Even if you overlook his history of potato headed actions, you have to consider his new book "Points of Rebellion" as a master piece of half baked thinking. It is not often we see a Supreme Court Justice coming out for violence and revolution.

Serious consideration had to be given to Senator Edward Kennedy, the hero of Chappaquiddick Island. His antics always seem to indicate a potato flavor and are founded in mushy thinking.

One must not overlook the remarks of Mayor John Lindsay of New York who said: "The ones I have unending admiration for are the guys who say, I simply will not serve in the Army of the United States in Viet Nam and I am willing to take the consequences for it. 'These are the guys who are heroic.' Such patriotism is astounding.

The hypocrisy of such experts as Senator Birch Bayh can not be overlooked. While the Senator was leveling charges of "Mediocrity" at Judge Harold Carswell, it was brought out that the Senator was one of a dozen to flunk his bar exam in 1960 while still in law school.

The "Flip-Flop" experts should not be overlooked. The turnabout that political chameleon Charles Goodell did when he went from a conservative up state Congressman in New York to a Senator deserves special consideration. To go from conservative to super liberal overnight just to be re-elected takes real character.

For sheer "Potato Head" thinking I take my hat off to San Bernardino, Calif. municipal court Judge Theodore G. Krumm. This good judge has the makings of one of the real soft fuzzy legal thinkers of our times. His recent ruling in the "Diaper Sanctity Case" must go down in legal history as a milestone in half baked thinking.

It seems that the mother of a nine month old baby was arrested in San Bernardino for narcotics possession when sheriff's deputies found heroin in her baby's diaper. The good Judge decided that since the baby didn't give its consent to being searched, it was unconstitutional and thus he dismissed the case against its mother.

It would seem that the safest place in the country to hide narcotics is in the diaper of a baby too young to give its consent to being searched.

The decision as to the top "Potato Head" in the country was a hard one. With such Senators as J. W. Fulbright, George McGovern, Mark Hatfield, Alan Cranston and Harold Hughes making such mushy statements they must be considered.

Washington is just full of potential candidates and many state capitals throughout the land have their share. The decision is indeed a hard one.

Taking all points into consideration, I must go with SENATOR EDMUND S. MUSKIE, of the great state of Maine, as the top "POTATO HEAD" of the year. To begin with, the Senator is from a potato state so I guess that gives him an advantage. The people of Maine can be somewhat excused for the Muskies Maine they suffer. Muskies is something like the one eyed person being king in the land of the blind. In the case of Muskies, Maine is just about blind.

It was difficult deciding which instances should be cited as the reason for my selection. It could be when the Senator referred to the draft dodgers and deserters who flocked to Canada as "These people are not traitors. They are patriots." It could be his phony "Mr Clean" image while, according to Ralph Nader, doing nothing to prevent pollution in his home state of Maine. I could go on and on. They all add up to the making Senator Muskies my "POTATO HEAD" of the year.

One of the rewarding things about this SUN Survey column is that it offers readers a chance to voice an opinion on topics which affect them.

Very soon now the city's refuse disposal project will have reached capacity and a new one will get under way. Mount Trashmore, as the press signed it in the beginning, is a most unique project and has received national acclaim for its effectiveness.

The city will eventually convert this 60-foot mound into an amphitheatre to seat some 10,000 persons. But there are those who fear that the name "Mount Trashmore" would not be conducive to good public relations in promoting a recreation project.

The name "Mount Virginia Beach" has been suggested but the citizens of this city may have other ideas which should be aired. Now is the time.

Patriotism Revived

Flying unknowingly, it was just another day for this flag.

Text and photographs
by James Turner

...while on Atlantic Avenue another sort was being immortalized.

Patriotism is something that's not too fashionable any more, and for just that reason the Virginia Beach Jaycees sought Saturday to put the city and its residents back on the "Best Dressed List" with its Patriotism Day celebration.

Backed by military bands from the three services and honor guards with unfurled flags and shining brass, Col. Lowell R. Hutson, Fort Story's commanding officer, was the gathering's main speaker at the Norwegian Lady site. "In years past we were not afraid to fly our flag with pride and to realize that, although most Americans take their freedom lightly, there are those who know it doesn't come easily," he said.

Emphasizing pride in the symbol of freedom, Col. Hutson said that there was a time when flag waving was not considered unsophisticated as it is today. "We seem less patriotic and less willing to display our flag than in past years," he said.

Addressing the crowd of young and old alike, Col. Hutson summed up the American spirit that binds this country: regardless of all else that happens, "I know that the flag will always fly proudly, in adversity as well as triumph."

It was a day for little boys to look with awe at a band conductor, or for young ladies in skimpy suits to sprawl on the grass to listen to the music, and for others to just sit, look, and listen to the proceedings.

Navy Completes Housing Survey

The Commandant Fifth Naval District has completed and submitted to Department of the Navy Headquarters in Washington the current Family Housing Requirements Survey, reflecting data as of April 15, 1970. The survey data will be used by the Navy Department and the Department of Defense in preparing programming recommendations for the construction of Military Family Housing in the Norfolk Complex for the Fiscal Year 1972. The Norfolk Complex includes Virginia Beach.

The current Survey results indicate that rental housing at rates within the means of military personnel remains in short supply, although for the first time since 1966 no decline in vacancy rate was shown, by comparison with the previous year's survey. The survey shows that permanent military personnel in the area (excluding transients, patients, etc.) decreased by 14 percent as compared with the survey for the preceding year.

The survey further showed that of the 25,985 military families living in the Norfolk Complex, 7,487 families are not suitably housed because of excess distance (from home to place of duty), excess cost (over maximum allowable housing cost as defined by Department of Defense), or substandard condition of dwelling; that 3,745 families are involuntarily not living in the area with the miltary head of the family assigned in the area because of non-availability of suitable housing for the family.

Based on projected military personnel strengths for the Norfolk Complex for the Fiscal Year 1972 the total deficiency of family housing of which acquisition programs can be submitted is 8,297 housing units including: 1,488 units for officer personnel and 6,769 units for enlisted personnel. This deficiency is determined by deducting from the adjusted estimated requirement for family housing, the suitable housing available including housing in the adjacent communities and existing on-base military controlled housing.

The Secretary of Defense has recommended a military construction program of 800 housing units for the Norfolk Complex in the Fiscal Year 1971 Program, so that additional family housing may be provided by the Department of the Navy to help alleviate the critical shortage of suitable housing. This recommendation is contained in the Fiscal Year 1971 Military Construction Bill now under consideration by the Congress. The Commandant Fifth Naval District has recommended construction of additional family housing in subsequent Military construction Programs to provide further relief in the critical housing situation.

PLANNING AHEAD--First planning session for the 1971 Professionals for Progress Seminar held at the Naval Air Station Oceana. Acety-Deucey Club included a luncheon for the coordinators. Leading the chow line are: (l to r) Paul Carver, club manager; Don Clayton, head of the officer's, and petty officers' mess branch of Bureau of Naval Personnel; and Ted White, director of the Mess Management Training Facility. Chef Busler is carving the corned beef.

Ship Replaces Retired Trophy

This year the winning sailor in the Old Greenwich Yacht Club handicap Race at Greenwich, Conn., will receive a new trophy thanks to the crew of the attack aircraft carrier USS AMERICA (CVA-66).

The handicap race has been an annual event at the Old Greenwich Yacht Club for the past 17 years. During this time the winner's trophy has been won three times by Navy Lt. Cdr. William S. Kelly of Queen Elizabeth Drive whose victory last year, while on leave, allowed him to retire the coveted cup. Kelly is Captain and Arresting Gear Officer aboard the Seventh Fleet carrier AMERICA.

Upon hearing the tale of how an AMERICA crewmember had won and retired the Handicap Race Trophy, AMERICA's Commanding Officer, Capt. Thomas B. Hayward and his 5000-man crew thought it appropriate that the trophy retired by Kelly be replaced by one named for USS AMERICA. The new trophy, co-sponsored by Kelly and AMERICA has been presented to Dr. Edward T. Krumeich, Commodore of the Greenwich Yacht Club, by Kelly. The 1970 winner will receive the USS AMERICA CUP following the annual race of September 19.

The Norfolk-based AMERICA is presently serving as the Flagship of the Attack Carrier Striking Force of the U.S. Seventh Fleet in the Western Pacific.

In his presentation, Lt. Cdr. Kelly read from a letter sent to the club by Capt. Hayward, who said:

"U.S.S. America hopes the competition generated by this trophy will bring about not only the highest degree of competitive spirit and sportsmanship among those competing for it, but also among those having knowledge of it, a renewed appreciation for the ideals which have guided America from birth, both the country America and the ship America. This ship is the finest ever built by any nation; it is manned by the finest nation ever built."

"That this should transpire in Greenwich is fitting inasmuch as Greenwich is central to that part of America wherein both our country and our Navy had their origin."

Dr. Edward T. Krumeich, commodore of the yacht club, said that the U.S.S. America Sailing Trophy would be put into competition this year on Saturday, Sept. 19 in a handicap race in which all other yacht clubs on Long Island Sound will be invited. "That will be the week that the 129-year old America's cup will be sought after off Newport," the commodore remarked. The new America cup will be raced for in annual competition in perpetuity.

Mr. ZODIAC To Perform

The Hampton Roads Chapter of the National Association of Accountants have engaged Mr. ZODIAC, mind reader and astrologer, to perform for them at dinner Friday at 8 p.m. at the Commodore Country Club.

This chapter social will mark the beginning of a new chapter year.

Mr. ZODIAC has devoted his entire life to delving into the mysteries of the mind. He is a past master of the art of Second Sight and Clairvoyance. He has performed in nearly every important auditorium in the United States and in supper clubs and hotels the world over.

Midshipman Second Class William G. Wheeler, son of Cdr. and Mrs. William L. Wheeler of Country Club Circle has completed a two-week Summer Aviation Indoctrination Course at the Naval Aviation Schools Command, Pensacola, Fla. Now attending the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., he is a graduate of Frank W. Cox High School.

Delay New Business

QUESTION: I retired from the Navy this year and now have a good job. I would like to know if I would do better in a business of my own or if I should remain in the job I now hold. Also does astrology have an explanation for certain ethnic emotions such as the stringent purse strings of the Scottish people? Signed LRE.

ANSWER: To answer the last part of your question first, there is a definite relationship between ethnic groups and astrological sign groupings. That does not mean that all Irish people (ruled by Taurus) will be stubborn or that all Jewish people (ruled by Capricorn--the sign of business) will be good business people, but it is an over-all national character trait. I do not know which sign has influence of the Scottish people but would guess that it is Cancer, since Cancerian people like to hang on to things. There are reference books that give all this information, but I do not have the right one available to me at this moment.

As far as whether you should go into business for yourself, the answer is quite simple. It would seem that there are pressures at home which would not make this advisable. Also, in a couple of years you will be going through a progressed aspect which deals with the career and since this is not a favorable aspect, I would suggest that you wait until that has passed. You are one of those fortunate people who do not have a lot of bad aspects to contend with. The tenth house (governing the career) has no less than five planets stationed in it, all of which are in good aspect to other planets in the horoscope. This almost surely indicates that you were a Naval Officer and unless I am mistaken you rose to a rather high position. I can not help feeling that you did not take the Navy too seriously and did not achieve the rank that you could have, if you had chosen to.

I will be starting a new astrology class in the near future and will send you a letter covering the information on it. Thank you for your interest.

If, when the above mentioned aspect passes, and providing you have sufficient capital, training, etc., you could be quite successful in a business of your own. Most businesses, as my banker will tell you, fail because of two basic reasons: First, the new businessman does not have enough experience, or second, the new businessman does not have enough money. Consider these carefully before investing in anything.

Address your questions to Astro-Advice, Virginia Beach Sun, P.O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23451. All questions will be answered as space permits but must include date, time and place of birth.

Seminar to Update Managers

Next January will be a most interesting and educational time for mess managers of military messes in the Tidewater area when the Professionals for Progress Seminar is being held in Norfolk.

The seminar will last from Jan. 10 to 14. Last year's seminar, which was held in San Francisco, Calif., attracted over 200 military mess managers.

These seminars are hosted by the Bureau of Naval Personnel (BuPers). They provide the representatives of BuPers the opportunity to discuss new regulations, policies and the results of their implementation with the mess managers. They provide the mess managers an occasion to ask questions concerning regulations and policy matters.

Technologically, the food service business is catching up rapidly to other American industries, but it still has a long way to go. The 1971 Professionals for Progress will stand for perfecting food production and expose the managers to everything that is new in 1970. These sessions make it possible for the managers to discuss their problems with their peers who many times have encountered and conquered similar difficulties.

Gatherings of this type allow the managers to get out of their individual surroundings so they can get a fresh perspective and new ideas for better mess management.

Wives are invited to accompany their husbands to the seminar in an effort to show the appreciation for understanding of the long hours of dedicated service given by the husbands.

The Norfolk Naval Station will be the host for the upcoming 1971 seminar. Evening social/educational affairs will be held at various military messes in the Tidewater area. (Open Clubs (Officers), CPO Naval Air Station Oceana's (Open Clubs (Officers), CPO and Acety Deucey Clubs) will host two functions of the special mess managers' seminar.

Murders

Woody was returned to Virginia Beach where he was placed in custody at the city jail. He is scheduled to appear in Municipal Court at 10 a.m. tomorrow at which time an attorney is expected to be appointed to represent him.

Thus far investigators have been unable to locate the second man, identified as Fayette Tillman, who reportedly was with Woody when he was seen climbing from the bridge-tunnel island early Saturday morning.

Capt. R. C. Davis, Virginia Beach Police Detective Division C. O., Wednesday said the search for Tillman was continuing, as were all phases of the investigation into the case.

One phase of the investigation was a search of the bay near the third island where Woody and Tillman said their newly purchased sailboat sank after crashing into the rocks.

A search of this region by divers of the Virginia Beach Underwater Squad, as of Wednesday afternoon, had thus far failed to produce any sign of the sailboat or its wreckage.

Another important question which remains unanswered at this point in the investigation is what was the motivating factor or behind the murders of Samuel Willard Jones and his wife, Jane.

Members of the bridge-tunnel police division reported seeing two men, later identified as Robert Lee Woody and Fayette Tillman of Norfolk, climbing from rocks of the bridge-tunnel third island about 2 a.m. Saturday. The men were quoted with saying they had purchased a sailboat in Ocean View Friday night, and while taking the boat on a trial run it became disabled and slammed into the island rocks.

As Virginia Beach police and the Coast Guard intensified their search for the missing Jones couple and their two prospective buyers Saturday afternoon, reports began circulating throughout the area of an alleged "transfer of material in the vicinity of the Virginia Capes" reportedly bound for a foreign country.

At this point the U.S. Bureau of Customs and Federal Bureau of Investigation entered the investigation.

The investigation of these reports has thus far proved to be fruitless. Tuesday afternoon a spokesman for the Customs Agency Service, which is the investigative arm of the Bureau of Customs, stated that "the local office is conducting an investigation concerning allegations made by an anonymous source, or sources, that a quantity of explosives was loaded aboard an unidentified craft off the Virginia Capes some time Saturday, Sept. 5. These allegations referred to a purported transfer of the quantity of explosives to a larger vessel, the purpose of which has not yet been established."

W & M Grads are Listed

Eleven Virginia Beach students were among 240 students awarded degrees in summer commencement exercises at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg.

Receiving Bachelors of Arts were Scott Peter Ayers and Nancy R. Shea (highest honors in Fine Arts); Masters of Business Administration, Robert Garth Newman, Masters in Teaching Science, Gerald Patrick Joyce; Certificate of Advanced Study in Education, James Collin Moomie and George Walter Chandler.

The largest number received Masters of Education. They were George Chandler Fairbank IV; Dennis Lloyd McCurdy; Frances Webster Saccione; Jacquelyn Tarkington; Seasons and Claude Dean Tate.

Graduates

Two graduates from Virginia Beach were among the 700 students who recently graduated from the University of South Carolina in summer commencement ceremonies.

The graduates were awarded their degrees by USC President Thomas F. Jones, Diana Leigh Hinman of Virginia Beach received a Bachelor of Science degree from the College of Business Administration with a major in accounting. Another Virginia Beach student, Charles William Robinson, also received a Bachelor of Science degree from the College of Business Administration. Robinson's major was in marketing.

To Graduate

Earnest Richard Harden III of Virginia Beach is one of 133 candidates for graduation Friday at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala., scheduled to receive M.A. degrees.

Clive Ian Canon of Virginia Beach has received a Bachelor of Science degree from Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Peggy Lee Williams, 4641 Priscilla Lane, Virginia Beach, has received BA degrees in psychology and French from Texas A & I University in Kingsville Texas.

While the coffee got colder...

First Day of School.

6:30 a.m. The fourth grader dragged me out of bed to show me the rash on her chest (she breaks out whenever she's nervous.)

7 a.m. Breakfast was ready. Two kids were at the table. One was missing.

7:30 a.m. Everybody had finished eating except the first grader.

7:30 a.m. The girls asked if they really had to wash dishes before school. They did.

7:45 a.m. Held consultation with two neighbors to decide what time to send the kids out for the bus. New schedules this year and school starts at 9 instead of 8:30. School board said bus would be 20 minutes later than usual. School however, said it would be along about 8:30. All we knew was that it was due between 8 and 9.

7:48 a.m. Combed first grader's hair for the third time. Sent kids out.

Waited.

And waited.

Kids got restless.

Fourth grader started scratching again.

Trips to bathroom became more frequent.

8:15 a.m. Still no bus.

8:30 a.m. School telephone number was busy. Stayed that way too.

8:35 a.m. Retied first grader's shoe again. Made double knot this time.

8:40 a.m. False alarm. Bus was spotted from a private school.

8:55 a.m. Bus came. Driver said she would be about five minutes earlier next day--at 8:40, that is. Somebody better reset their clock. Driver said these kids would be second load in the morning and first load in the afternoon. Logical.

Of course, the job I wouldn't want would be that of getting all the kids to the right room the first day. Or that of separating distraught mothers from weepy first graders.

Who says teachers are overpaid.

Men Welcome at workshop on Sept. 19

The Norfolk Gavelers Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians will present a Parliamentary Workshop to be held on Sept. 19, at Knox Presbyterian Church, Colonial Avenue at 37th Street, Norfolk beginning at 9 a.m.

All instruction will be by Registered Parliamentarians. A "model meeting" with question and answer period will be presented in the morning. Following lunch the following workshops will be presented:

"Delegates to Conventions"--Mrs. Donald D. Funk, R.P.; "Committees and Reports"--Mrs. Kenneth Gimbert, R.P.; "Motions"--Mrs. E. J. McElligot, R.P.; "Nominations and Elections"--Mrs. George E. Overby, R.P.; "Bylaws and Standing Rules"--Mrs. P. H. Carroll, R.P.

Registration fee (including lunch) is $7.50 per person. A special fee will be charged for high school and college students of $3.50 per person. Reservations must be made with Mrs. P. H. Carroll, 135 DuPont Circle, Norfolk, Va. 23509 no later than Sept. 14.

It is suggested each participant bring a notebook, pen and a copy of Robert's Rules of Order Revised, if available.

Additional information may be obtained from Mrs. Carroll--telephone 622-4805. MEN are especially welcome.

Secretaries rewarded

The Virginia Beach Chapter of The National Secretaries Association (International) has been presented with the Chapter Professional Development Award for excellence in educational programming for 1969-1970. It was announced by Mrs. Gildus White, chapter president, who is secretary to John L. Roper, 2nd, president and M. R. Griffin, corporate secretary of The Norfolk Shipbuilding & Drydock Corporation.

The official certificate representing the award was transmitted to the Chapter by Miss Bertha J. Stromach, CPS, immediate past international president of NSA, who is secretary to L. Millard Collins, manager, Educational Marketing Program, Office Products, Div. of IBM Corporation, New York, New York.

The meritorious award was earned by the active participation of 26 chapter members computed on a point system based on total member participation in scheduled chapter activities aimed at maintaining and improving standards of secretarial performance.

In meeting the point schedule, the chapter was involved in the following educational activities: Certified Professional Secretary participation, CPS Educational Study classes,

The fashion show will be the third sponsored by the Tidewater District.

Despite Storm

Wedding is Sept. 26

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Russell Perkins, Jr., of Richmond announce the engagement of their daughter, Jean Marie, to Thomas Randolph Tucker, of Washington, D. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lawrence Tucker, Jr., of Laurelwood Lane.

Miss Perkins, who attended Mary Baldwin College, was graduated from the College of William and Mary.

Mr. Tucker is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and received his master's degree from the College of William and Mary.

The wedding will be held Saturday, Sept. 26, at 2 p.m. at the Wren Chapel in Williamsburg.

The couple will make their home in Williamsburg, where Mr. Tucker is doing doctoral work in physics.

Are Wedding Bells Ringing?

If you are announcing an engagement or wedding, why not do it in the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN?

Brides are asked to submit their photographs (5x7 or 8x10 glossy) by Monday of the week they want the announcement to appear on Thursday. Wedding and engagement forms are available at the newspaper office, 3108 Pacific Avenue.

All weddings and engagements received will be used. However, photographs will not be returned by mail but may be picked up at the newspaper office.

Mrs. Mason Murphy-Mason wedding

Miss Wanda Mae Murphy became the bride of Dennis Alexander Mason at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 29, in the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, NAS Oceana with the Rev. Bernard Abern officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Harp-Murphy. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mason of Peru, N. Y.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Miss Penny Lou Schmidt of Virginia Beach was maid of honor. Bridal attendants were Miss Frances Roos-Murphy of Virginia Beach, sister of the bride; Miss Patricia Ann Mason of Peru, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Debbie Ann-Noe and Mrs. Ervin McClenney of Virginia Beach. Kathy Collins was flower girl and Scott Allen Herzog was ring bearer.

Robert Thomas Mason, Jr. of Peru was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Richard Lavern Herzog of Norfolk, Terry Lee Gumbo of Plattsburgh, N. Y., Robert Francis Martin of Virginia Beach and William K. Davis of NAS Oceana.

A reception was held at the Chief Petty Officer's Club at Oceana. Following a wedding trip to Williamsburg and upstate New York, the couple will live in Virginia Beach until June 1971 when they will make their home in Peru.

Liven lunch box lunches

During the summer, lunches at home may have been casual do-it-yourself meals. As school opens, the noon meal becomes a more orderly affair. Attention should be given to make sure the food that goes into the lunch box is interesting as well as nutritious.

Though the sandwich is the most convenient way to include meat and bread there can be variety. Swift's Premium Flavor Tite Bologna and Cooked Salami on rye bread are a good combination to begin with. Another fine Summer Sausage and P&P Loaf on Italian bread would be fine; and so the variety continues.

A surprise spread for the sandwich helps to keep the bread moist and tasty. The rich date drop cookies carry well and stay moist in the lunch box too.

LUNCH BOX SANDWICHES Yield: 4 sandwiches

- 8 oz package Swift's Premium Flavor-Tite Bologna and Cooked Salami
- 3 oz package cream cheese, 1 tsp horseradish
- 1 tbl salad dressing
- 1/4 cup grated carrot
- 1/4 cup finely chopped cucumber
- 8 slices rye bread
- Leaf lettuce
- Dill pickle wedges.

Combine cream cheese, horseradish, salad dressing, carrot and cucumber. Mix until well blended. Spread cream cheese mixture over 4 slices of bread. To assemble each sandwich, cover remaining bread slices with lettuce and 2 or 3 table-ready meat slices. Top with dill pickle, and bread slice with sandwich spread.

DATE DROPS (A Fruity Cake-like Cookie) Yield: 3 dozen cookies

- 1/2 cup Swift's Shortening
- 3/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 1/2 tsp salt

- 1 cup quick rolled oats
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup chopped pitted dates
- Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs and milk and combine well. Stir together dry ingredients and add gradually. Drop by teaspoonful onto a baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F) 15 to 20 minutes.

Rose Hall's BRIDAL LANE

the ticket! BRIDES PASS OUT-- NEVER THE GROOM

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY?

After a wedding on their first night, like most newlyweds, they didn't find time to take advantage of all the food at the reception and were ready for a full fledged meal by the time they had reached Richmond where they intended to spend the first night.

It was quite late but they found a lovely restaurant where they relaxed over a delightful dinner. The groom paid the bill and happily escorted his new bride out to the car bound for their honeymoon suite. One small problem! Sitting on the windshield was a parking ticket! But where do you pay for a parking ticket at 11 p.m.?

First, they had to track down the policeman who had written the ticket. He couldn't accept their money. For four hours, bride and groom drove around Richmond until they finally found a Justice of the Peace who could take the ticket and their money. The groom was tremendously relieved that he was able to pay the fine, but was chagrined when he was told that he could have mailed the money back to them!

The bride's comments we don't dare repeat since after all the time and effort spent to pay the ticket, once the JP found out they were newlyweds and new in Richmond he felt a gift was due them. He paid

Assisting at a wedding rehearsal this past weekend the groom, the Priest and I were briefly discussing the various emotions some grooms experience on the day of their wedding, such as crying a bit when he sees his lovely bride walk down the aisle a vision of loveliness. Let's face it. It is an emotional experience, but Joe shrugged all this aside with, "Oh, I'll have everything under control. I won't be nervous." Famous last words!

Preparing for the Nuptial Mass the next day, the bride appeared relatively calm, bridesmaids were a 'twit' with excitement, parents were nervous and near tears, but as for the groom, everything was under control. He was nonchalant and smiling while awaiting the arrival of his bride-to-be, wedding party and parents, who dressed at the home of the bride and arrived via limousine. He was waiting in a small secluded area at the back of the church and even though he knew the bride was just around the partition he refused to peek at her until it was time for him to take his place in the processional. The Priest blessed the wedding party then proceeded down the aisle with the wedding party following in their respective order.

Approximately 20 minutes into the ceremony, the groom suddenly fell backwards and sprawled the length of the altar—six feet of him—in a dead faint! Thank goodness the altar was carpeted. Even my head hurt when I heard his head hit the floor a good 150 feet away. We were also grateful that he was kneeling. His head barely missed hitting the altar rail at that. Had he been standing, I don't dare think of how tragic it could have been.

Anyway, ushers jumped to his assistance, spanked him smartly on the cheeks bit to no avail. He was out! For what seemed like an eternity. The Priest had acquired a chair which was placed on the altar so the groom could sit down when he came to.

Finally, he was able to return to the kneeling bench for the rest of the ceremony. At moments I had my doubts about whether he was going to be able to continue, but make it he did and everyone heaved a sigh of relief.

As they recessed, I shoved a napkin saturated with spirits of ammonia in his hand telling him to take a deep whiff and to keep it up as deep as he could until the wedding party recessed and the parents gathered with us.

When you're not like yourself, Lydia Pinkham understands

All of a sudden you might feel you're changing—not a good feeling. You're tired, edgy, out of sorts and that's not you. Lydia Pinkham understands.

A long time ago, when ladies couldn't be as frank as we can today, Lydia Pinkham recognized the problem and set about finding a remedy. She knew it was not natural for women to have to suffer with what was obviously a natural process.

So she turned to nature for a remedy. She developed a marvelous compound of medicinal roots and herbs that turned the trick for the women she knew. Because it is a natural answer to your natural problems, it can turn the trick for you, too.

Try Lydia Pinkham's root and herb remedy to help you feel better, more like yourself.

Fall is pear time

Pears are among the most delicious of fruits. The finest quality will be available during the next few months as the crop is harvested. Use them to add variety to your menu.

Pears were known in Europe and Central Asia many centuries ago. However, they were not grown in America until about 1830. At that time they were brought here by the English and French colonists.

Pears are now a very important crop in the U. S., with California, Oregon and Washington being the most important producing states. Michigan and New York also produce moderate quantities.

Pears are fine trees for home fruit planting. They are long lived and hardy. Dwarf trees will begin to bear in two or three years, and the standard sizes in five to seven years.

Fall is an ideal season for planting pears. The best time is about a month after the average date of the first frost in your area.

Dwarf pears are ideal for growing along the fence or wire trellis like grapes. The dwarf or standard trees are excellent for training as espalier trees against the side of a house or garage.

One good feature of pears is that they are not seriously damaged by insects and diseases. Therefore, they can be grown quite easily without the repeated summer spraying needed for most fruit trees.

Fire blight is the one serious problem of pears in the Eastern states. A bacterial disease, it is very destructive on susceptible varieties.

Fortunately, we now have varieties which are quite resistant to fire blight. Therefore, if you will select these varieties, you should be able to grow pears quite easily with little or no spraying.

Like many other types of fruit, pears are mostly self-unfruitful. It is necessary to plant two or more different varieties to provide cross pollination and good fruit set.

Moonglow is a blight resistant and pear which ripens in early August. The fruit is large and attractive, with soft juicy flesh. It has good dessert quality, and is also fine for canning.

Magness ripens in late August and early September. The fruit is medium in size, with oval shape. The skin is quite tough and resistant to insect punctures and decay. The Magness has outstanding resistance to fire blight.

Seckel is an old European type which ripens in mid September. The fruit is small but has excellent flavor. It is fine for canning or spicing whole. The tree is seldom bothered by insects, and is quite resistant to fire blight.

The fruits of the pear are somewhat unique, because, to secure the best quality they should be picked before they are fully ripe. If they are allowed to mature on the tree they become coarse and stringy, and may be served as fresh dessert or salad, or stewed, baked, or fried. They may also be spiced or glazed, or made into jelly or jam.

As an energy source pears yield about 63 calories per 100 grams. They also provide about 17 international units of vitamin A per 100 grams, and three to seven milligrams of ascorbic acid. And, more important, they have wonderful flavor.

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Happiness is a boat ride for thousands of our neighbors all around the country during the boating season. There have been more boats on the water this year than ever before. Almost all of them come and go safely and their occupants enjoy a pleasant cruise whenever they go out. But in some cases the boat ride ends in tragedy. For various reasons, usually the fault of the operator, some of our pleasure boatmen do not return safely. It has been pointed out time and time again that vessel casualties and sinkings consistently account for more of the lives lost in boating accidents each year than any other type of casualty. In an overwhelming majority of these cases the fault for the accident lies with the operator.

All small boats should have a capacity plate attached showing recommended weight carrying ability of the boat. The operator would then be able to determine when his boat was safely loaded. In the absence of such a plate, the operator would be wise who knows the capacity of his boat.

A boat's safe weight carrying capacity in reasonable conditions of weather, can be estimated by the expression: $7.5 \times L \times B \times D = P$. In this expression (L) is the overall length, (B) is the maximum width, and (D) is maximum depth of the boat. (P) represents total weight pounds of safe weight-carrying capacity - including motor, persons, fuel, etc. (Hint: measure (D) at the lowest point that water could enter the boat) All dimensions should be measured in feet and tenths of feet. When you use this formula be sure that the load you want to carry does not exceed (P). If it does, be careful! You might be asking for trouble.

Over one-fourth of all lives lost in boating accidents last year resulted from falls overboard. And this type of accident appears to have increased this year - at least in the Hampton Roads Area. Many of these were non-swimmers, and few of them were using lifesaving devices.

BOATING STATISTICS 1969, a Coast Guard publication, shows an alarming reluctance by the public to use, and in some cases, to even carry approved lifesaving devices aboard their boats. Even though it is a legal requirement to have at least one approved device for each person on board, the statistics show that for the 1260 drownings last year, the availability of lifesaving devices is completely unknown for 392 of these cases. And every case was thoroughly investigated. It is known, however, that in 85% of the remaining 868 drownings lifesaving devices were either not available or were not used.

The obvious question is: would lifesaving devices have precluded any of these fatalities? The equally obvious answer is that since wearing a device or at least having one available, would certainly improve chances of survival, thereby decreasing fatalities, it follows that many of these drownings could have been prevented.

The four E's of boating safety are engineering, environment, enforcement, and education. Engineering has to do with the construction of the boats and manufacture of associated equipment. Environment has to do with the wind, the weather, the water, and surroundings in the boating area. Enforcement relates to the application of the legal requirements for boats and boatmen regarding safety equipment and operation. Education - probably the most important - has to do with the boat operator's knowledge of what he should, and should not, do with his boat.

And that fourth 'E' - education - is the only one of the four about which the operator can do anything. Further, since a majority of all drownings are the fault of the operator, he is the one upon whom most of a safety program rests.

Could the loss of life in boating accidents be drastically reduced by a concerted effort on the part of the boat operators? Would the wearing of lifesaving devices aid in this hoped-for reduction? There is a legal requirement to have one lifesaving device for each person on board - but there is no law which requires it to be worn. Only the operator, or person himself, can make that requirement.

Make safe boating your "cruise aid". Address any questions to the writer at Commander, Fifth Coast Guard District (obs), Portsmouth, Virginia 23705.

Hurricane Advice

Residents in hurricane prone areas are reminded by the American National Red Cross that hurricane season is under way and that they should be prepared through November for a possible disaster which could affect their lives as well as property.

John L. Roper, III, Tide-water Chapter Chairman, said Red Cross chapters in cooperation with Environmental Science Services Administration have intensified their hurricane preparedness procedures from Florida to Texas and along the Atlantic Coast, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

If a hurricane threatens an area, he recommended that residents follow these safety tips:

1. Watch newspapers and listen carefully to ESSA Weather Bureau advisories and other official information broadcast on television broadcast on television and radio. Have a battery-powered radio available in case of power failure.

2. Secure outdoor objects and store garbage cans, garden furniture and tools, awnings and such objects in safe places.

3. Put storm shutters in place or board up windows.

4. If evacuation is advised, get out quickly and follow instructions.

5. If you live in low lying area, don't risk being swamped or marooned. Get away from beaches and all areas likely to be swept by hurricane tides and high winds.

6. During the storm, stay indoors, preferably in a brick or concrete building.

7. Keep away from windows.

8. Should the "eye" of a hurricane pass directly overhead, there will be a deceptive period of calm that may last 30 minutes or longer. Don't be misled by the lull - stay where you are. The other side of the storm will return with winds from the opposite direction.

9. Store drinking water in bottles, cooking utensils and clean bathtubs. Keep a supply of food on hand that does not require cooking. Be sure to have candles and flashlights on hand. Before the storm hits, turn refrigerators to the coldest setting to preserve food as long as possible in case of later failure in power.

10. Don't touch fallen wires. Report the damage to the power company or police.

The ESSA Weather Bureau in Miami serves as a focal point for analyzing and monitoring disturbances as they form and develop into full-fledged hurricanes about to strike the east or Gulf coasts. As soon as the disturbances are located, Red Cross provides an immediate Red Cross disaster action teams are placed on 24-hour alert. A direct hot-line between the center and the Red Cross provided and immediate warning so that staff, volunteers and equipment can be mobilized.

Roper added that Red Cross has increased its mobile equipment for handling communications and feeding. He said pre-surveys have pinpointed location or equipment which can be utilized immediately should the occasion arise.

Capt. Lake Promoted

Friends Opening

Captain Ferdinand Brallier Koch, U. S. Navy, a veteran of 28 years of Naval Service and former commanding officer of USS ARNOLD (LFA-56), has taken the reins as commanding officer of USS JOHN F. KENNEDY (CVA-67) from Captain Julian S. Lake, who will move to Washington D.C.

In becoming KENNEDY's third skipper since its commissioning in September, 1963, Captain Koch will be taking over the Navy's newest and largest conventionally powered attack aircraft carrier.

Koch, a native of Baltimore, Maryland, attended Cornell University before transferring to the Naval Academy in June of 1942, where he graduated and was commissioned an ensign in June, 1945.

Before reporting to KENNEDY the new skipper attended an advanced management program at Harvard University.

Captain Koch is married to the former Elizabeth J. Lynch of Chase City, Virginia and they have two children, Linda 18, and John, 7.

Captain Lake, a Rear Admiral selectee, will move to Washington D.C. where he will be the new project manager of Reconnaissance Electronic Warfare, Special Operations and Naval Intelligence Processing, Naval Material Command. The former KENNEDY skipper's promotion to Washington will highlight a 26 year career, which includes duty at the Navy's test pilot school and USAF Interceptor Warfare Instructor School, where he was an instructor and head of the research and development branch.

Koch

Before coming to KENNEDY, Captain Lake commanded USS HASSAYAMPA, a fleet oiler, and made a Vietnam cruise as her skipper.

The Captain is married to the former Barbara Brooks of Birmingham, Alabama. They live in Virginia Beach, Virginia and have four children: Julie Ann, Barbara Diane, Clara Virginia and Julian Strong IV.

Dr. John E. Lippincott, chairman of the Virginia Beach Friends School Committee, has announced that Friends School will start on Monday, September 14th.

W. Carey Reece, Jr., headmaster, stated that two additions will be made for the fall term: John Ficht, Educational Consultant, M.S. Clinical Psychology, will direct a Learning Center. Janice Nichols will be the teacher and she will be assisted by Linda Heisserman. Mrs. Benjamin F. Brown will direct the program for Early Childhood Education. In addition to the usual five year olds, there will be three and four year olds.

The Junior High Department will add another section this fall. Wym Price, who has joined the staff this year, will be in charge of this group. Also teaching in Junior High will be Martha Fordehase. Fred Sams will be assisting in Junior High and in Primary.

Mrs. Robert D. Wilson will be a counselor, working with parents, teachers, and students. Again this year Mrs. Doris Doyle will be the secretary and Mary Warren will be the book keeper. Issac Knox will be custodian.

Other teachers working with Mrs. Brown in the Pre-school will be Mary Warren assisting Mrs. Brown with three year olds; Linda Lamm teaching four's with Martha Tucker assisting; and Peggy Boykin and Jeanne Marie Richardson teaching five's with Miriam Johnson assisting.

Mrs. Frank Singer will be the head teacher again in the Primary department. Other teachers are: Virginia Peabody, Judy Gee, and Susan Judd. Assistants are Diana Holmes and Fred Sams. Don Hartley will teach Physical Education and Shop.

Mrs. Allen Harvey, Head of the Intermediate Department will have teaching with her Alyce Crafton and Betty Whitehurst. Jo Ann Johnson will be the assisting teacher.

Friends school is a non-graded school under the care of the Virginia Beach Friends Meeting.

Schedule To Change

Galilee Episcopal Church, 40th Street and Pacific Avenue, will revert to its regular schedule of services beginning Sunday, Sept. 13.

Holy Communion will be at 8 a.m.; Morning Prayer and Sermon, 9:15 a.m.; Church School, 10 a.m.; Morning Prayer and Sermon, 11 a.m. There will be a nursery from 9 a.m. through the 11 a.m. service. Parents of children in the nursery are asked to pin the child's full name, birth date and telephone number on their clothing.

Wesleyan's new Rose Hall.

Dormitory to Be Dedicated

Virginia Wesleyan College will dedicate a sixth building in the College's first Academic Village on Sunday.

A men's dormitory will be dedicated as Paul H. Rose Hall at 4 p.m. Dedication ceremonies will be held in the Birdsong Lounge adjacent to the residence hall.

The speaker for the occasion will be the Rev. Dr. R. Or-man Bryant, minister of the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church. Others participating in the ceremony will include Paul T. Schweitzer, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees at Virginia Wesleyan; the Rev. Dr. Beverly Felly, minister of Christ United Methodist Church, and Virginia Wesleyan Press, Lambuth M. Clarke.

The late Paul H. Rose, a life long Methodist and a pioneer merchant, was founder of the Paul H. Rose Corporation and Rose's Stores, Inc. Mrs. Rose an active Methodist, is now living in Henderson, N. C. and has a summer home in Virginia Beach. Mrs. William J. Vaughn of Virginia Beach, a daughter of Mrs. Rose and the late Mr. Rose, is a member of the Virginia Wesleyan College Board of Trustees. Rose was a native of Seaboard, N.C. He founded the Rose's Stores 52 years ago and now has operations in nine states.

The first Academic Village, consisting of seven buildings, was completed in September 1966 for the opening of the College. Since that time five of the buildings, three dormitories and two lounge-classroom buildings, have been named and officially dedicated. Other names in the Village are Eggleston, Old Kellam Residence Halls and Birdsong and Pruden Lounge-Classroom Buildings.

Virginia Wesleyan projects an enrollment of 625 for September 1970. Approximately half of the total fulltime enrollment will be resident students. Two new residence halls are in the final stages of construction this month.

Reduction in Funds Was Key to Cutback

Military officials last week announced a small percentage of the 3,600 civilian employees at Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story will be released in a federal cut-back of civilian personnel at military installations.

Authorities said reduction in force (RIF) letters will be delivered to 49 employees of Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story, Va., on Sept. 21. The largest percentage of these reductions will be carried out at Ft. Eustis.

The announcement was made by E. B. Thornton, civilian personnel officer for the Transportation Center. Thornton stated that this number of employees was less than 1.5 percent of the total civilian population at these two installations including all of the civil service employees located at the Transportation Center. All temporary employees in the series of jobs being reduced will be terminated.

The action is necessary, according to the announcement, because of a reduction in funds and manpower authorization. The selection of positions to be abolished was made after careful consideration of which would have the least disruptive effect on the accomplishment of the mission of The Transportation Center. However, according to Thornton, there will be no separation of employees at MacDonald Army Hospital because of this reduction of force.

The staff at the Civilian Personnel Division will apply the Civil Service Commission and the Department of the Army regulations in an equitable manner to assure the protection of the rights of every employee. Every effort will be made by the personnel staff to assist separated employees in securing other employment.

Amis Enters Wesleyan

Nimrod S. Amis, Jr. of Virginia Beach will enter Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., as a freshman in September. It was announced recently by Robert L. Kirkpatrick, Jr., Wesleyan Dean of Admissions.

Amis is a 1970 graduate of Floyd E. Kellam High School where he was a district winner of the V. F. W. speech contest, president of the Student Cooperative Association, a member of the International Thespians Society, and a semifinalist in the National Merit examination.

He is one of 594 men and women who will enroll in the Class of 1974, which Dean Kirkpatrick has termed "one of the most able, diverse, and potentially contributing classes in the 127-year history of the University." The class was selected from more than 3440 applicants and comes to the University from 37 states and 10 foreign countries.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nimrod S. Amis of 464 Dam Neck Road.

Buffington Is Speaker

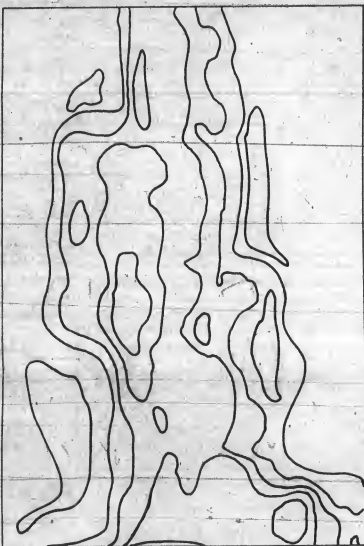

J. W. Buffington, chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board, will address the first PTA meeting of the 1970-71 term at the Point O View Elementary School, Sept. 15, 7:30 p.m.

Buffington, who is also president of the First Colonial Bank of Virginia Beach, will talk about the school systems in the Virginia Beach area.

ASTRO-ADVICE

By Raymond Williams
noted Virginia Beach
astrologer

Should Be Contented

QUESTION: My life usually goes along smoothly, but the last few years I have been depressed. Why? Signed SMC
ANSWER: At first I thought you were trying to kid me and I am still not sure that you are not. If the time of birth you gave me is correct you have been going through some rather good times and the only indication that there was something wrong, and that was a couple years ago, was the opposition of Mars to the planet Pluto. This involves the house which deals with self-doing, and it is known that Pluto has to do with compulsive behavior to some degree. I would think that it might involve the trying to hold on to the child that is growing older. Other than that things have been going rather well. You have a "grand earth trine" (the best possible configuration which involves money. I'll trade you any day) My advice to you is—be grateful. You should see some of the horoscopes I have received since starting this column. You have much to be thankful for.

On Casting Horoscopes

QUESTION: Do you cast horoscopes? I would like to have one done for a friend for his birthday. Signed O.L.
ANSWER: I am often asked this question. It seems that there are a lot of people who feel that getting one's horoscope done is like getting a charm with their name written on it to carry on a chain about the neck.
If I wanted to do it and many astrologers do, I could easily earn twenty to thirty thousand dollars a year, simply by getting a "fancy office and developing a "bed side manner." It is so easy to do if you do not care how you make your money. The horoscope is a great deal like a physical examination given by your doctor. It should be obtained only to be of some value in helping you to better determine what is taking place in life and what, if anything, can be done to improve it.
The horoscope reveals a great deal about a person (with the correct birth time) and as my very good friend and collaborator, Mrs. Vicky Green Hiss—states: It is a sacred trust to have a person's horoscope and we should always treat it in just that way. I agree! Its main use is for problem solving and in that nothing, in my opinion, can compare with it.

Autobiography and Mass Deaths

QUESTION: I used to reside in Virginia Beach but now live in Los Angeles but still receive the Sun. Your column is the best I have ever read. Has anyone ever done any research on things like the mass deaths caused by airplane crashes? Signed JDN
ANSWER: I hope the readers will forgive me for giving the Sun and myself a little plug. I just could not resist. There has been some research done on things like airplane crashes and assassinations but not enough. The problem is in getting the data. I have wanted to start an organization for just that purpose which could utilize several professional astrologers and the services of computer but have never been able to get enough money together to get it off the ground. I think some very valuable information could be gathered. In fact I am convinced that it would be the solution to the problems that we are having now since the Moon is directly related to the fertility cycle in the female. Maybe someone will remember us in their will and then we can do that sort of thing.
I have been asked to present the president of one of the largest clubs in the country with her horoscope at a dinner in the near future and plan to try to get the horoscopes of as many of the members as I can. There is a special requirement for joining and I would like to see what their common bond is. This is always interesting.

Sisters In Same Signs

QUESTION: My sister and I have been in minor accidents for the past four years. I have been in the hospital twice during that time. Do we have any hope of staying well in the future? What are our chances of moving from this area? Signed Sisters
ANSWER: These are the most interesting horoscopes I have seen in quite some time. You were both born at a time when the sun was in the sign of Sagittarius, even though you were born five years apart. What is more you both have the Moon located in the sign of Pisces. You must be quite close since you are so much alike. It is interesting to note that you are both experiencing the same general aspects, causing your health problems, at the same time. It would seem that the older of you has had the longest siege of problems since the aspect that caused it all began to affect you first.
These horoscopes are especially interesting because of the fact that you both have the Sun and Moon located in the same sign. The mathematical odds against something like this happening are tremendous. The only explanation is that which is given in relationship to the concept of Karma. That is, that there is a strong family relationship which binds people together through many lifetimes. I realize that this is not a popular concept in this area but it may have some validity. One has to consider that 70 percent of the world's population accepts the idea without reservation, therefore it cannot be dismissed without some thought. That is, anyone with the intelligence to think for himself cannot. I would not dismiss anything that would explain something like this without giving it a lot of thought.
As far as your moving from this area, I would not be too concerned about that because things are going to get very much better in the future for both of you. In fact, it would appear that most of the difficulties are past, and you can look for conditions to improve considerably in the near future. Mars, the planet which has been giving you both a very bad time, has moved far enough away, I think, to make conditions much better for you. To give a definite answer, as to whether you are going to move or not, I would prefer to look at your parents' horoscopes. They will be the determining influences which will decide for all.

Teaching Poor Choice

QUESTION: I have tried many different things and am now studying to be an elementary school teacher. Have I chosen the right profession? Signed F. C.
ANSWER: I would think that there were many things that you could do that would be far more rewarding than teaching school. You have the Sun and Mercury in the sign of Scorpio which gives you a very active and intelligent mind, but the planet Mars is in

Council Picks Rhodes, Tebault During Highly-Charged Session

Mayor Donald H. Rhodes

Donald H. Rhodes, 33-year old first term councilman, was elected Mayor of Virginia Beach and Blackwater Borough chosen councilman Earl M. Tebault chosen vice mayor Monday in a session that was begun in a heated political atmosphere.

The vote on Rhodes' appointment was 8-0 with objections by Robert B. Cromwell Jr., F. Reid Ervin, and J. Curtis Payne.

Cromwell, who opposed Tebault in the race for vice mayor, was nominated by D. Murray Malbon while Tebault was nominated by freshman councilman Floyd Waterfield.

Those voting against Tebault in the election were Malbon, Payne, Ervin and Cromwell. During the voting for Rhodes, Payne told the session that "because of recent developments which I don't care to elaborate on in public" he couldn't vote for Rhodes.

Immediately following both elections, Cromwell offered his congratulations to the winners and said, "This having transpired, let me be the first to congratulate Rhodes on this and pledge him my support in the next four years." He made the same statement to Tebault.

But before any elections took place, Frank A. Dusch, the merged city's first mayor and a councilman for 18 years, rose to read a one page statement saying he would not run for mayor.

Dusch said that "after 18 years (as mayor) I should be relieved of some of my responsibilities and that someone else should be selected to serve as mayor."

"In asking that this be done

Thoroughgood League Meets

The Thoroughgood Civic League will meet Monday at 8 p.m. at Thoroughgood Elementary School.
Guest speaker will be B.R. Middleton, member of the House of Delegates, who will discuss the new Virginia Constitution. This will be the first meeting for the new slate of officers, which include: Richard Lindell, president; Capt. Roy M. Suduth, president-elect; Leonard Tucker, vice president; William H. Colden, recording secretary; Mrs. Knox Burchett, corresponding secretary; Lawrence Bonner, treasurer; Capt. William Matton, sergeant-at-arms; and Capt. A. L. Redon, parliamentarian.

gathered his papers, picked up his nameplate and changed seats with Rhodes.

In a brief statement, Rhodes asked that he receive the cooperation of the council and then ordered the city clerk to "proceed with the business."

But the first items of business were just as heated as the elections.
Charles H. Callis Jr., chosen at a special session last week to fill the seat left vacant by the death of councilman elect Frank D. Tarrall, Jr., stood to introduce a resolution calling for the formation of a Citizens' Advisory Committee.

Having read the four-part resolution, Callis was confronted by Payne who said "We're getting off on the wrong foot." He attacked Callis for not having informed the other councilman of his intentions and the resolution.

"You just don't come out with this without telling anybody else," Payne said. Callis said "I discussed it with" and let his voice trail off but Payne would not be put off.

"You assumed it with who, Mr. Callis?" he asked.

"I discussed it with several councilmen," Callis responded. Payne closed the confrontation by saying that it was all right to discuss matters among themselves but not in a small group away from other councilmen.

The matter was referred to City Attorney J. Dale Blinson's office for study to see if the committee would conform to certain federal requirements.

Bimson, City Manager Roger M. Scott, High Constable R. R. McChesney, City Clerk R. J. Webber and Real Estate Assessor Clyde Merritt were reappointed for new terms by council but not before further debate.

Payne said he was under the impression that these appointments were to be deferred for two weeks along with two other sets of appointments and when Councilman George Ferrell made the motion that the appointments be affirmed Payne immediately spoke out.

"It was my understanding that we were going to defer action on any of these until the next meeting," he said, but voted on the motion with the exception of McChesney's appointment.

The remainder of the session was quiet as council moved into its regular agenda.

More than 15,000 Shriners from the Mid-Atlantic States will arrive in Virginia Beach today for the 27th annual meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Association. It will continue through Saturday.

"This will be the largest Mid-Atlantic convention ever held," said Frank W. Kellam of Virginia Beach, a Past Potentate of Khedive Temple and president of the MASA.

He said the visitors will include Shriners from 23 Temples in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, the District of Columbia and Virginia.

One of the highlights of the four days will be a parade of Shrine Temple units Saturday along Atlantic Avenue beginning at 1 p.m. The parade will form at the South end and will move all the way up Atlantic to the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club. The reviewing stand will be in front of the American Motel.

The Cavalier Hotel will serve as headquarters for the group but they will be housed in motels all over the city as well as one or two in Norfolk.

A great assortment of entertainment has been planned for the visitors, most of which either be at the Civic Center or the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club. It will in fact be a busy time with fashion shows for the women, business meetings parade drills and such for the men.

"There will be entertainment every night at the beach club," Kellam said, "and a two-hour stage show by the Executives will be staged at the Civic Center Thursday and Friday nights."

The President's Banquet will be held Saturday at 6 p.m. at the Civic Center with the New Crispy Minstrels providing entertainment following dinner. Business sessions will be held Friday and Saturday mornings, followed by the election and installation of officers. Charles A. B. Heinze, of Zembor Temple, Harrisburg, Pa. will succeed Kellam as president.

Some of the interesting activities planned by the Shriners include competitive drills among the Arab Patrols, 23rd St. and Pacific Ave. (Friday noon); Shrine Motor Corps obstacle course competition at Oceana Air Base (Friday 2 p.m. and Sat. 8 a.m.); Legion of Honor competitive drills at the Star of the Sea parking lot (Friday 3:30 p.m.); a luncheon fashion show for the ladies at the Civic Center (Friday 12:30 p.m.) and a pageant for the newly elected president (Saturday 10:30 a.m.).

Rosemont Is Boats To Progressing 'Parade'

Parades are synonymous with Shriners but the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Association will provide Virginia Beach with a most unique event Saturday—a boat parade along the ocean front.

Some 50 boats owned, apparently, by members of the Shrine Yacht Clubs, are due to arrive here today to take part in the colorful parade.

Thirty will be moored at the White Heron's marina and the other 20 will go to the Cavalier Yacht and Golf Club.

At 11 a.m. Saturday they will all rendezvous at Cape Henry to parade in single file along the beach from that point to Rudee Inlet. They will be judged but it was not known Wednesday afternoon who the judges will be.

The size of the boats range from 35 to 55 feet, according to White Heron Dockmaster Milton Barrett, and are coming down from New Jersey and New York.

They will also serve as "home" for their owners during the four days they will be here.

The city's real estate agent said Tuesday that land acquisition plans for the widening of Rosemont Road should near completion some time in November, paving the way for reconstruction of the badly-paved road next year.

David Casassa said that bids for the work, which will be done in conjunction with the state, should be advertised around the first of the year.

Although plans are not in the completion stages, the majority of appraisals have been done and acquisition plans are nearly complete, he said.

Casassa also said that no plans have been made for donation of city land to the Virginia Beach Little Theatre but that a meeting was scheduled today with theatre president James English to discuss the matter further.

Wins Sweepstake

G. T. Moore of Westerfield Road in Bayside is $5,000 richer because he has been named a Readers Digest Sweepstake winner.

Moore was presented the check Wednesday afternoon.

Visitors Needn't Walk

Some of the Shriners visiting Virginia Beach this week-end will be riding in style. They'll be using the same cars the Miss American contestants used last week-end in Atlantic City.

Seventy sparkling Oldsmobiles arrived at the Civic Center Monday night for the specific purpose of being at the back and call of each visiting Potentate and his cabinet.

The automobiles are provided by the Oldsmobile Division of General Motors out of Detroit and were trucked down from New Jersey as soon as the beauty pageant was over.

Bill Rich, a representative of the firm's Group Selling Department, and Jerry Starkey, district service manager for the Washington, D. C. Area, took over the cars when they arrived and will have them in tip-top shining shape for the Shriners today.

Rich said the cars will be washed, serviced, filled with gas, even decalated with the proper emblems, ready to go. Compliments of Oldsmobile. Everything is in fact, new during the 4-day meeting.

Village Gallery is a picturesque combination of a modern octagonal building and an old domed dairy barn.

A portion of Bill Credle's exhibit.

Graphic Show Relaxing

The Village Gallery, Virginia Beach's latest addition to the fine arts, is located in a quaint, but beautifully decorated, converted dairy barn at the entrance to College Park.

The gallery is quiet and restrained in its decor, a perfect setting for the second All Graphic Show, which is now on display there and will continue through September 28. There is little to disturb the quiet in the show's subdued works. It is very relaxing.

Six area artists—W. J. Summerlin, Jan Robbins, Beatrice Ferguson, Frances Johnson, Thomas C. Green ("Shane") and Bill Credle—are participating in the show, each offering a bit of nostalgia and folklore in their work.

Most of the works follow a similar subject matter, old fishing boats, old buildings, old people, most in the graphic grays, sepia or black. But the show is not dull. It sparkles with the individuality of the artists' own taste.

There are several outstanding pieces of work: Frances Johnson's black child with the eyes that seem to follow is exceptional, as is her pin and ink of sailing craft. Bill Credle has a beautiful study of human nature in the weathered face of an old man and Bea Ferguson gives us a glimpse of the freedom of youth in the young boy playing in the hull of an abandoned boat.

"Shane", who has the most extensive exhibit in the show, breaks a bit from his usual battered boats and decaying buildings with a turn-of-the-century store front declaring "fine meat" which is sure to take the over-30 group into memories of the past and the Victorian home of Mrs. Ferguson will also revive the bygone era when Americans had less money but more time to spend on the truly valuable things in life.

The perfectly detailed animal portraits by Jan Robbins is obviously the work of a devoted animal lover. Her chimpanzee's face has depth and character seldom seen in animal works and the beguiling eyes of the cocker spaniels stay with you long after leaving the gallery. The efforts of Bill Summerlin are not quite in the same running with the other artists, and his subject matter is not necessarily good, but Summerlin, according to the program, is an artist suffering from chronic glaucoma and, after being totally blind for 18 months has only 20/200 vision in one eye. The fact that he can turn out such detailed work as the old gris mill and wildlife portraits such as the giraffe, cheetah and wildebeeste, is indeed an accomplishment. This artist is to be commended and encouraged to further this talent.

With the exception of Mrs. Ferguson's bold abstract flowers and a few nudes this All Graphic Show is thoroughly relaxing and undemanding. All of it blends together for an enjoyable Sunday afternoon.

And even those who don't necessarily appreciate art will enjoy a visit to the Village Gallery. It is very interesting and picturesque.

LAKE WRIGHT'S LATEST—Glenn Graham and Julianna Faucett star in the Broadway hit comedy "Sunday in New York" which opens Friday at the Lake Wright Dinner Theatre.

Theatre Group Celebrates New Season

The invitation said "Help us celebrate".

Members of the Virginia Beach Little Theatre didn't know what they were to celebrate—word still hasn't come from the city on whether or not assistance will be forthcoming for the new theatre building—but they gathered Saturday night at the home of Capt. and Mrs. John Sherman for a celebration party.

Midway through the evening Pres. Jim English made the announcement: "The Virginia Beach Little Theatre will have a season. We open our first play the end of October at the Bay Harbour Club."

It was welcome news to the theatre group. They had a "dark" season last year because of lack of theatre facilities, the first time in over 20 years they had not opened a five-play season in the fall.

Arrangements have now been made with the Bay Harbour Club, English explained, to give the group a "home" until the proposed building can be constructed.

Until Labor Day the Bay Harbour was a private club for members only. It was sold, along with the entire White Heron Motel properties, to Virginia Beach Enterprises, headed by Rhase Adams, and is now planned as a public supper club-type of facility.

"This will make us something of a dinner theatre," English commented.

The play which will launch the little theatre on this new venture will be Robert Anderson's hit "I Never Sang For My Father", a Broadway drama concerning the lack of understanding between a middle-aged son and his aging parents. Anderson is best known for his comedy "How Can I Hear You When the Water is Running".

The play will be directed by Larry Williams and produced by Herbert Harrell, who will also design the sets.

The Rhondels at Fair

Grandstand acts have been booked and final preparations for the fifth annual Greater Tidewater Fair are now in progress.

Fair Manager Steve M. Rose said he believes the three free grandstand acts will fill the 5,000 seats there.

Rose said a fair preview day is scheduled September 24 and the fair will run from Sept. 25 through October 3.

A horse show will be the first free attraction at the grandstand. It will be Sept. 25-27 from 7:30 until 9 p.m.

Bill Deal and the Rhondels, one of Tidewater's most sought after musical groups, will appear two nights at the same time.

The famed Joel Chitwood Auto Thrill Show will be held the next four nights.

Rose has obtained the James E. Strates Shows as the midway attraction. The Strates Shows were the 1968 mid-way attraction and the most popular ever to be here, according to Rose.

"We are now in the process of allotting space for 50 commercial exhibits," Rose said.

Vivian Blaine Is 'Zorba' Star

Vivian Blaine, popular Broadway and film star, will appear in the hit musical "Zorba the Greek" when it is presented at the Center Theatre September 25-26 for three performances.

The famous musical adaptation of the best-selling novel "Zorba the Greek" will be presented by Broadway Theatre Attractions and Rice's Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 and Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

It is the first show in the 1970-71 season and precedes a list of exciting touring shows for Tidewater. The schedule includes: the highly acclaimed musical "1776" on October 30-31; "Forty Carats", the smash hit comedy, on January 22-23; the blockbuster musical "George M" on February 26-27; and "Plaza Suite", and "The Out-of-Towners".

Season subscriptions are presently on sale at the box office. It is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mail orders may be sent to the theatre at 9th and Granby, Norfolk. Subscription prices for all five shows are $33, $29, and $25 for evening performances and $29, $25 and $21 for Saturday matinees.

Obedience Match Helps S.P.C.A.

An Obedience Fun Match is scheduled Oct. 11 for the benefit of the Virginia Beach S.P.C.A. The match which will be held at the James Barry Robinson School Athletic Field, is being sponsored by the Virginia Beach Dog Training Classes. Last year, at a similar match, enough money was made to purchase two badly needed cages for the S.P.C.A.

C&P Moves Into Larger Headquarters

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia will pack up all its "cans and wires" and away it will go this week-end into its new business office at the Mid-City Plaza.

The still brand-new plaza is located on Virginia Beach Boulevard across from Chesapeake Colony. The C&P building is at 280 Mustang Trail, at the rear of Beach Ford.

The Telephone operation has been in its offices on Laskin Road, between Atlantic and Pacific Avenues, since November 1, 1968. The building was, in fact, built specifically for them by Dr. Bernard Battelman, sources said, and is presently owned by A. Gordon Stephenson.

Also in the Laskin Road building is a book and magazine store and the offices of an optometrist.

The C&P lease will not expire until October 31, according to manager L. Floyd Patrick. "That will give us plenty of time to move everything out."

Nothing has yet been confirmed on what will be done with the building vacated by C&P. Stephenson said that negotiations are under way but that no lease has been signed and until that is done no public announcement will be made.

There is speculation that these negotiations are with First and Merchants Bank, which adjoins the property, but officials at the bank were also hesitant to reveal plans until a legal commitment has been made.

The move to the new headquarters building became necessary because of the unusual growth of C&P has experienced in Virginia Beach in the past 10 years, Patrick said.

In 1960 there were 14,137 main telephone stations in the city, he said. This year the company has 49,683 stations in Virginia Beach, an increase of 35,526 stations.

"And we expect in the next five years to increase this figure by 26,842 for an unprecedented high of 76,505 main stations," Patrick predicted.

Because of the new business office, there will be a change in the company's telephone numbers for both Virginia Beach residence and business customers.

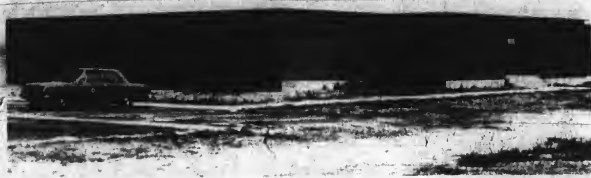

Residence customers whose telephone numbers begin with 340, 428, 486, 490, 480, 497, 423, 484, or 499 should dial 486-9911 for customer service. Business customers should dial 625-9911.

Patrick suggested that page 3A be removed from the telephone directory and destroyed as of Sunday since the information on this page will no longer be applicable.

C&P customers are also reminded that the Laskin Road Office is permanently closed as of 5 p.m. Friday.

Kirkpatrick Is Elected

Charles C. Kirkpatrick, president of Rosewood Memorial Park, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the Pre-Need Interment Association of Virginia.

The Association, which is the fourth largest national cemetery association in the country, promotes the pre-need selling of cemetery services and provides literature to educate the public on what can happen to an estate when provisions have not been made in advance.

Kirkpatrick is also president of the Virginia Cemetery Association and a director of the Southern Cemetery Association. He has been appointed program chairman for the next convention, which will be held in Atlanta.

City Has Low Flood Insurance

Congressman Thomas N. Downing announced Friday that the City of Virginia Beach is now qualified under the subsidized flood insurance program.

Under this program, owners of existing one to four family residences and small businesses may buy flood insurance from their local insurance agents at a low subsidized rate.

This is the Government's new emergency flood insurance program.

Virginia Beach, became qualified when it agreed to adopt land use and control measures which will minimize flood damage to future construction.

Local insurance agents may obtain policies and other information from the National Flood Insurers Association Servicing Office. The address is Insurance Company of North America, 2133 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C.

Whitehurst

Shop Is Answer to Dream

For most people, a shoe tree is something to be taken for granted, but for Robert Lee Whitehurst the Shoe Tree is the result of years of work and is a dream come true.

Whitehurst, who became a polo victim at the age of three, Monday opened the Shoe Tree, a new shoe repair shop on 22nd Street, after 17 years apprenticeship in the shoe repair trade.

"The state rehabilitation people got me the job 17 years ago and I began to get on the job training," he said. "I worked for one man for 15 years, and then decided to start my own business."

Opening the business makes Whitehurst feel good. "Because I'm doing something with my handiwork and working," he said.

"I've always wanted to go into this business, because as long as people are living they'll have to wear shoes, and if you get into this trade you've got it made," Whitehurst said.

Despite the size of the heavy repair machines and the whirling belts, Whitehurst said, he feels no danger while working around them. "If you're careful and pay attention, you won't get into trouble."

At 41, Whitehurst says the shoe repair trade may be in trouble, but not because people don't come in anymore. "There aren't too many young people going into the business."

"And the manufacturers are making shoes today that can be thrown away if the people want. People just don't want to hang on to things any longer or take care of them."

The most expensive shoes people are going to have fixed and pick up, but the ones Whitehurst worries about are those who bring a pair in for repair and leave them. "We have to hang on to them in case the customer comes back for them, but later if he doesn't, then we try to sell them."

"That's why some shops look kind of junky," he said. "They've got old shoes laying around that nobody's picked up."

Whitehurst said that if business begins to build, he'll have to take in a "junior partner" for the Shoe Tree. "My brother is really happy to see me doing well and this, and said if I need help he'll go to work with me and learn the trade."

"It's like a family business, I guess, because everybody has helped get it going. My sister-in-law made the curtains, and my brothers helped me get the shop set up and the place painted," he said.

Even the name is a contribution. "I thought about calling it Bob's Shoe Repair, he said,

"but the daughter of Mrs. Woodhouse, the lady I called about a building, suggested the Shoe Tree. I like it and I couldn't turn her down."

"They've been good to me and I want to show my appreciation," he said.

"Now all I have to do is get the tree with shoes on it painted on the glass and I'm set," he said.

Center Director Named

J. M. Underwood, president of Education Systems, Inc. of Virginia Beach, has announced the appointment of Miss Linda Call Wilson, a native of Portsmouth, as director of his firm's new and modern day care facilities to be in operation soon throughout Tidewater area.

Miss Wilson attended East Carolina University where she received a B.S. degree in primary education. She is also certified to teach special education. Since her graduation from college, she has been engaged in the field of elementary school education.

Education Systems' first day care center is now under construction in Portsmouth and is expected to be open for classes in early October. It is a safety engineered building, utilizing the most modern safeguards available. The one-story masonry building will house three spacious play areas, restroom facilities, a modern kitchen and clinic. Spacious enclosed play areas have also been provided outside the structure.

Miss Wilson plans activities for children which closely compare to preschool facilities. Hot lunches and snacks will be served. Anticipated hours will be from 7:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., and enrollment will be on a weekly basis. Half day or full day care can be arranged.

Underwood stated, "It is the intent and policy of Education Systems, Inc. to find the finest talent available to staff our centers. We also attempt to find key individuals who are familiar with the communities where they will be employed. This policy of quality with local flavor is one of the principle reasons for us to be one of the local pioneers in the child care field. Miss Wilson is one of these double-faceted individuals, and we are very pleased to have her with us."

Those interested in further information may contact Miss Wilson by phoning Virginia Beach 425-8253. Correspondence may be directed to Education Systems, Inc., P.O. Box 961, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451.

To 'His Honor'

Mayor Frank A. Dusch this week stepped down from the office he has held for sixteen years to make way for a younger and more progressive man. There were many who understood his reasons, for he has given much of himself, but were saddened by his action.

"His Honor", as he has long been known to his friends, has lived and breathed the mayorship ever since he took office. There has been little more important to him than fulfilling this responsibility to the very best of his ability. He has done it unselfishly and with sincere enjoyment. He is not by nature an aggressive person but he has never failed to vote on an issue, nor has he ever turned away from a person with an opinion contradictory to his own.

The office of Mayor Dusch has for sixteen years been open to any citizen of Virginia Beach who needed his help. It was not a part-time job to him. He has insisted that council hear from anyone who wanted to speak before them. It has many times been most trying but every citizen, right or wrong

In his stand knew he was welcome to voice his views. Few cities of the size of Virginia Beach are so tolerant.

Frank A. Dusch has been the only mayor the city created by the merger between Virginia Beach and old Princess Anne County has ever known. He has stood at the helm when the going was rough but in his own easy way survived the storm.

No job has ever been too large or too small. He has cut more ribbons than any one man should ever be subjected to and has signed enough proclamations to last a lifetime. But he also stood knee-deep in polluted water on Atlantic Avenue during the Ash Wednesday storm of 1962 to help evacuate people from the flooded areas. He has been that kind of mayor.

His tenure as the city's leader has ended. But, at a spry seventy-three years of age, he will still be in there pitching for Virginia Beach as councilman and his many friends seriously doubt that "His Honor" has any intention of slowing down.

A Great Challenge

The city this week fell under the leadership of Donald H. Rhodes, a young and aggressive attorney, as mayor and Earl M. Tebault, a quiet but knowledgeable representative of the agricultural community, as vice mayor. Mr. Rhodes is a novice as public official having been elected in June, while Mr. Tebault is more experienced.

This is the exact reverse of the situation four years ago when newcomer Robert H. Cromwell took the office second to long time mayor Frank A. Dusch. They made a good team as surely as Rhodes and Tebault will but the new mayor and vice mayor step into pretty large shoes.

It certainly is no easy task to lead a city as large and as infantile as Virginia Beach--infantile in that its development is still practically embryonic compared to its potential and growing pains are as inevitable as the tides that plaque the Erosion Commission. The city needs a strong hand to guide it. It needs strong leadership. And it needs fair and just treatment of its citizens.

Into this leadership steps Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Tebault. They have their work cut out for them.

Welcome Back, Shriners

It's been several years since the city was given the opportunity to welcome the Shriners for their annual Mid-Atlantic Conference which begins today, but the enthusiasm with which our citizens throw themselves into the event is everywhere. Red, white, blue and golden yellow banners fly from almost every shop, restaurant, and motel as the Shriners begin their three-day festivities, replete with songfests, precision drilling exhibitions, and colorful parades.

And while all of these festival activities may seem to sum up the Shriners, it is only a surface impression, for the good that these men do is evident each time a crippled child is able to walk or a severely burned youngster lives.

But then, after a year's labor, we should all have out "three days in the sun," and the shriners won't be any different.

After a summer of hearing about the problems of the city, dealing with hippies, reduced business, and all the other complaints, it's going to be refreshing change to see between 15,000 and 30,000 people having fun, producing only good for anyone.

Church Coverage

To the Editor:

This is to thank the Virginia Beach Sun for its steady, excellent coverage of the many activities at Galilee Episcopal Church for the past year.

Carelyn McAllen has always given us woman's coverage that has included features and pictures, and we can't thank Les Lehigh too effusively for his coverage of the church in that Rev. Roger Green had as a children's summer program. It takes the place of our regular Sunday School services which begin next week.

Appreciates Help

To the Editor:

Only the pressure of two additional shows immediately following our recent Antiques Show and Sale at The Dome in Virginia Beach has kept me from writing this note to you sooner.

I do want to thank you for the wonderful publicity given to us in both the Virginia Beach Sun and The Windjammer and to their efforts on our behalf. I know the articles in these papers went a long way to bring our show to the attention of your readers.

Our show was a huge success and much of the credit must be given to the wonderful people, like yourselves, who are associated with the various beach publications.

We shall be back again next year for our Special Annual Summer Antiques Show and Sale at The Dome and will be in touch with you at that time.

Once again, our sincerest thanks and appreciation for your efforts on our behalf. Beverly Muskat Salisbury, Maryland.

Surfers Praised

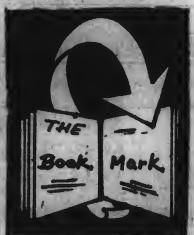

To the Editor:

As a spectator at the recent, surfing tournament at Camp Pendleton, I would like to commend all the young people connected with the tournament. The Virginia Beach Jaycees, the Police, and the Auxiliary Police had covered every base in their preparations to see that all went smoothly.

The surfers and thousands of young spectators behaved so beautifully that I was embarrassed at my own amazement. Too many of my generation see long hair and expect bad manners or disorderly conduct. The boys and girls were quiet, polite, and neat. They left the beach cleaner than they had found it. Part of the credit goes to radio station WNOR, whose disc jockeys constantly reminded the spectators to put trash into the barrels provided. In two days, I saw not the slightest inkling of drinking or drugs. Surfers seem to walk with a smile and a bounce. They were an inspiration to my own children.

My only regret was that more older people were not there to see for themselves. But then, how many of 30 would be willing to walk the half-mile from parking lot to beach to bake all day on the hot sand while others were in the water?

Governor Holton joins me in thanking the Jaycees for a most enjoyable two days. MRS. LINWOOD HOLTON Richmond

FAMILY PORTRAIT, by Catherine Drinker Bowen, Boston, Little, Brown, 1970, $7.50

Catherine Drinker Bowen, the biographer of Justice Holmes, John Adams, Francis Bacon and Tchaikovsky turns to her own gifted family in this appealing autobiographical work. The daughter of a successful engineer who later became president of Lehigh University, Mrs. Bowen was the youngest child. Her brothers were all talented and brilliant. Philip Drinker invented the iron lung and was a consultant to the U. S. Navy. Cecil was a physiologist internationally known for his study of the lymphatic system, and Harry, the oldest, won fame both as a labor lawyer and a musicologist.

Mrs. Bowen writes of the family with affection and candor, starting with the 18th century Drinkers down to the present time, sparing no details of family tragedies and sorrows. It was a hardworking, hard-playing family, meeting people accomplished in the arts, education and business. Of her own life, she barely skims the surface; much is left unsaid. A delightfully written book about an extremely talented family and enthusiastically recommended.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell, Ph.D.

Our Supreme Court has come in for its share of lumps recently. Mr. Justice Fortas resigned under pressure, the Senate refused to approve Judges Hainesworth and Carswell after they were nominated by the President.

Now it looks like Mr. Justice Douglas will have a job on his hands to keep from being impeached. It must be very upsetting to the other Justices and prospective Justices to see all this going on.

Of course, a lot of trouble is brought on by those involved. In the case of Mr. Justice Douglas I think even his supporters will agree that he has given his opponents just cause for concern.

As an example, Ralph Ginsburg, who is editor and publisher of a number of magazines, recently published an article written by Mr. Justice Douglas. The article seemed innocent enough and was titled "Appeal to Folk Singing: A Landmark Decision."

The article was in the Ginsburg publication Avant Garde and followed one entitled: "The Decline and Fall of the Female Briest." For this work of art, Mr. Justice Douglas was paid $350.

What makes this somewhat questionable is that Ralph Ginsburg has had two cases against him before the Supreme Court and each time, Mr. Justice Douglas has cast his vote in favor of Mr. Ginsburg and his cause.

In 1963 Mr. Ginsburg was charged with sending an obscene publication, one "EROS," through the mails and convicted and sentenced to five years imprisonment. In a 5 to 4 vote, with Mr. Justice Douglas dissenting, the court affirmed the decision.

In another publication, one "FACT" Mr. Ginsburg did a political hatchet job on Senator Goldwater during the 1964 election campaign called "The Unconscious of the Conservative: A special issue on the Mind of Barry Goldwater." In this article the Senator was classified as severely paranoid personality and psychologically unfit to be President.

The Senator sued Mr. Ginsburg and was granted $75,000 by a federal court. When this reached the Supreme Court, it declined to review the case and let the judgement stand. Mr. Justice Douglas again dissented on the side of Mr. Ginsburg.

Title 23, U. S. Code, Section 455 states that a judge should disqualify himself in any case which he has a substantial interest in, etc.

Another example is the connection of Mr. Justice Douglas with the Albert Parvin Foundation. The connection was a substantial one as Mr. Justice Douglas was named, in 1961 while on the court, a life member of the board, elected as its President and voted a salary of $12,000 a year plus expenses. To many, that is substantial.

Mr. Parvin was a part owner of the Hotel Flamingo, Inc., which operated the hotel and gambling casino in Las Vegas, Nev. He was a business associate of Bugs Siegal, the gangster, also with Meyer Lansky, one of the country's top gangsters. Mr. Parvin once paid Mr. Lansky a $200,000 fee for his services.

There seems to be evidence that Mr. Justice Douglas assisted in setting up the foundation, which was incorporated in New York. If he did draft the articles of incorporation, he was in violation of Title 23, section 454, U. S. Code, which states that "any justice or judge appointed under the authority of the U. S. who engages in the practice of law is guilty of a high misdemeanor."

Another example is the little black book with the autographs, "WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS," written on the cover in RED, entitled "POINTE OF REBELLION." This thesis by Mr. Justice Douglas is that violence may be justified and perhaps only the revolutionary overthrow of the "Establishment" can save the country.

Mr. J. in and out of the government, have expressed the opinion that it is not proper for a Justice of the Supreme Court to give sympathetic encouragement to the fanatics who espouse the militant method.

Of course, Mr. Justice Douglas has other little goodies in his background. His close association with Bobby Baker and the president of the Dominican Republic, Juan Bosch, has upset others.

No doubt what upset many was Mr. Justice Douglas reportedly giving Mr. Parvin legal advice on dealing with the Internal Revenue investigation of the foundation. Yes, Mr. Justice Douglas has given his opponents a lot to think about.

Mount Trashmore

Already Famous

If the city is really thinking seriously about changing the name of Mount Trashmore, they should give it second thoughts. The citizens of Virginia Beach don't want it changed. They like the name Mount Trashmore!

The readers voted this opinion unanimously in answer to last week's question "Do you think the city should rename Mount Trashmore?"

As one reader has pointed out, the city's unique refuse disposal received national recognition earlier this month on the 6 p.m. ABC news. This kind of national advertising money can't buy.

Another reader agreed when he commented "The name is Mount Trashmore. It is nationally famous. Why change it?"

The readers who so strongly favored keeping its rather unusual name undoubtedly have

City Council this week elected the city's new leaders--Donald Rhodes as mayor and Earl Tebault as vice mayor. There was much confusion and many barbed remarks made at this first session which is probably to be expected when a new regime takes over. But it brought to mind the actual lack of power the two top officials have under the city manager form of government.

So far as we know there is not a city of any size in the state that has any other form of government...in fact the city manager arrangement was actually started in Staunton, Va. But the nations larger cities, such as New York and Los Angeles, have a mayor elected by the people and he is the voter's choice and this system has been effective with the larger cities.

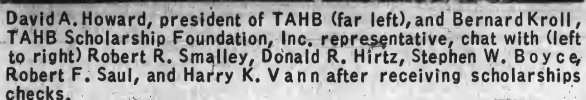

Would such a system work in Virginia Beach?

This was brought out by an announcement at Tuesday's School Board meeting that first graders would be rolled this year than last—the first drop in number in the city. School Supt. E. E. Brickell said that other parts of the state had already reported decreased enrollments attributed to the introduction of busing. But he said that in this area, busing was not the factor.

Brickell added that current projection of school needs would have to be revised. Extra classrooms are already available through the modified scheduling plan in the high schools. He said that the decrease in students continues when current first graders reach high school in eight years only two might be needed. This Carroll said, however, that the four quarter school operated for economics alone met with little success because:

Two More Killed In Wrecks

Two Virginia Beach men met death in separate auto accidents which occurred within 24 hours last weekend.

Police officials say George S. Twiddy, 41, of Virginia Beach Blvd., was fatally injured about 5:30 p.m. last Friday when the car in which he was a passenger careened out of control and slammed into a tree on Southern Blvd. near the intersection of M. Lynnhaven Road.

Authorities also said Gordon D. Crumpler, 52, 29th Street, was fatally injured about 5:30 p.m. Saturday when the car he was driving swerved off Princess Anne Road near Flanagan Road, struck a tree and came to rest in several bushes.

According to investigators Twiddy was a passenger in the car being driven by his 13-year-old daughter Connie Ruth, who received broken legs, neck and chest injuries in the accident. Hospital officials listed her as being in fair condition.

Twiddy's 6-year-old son, Richard Paul, who was also a passenger in the auto is reported making satisfactory recovery from internal injuries he received in the accident.

A passenger in the Crumpler auto, identified as Tridie W. Dees, 57, also of 28th Street, is reported recovering from fractured ribs and multiple contusions she received in the accident which claimed his life. Police officials listed Twiddy as the 25th traffic fatality of the year in Virginia Beach, while Crumpler's death was listed as the 26th traffic fatality of the year in the resort city.

Accused Killers Get Counsel

Robert Lee Woody and Fayette Tillman, Jr., both of Norfolk, charged by Virginia Beach Police with the murder of Samuel W. Jones appeared before Municipal Court Judge P. B. White Monday for the appointment of defense counsel.

Judge White appointed W. Edwards Hodgins, Jr., to represent Woody, and James A. Gorry III to represent Tillman. Judge White also set Sept. 28 as date of preliminary hearing for both suspects, and ordered them remanded to the city jail in lieu of bond which he earlier set at $25,000 each.

Norfolk lawyer James B. Powers, who had said he would represent both Woody and Tillman, withdrew as defense counsel last Sunday.

Powers said he was withdrawing from the case because of possible conflict in that he felt Woody and Tillman, should be represented by separate counsel.

Jones, 52, and his wife Jane, 49, of Hastings Arch were first reported missing Sept. 4, when according to neighbors, they took two prospective buyers for their 28-foot sailing trimaran for a test cruise in Chesapeake Bay.

The wreckage of the boat was found on rocks of the third island of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel several hours after daybreak on Sept. 5. Woody and Tillman were identified by bridge tunnel police as two men who crawled onto the bridge from the island rocks about 2 a.m. that day saying an 18-foot sailboat they had purchased earlier had crashed onto the island.

A fisherman discovered the bodies of Jones and his wife Sept. 8, near the Little Creek jetty. Police said the bodies were tied together with a length of boat anchor chain. An autopsy report from the State Medical Examiners' Office said both had died of strangulation. Jones was killed with a length of parachute cord around his throat, and his wife was killed with two handkerchiefs and a boat pennant.

The Medical Examiners' Office reported Jones was identified through a check of dental records, while his wife, Jane was identified through personal belongings and scars on her body.

Virginia Beach Det. Sgt. E. F. Buzby and Det. Allen Sinclair arrested Woody shortly before midnight Sept. 8, at his home in Norfolk and charged him with the murder of Jones.

About the time the bodies of the Jones' were located, a team of divers from the Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Group, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, Ft. Story, working with Virginia Beach police, were searching around the third island for wreckage of the sailboat Woody and Tillman claimed had crashed.

Divers failed to produce any sign of the sailboat. Officials said, however, an outboard motor and debris positively identified as coming from the trimaran owned by the Jones was found by divers in the vicinity of the third island Wednesday.

Tillman, accompanied by lawyer Powers arrived at Virginia Beach police headquarters late Sept. 9, and surrendered himself. He was charged with the murder of the Jones.

At this time Powers said he intended to represent both Woody and Tillman in legal proceedings against them, both of whom had been scheduled to appear in Municipal Court last Friday. With Powers serving as defense counsel for both men it eliminated the necessity of their appearance before Judge White on Sept. 11, since that appearance originally was scheduled for appointment of counsel. Judge White did set, however, Sept. 25 as date of preliminary hearing for both Woody and Tillman and set their bond at $25,000 each.

During Monday's proceedings Judge White rescheduled their preliminary hearings for Monday, Sept. 28. Woody and Tillman are both in custody at city jail in lieu of bond.

Man Held In Stabbing Crack-Down Continues

Robert McLean, Jr., 43, of Snowden apartments on Washington Avenue, is scheduled to return to Virginia Beach Municipal Court on Oct. 12, charged with murder in the death of Kelly Otto Winborne.

According to authorities Winborne, 43, of Parks Avenue, was stabbed shortly before midnight last Saturday night outside Cooker's Cafe in the 800 block 17th Street.

Investigators quote a witness with saying Winborne and another man were arguing over money inside the cafe, and were seen leaving the cafe together. A few moments later Winborne was found lying on the ground outside the building. He was taken to Virginia Beach General Hospital where he succumbed to stab wounds a short time later.

McLean will be represented in legal proceedings by his court appointed attorney Paul. Burtage, He was last reported in custody at the city jail, and thus far there had been no request for the setting of bond.

7 Arrested For Drugs

Seven men were arrested by Virginia Beach police this past week for violations of State narcotic and drug control laws.

Police officials identified those arrested, and their respective charges, as: Gerald Alan Cohen, 20, S. Club House Road, possession of marijuana and possession of stimulant drugs with intent to sell; Ronald Alvin Shure, 23, S. Club House Road, possession of marijuana and possession of stimulant drugs with intent to sell; Ernest Raymond Hardy, 26, 16th Street, possession of amphetamine and possession of marijuana; Michael Alan Quinlan, 19, 16th Street, three counts of the sale of LSD; John Edward Perkins, 20, Virginia Avenue, Norfolk, possession of marijuana; Martin Earl Bright, 24, Ethel Avenue, Norfolk, possession of marijuana; and George Warren Franklin, 23, Gloucester, Va., sale of marijuana.

No Answer Found for Fish Kill

Several sources have said thousands of fish washing ashore in the Little Creek area last Sunday may have been the result of action by commercial fishermen.

An estimated 20,000 fish, most of the spot species, were found on a three mile stretch of beach west of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

One source has been quoted with saying the fish washed ashore from the net of a commercial fisherman who apparently caught a larger quantity of the fish than he was able to handle on his boat.

The State Water Control Board has joined a number of other agencies in investigating the cause of the fish kill. These investigations thus far show no signs of a pollutant being responsible for the incident, or exactly what may have been the responsible factor.

Star of Sea Assn. Meets

Parents will be invited to tour classrooms of the school where they may examine material which will be used in classroom instruction.

The Star of the Sea Home and School Association will hold its first meeting of the year next Wednesday, at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

The meeting will feature a "get to know you" program including a presentation by the new Sister Marie Eloise, followed by a question and answer period.

Car Could Play Role In Murder

According to police this car has not yet been located and it could play an important role in the case investigation. Anyone who may have information concerning such a vehicle is asked to contact the Virginia Beach police Detective Division.

It's great for Russia, but...

By CAROLYN McALLEN

While watching a fashion show Tuesday, I finally realized what has been bothering me about the fall fashions since they were first publicized—they're straight from the Kremlin 10 years ago.

Now don't get me wrong. There were some beautiful clothes shown at the Tidewater District Federation of Garden Club's "Fall Fashions" show presented at the Civic Center by Miller and Rhoads.

But it was just too much of long skirts, boots, fur hats, dark stockings and dull colors.

The commentator, the store's fashion director from Richmond, was wearing a severe hair style, a navy blue coat dress (midi length) with flared skirt, stand-up collar and brass buttons, navy shoes and navy stockings. I almost expected her to march in and salute.

Colors were mostly brown, black, purple and gray, with a few plaids thrown in to liven things up. Bright colors were absent except for a turquoise evening gown. Incidentally, "midi" was pronounced "me-dee" throughout.

Ladies at the show were advised that their first purchase should be a longer coat.

They were also told that there are "few places today where a woman wouldn't feel comfortable in pants." With them wear turtleneck shirts. "There's nothing more flattering than a pant suit."

Pants are not just pants. They come in a variety of forms—pant suits, gaucho pants which are really a combination skirt and pants, and jump suits.

Capes are "in", jackets are shorter and heels are higher.

Many of the midi skirts were relieved by a split or button front, which was open higher than many mini skirts.

Yet!

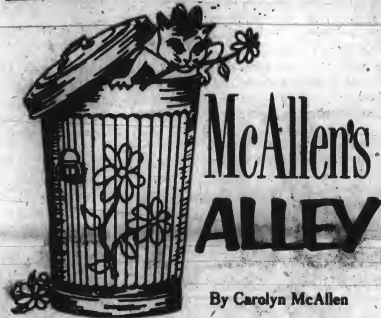

A gray flannel gaucho dress with tan suede belt, tan stockings and tan hat.

This plaid out fit featured a cape over a plaid jacket over plaid pants for a layered look.

Long skirts were suggested for at-home wear, and this plaid one was combined with a white turtleneck.

It's not fair

"What's that stuff with the raisins in it?"

"That's cream cheese and pineapple juice."

"Ugh."

"Now hush. You said you were tired of peanut butter and jelly for lunch every day."

"I won't eat it."

"Okay, Steve."

"What's wrong with the bread?"

"There's nothing wrong with it. It's whole wheat bread. I thought you'd like it for a change."

"I won't eat it."

"You sure are going to get hungry this week then."

"Betty and Bill won't eat it either."

"Fine, I'll save money on lunches."

"Why can't I have a banana like you put in Bill's lunch box?"

"Because only one was ripe. He's got a loose tooth so I didn't want to give him an apple."

"I don't want an apple. I want raisins."

"We don't have any more raisins. You finished them yesterday."

"You're a mean mommy."

"I sure am."

"How come Bill gets a snack and I don't?"

"All the first graders get snacks. You got one last year."

"It's not fair."

"Complain to your principal."

"Can I have bologna instead of that stuff?"

"You can have what everybody else has. What do you think this is, a restaurant? I can't fix five different kinds of sandwiches every day."

"I want to buy my lunch."

"Too bad. In the first place it would cost a dollar a day for the three of you. In the second place, I wouldn't trust you with the lunch money."

"It's not fair."

"It sure isn't."

Forum opens schedule

The Virginia Beach Y.W.C.A. will kick off its fall schedule with a forum on "Crime and Drugs—Here and Now" by Joseph L. Lyle, Jr., at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 22. Coffee is a half hour earlier.

The forum will be at the United Communities Fund Service Center in the Princess Theatre Building.

In addition, registration for all classes will be Tuesday also. A full schedule can be obtained from the Y. W. C. A. office.

Past suffers from present

Progress in endangering our past, according to Col. Howard A. MacCord Sr., historian-archaeologist with the Virginia State Library.

Col. MacCord, who spoke to the Princess Anne Country Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, is in charge of locating, identifying and classifying pre-historic sites in Virginia to fill in the gaps of Indian history.

"Maybe some of the things we know as true today will be proved not true in the future," commented Col. MacCord, who works with the State Library since the proposed Virginia State Museum is still in the planning stages.

As an indication of his devotion to his work, Col. MacCord arrived wearing a tee shirt, tie and coat in his car before going into the meeting. He had stopped by some road construction near Suffolk as he was driving from Richmond to investigate the possibility of finding Indian artifacts. "Sure enough, I did. I'm going back there now."

He told of one interesting find near Franklin which, for a time, was thought to be a clue to the fate of the Lost Colony settlers. The skeleton of a woman was found buried flat on her back, a departure from normal Indian burials. In addition she was buried with beads, scissors and an iron nail, things the Indians did not have.

The findings were sent to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C. for evaluation. "We thought it might be a Lost Colony survivor," said Col.

MacCord. "But the Smithsonian report said she was not a good Indian but not a good white person either. She was a mixed breed."

Col. MacCord said that the Spanish settlement and exploration of Virginia is one of the most neglected parts of the state's history. He said that there was a Spanish settlement near Jamestown 20 years before Jamestown was founded. A Spanish map of the area was found dated 1624. "Some day I'm going to write a history of Virginia that ends with Jamestown," quipped Col. MacCord.

He said that the Indians came to Virginia at least 10,000 years ago. "The evidence points toward Indians continuously since then. Indians are Mongolian people and came into America a long time ago during the last glacial period when they could walk over from Siberia. The coast of Virginia was 100 miles east of what it is now."

The dates of the Indians is proved by radio active carbon found in campfires built in caves. The oldest found in the Eastern United States is 12,000 years old near New York City.

"The Indians were Stone Age hunters—the same as our ancestors were 10,000 years ago. Anything that was edible they found and ate. The most common relics we find are stone spear heads. They lived a monadic foraging way of life for thousands of years while they looked for the next meal."

"That way of life changed when they learned to make bows and arrows and cook pots and learned how to plant seeds. Then they had greater control of their food supplies and could have a surplus. They had more variety and could count on having food. They had a population explosion because the land could support more people. They still moved every 20 years or so when the land was worked out."

Col. MacCord said that a lot is known about the Indians in this area because John Smith drew a map of Tidewater showing Cape Henry, the Lynnhaven river and Dismal Swamp. It also showed the sites of 160 Indian Villages. In addition, John Wythe, with the Lost Colony, painted many scenes showing the Indian way of life.

"There are lots of archaeological challenges in Virginia. The most common find is pottery, then arrowheads, shells in this area (Tidewater) and animal bones. Pots are different shapes and sizes in different parts of the state. Our goal is to be able to identify any tribe by the different remains."

He said that a lot can be discovered from Indian burial sites. Contrary to popular belief, he said, the Indians were not buried with a lot of relics. However, much could be discovered about them from their remains—sex, height, approximate weight, the fact that most of them suffered from disease of one kind or another. Most of them had bone disease. Every adult over 25 had arthritis. Their life expectancy was short. At one site where 100 graves were found, only one skeleton of a man over 50 years old was found. They all had bad teeth, and many had severe abscesses. Of the 100, only one died of an injury. There were many cases of tuberculosis and syphilis of the bones. Many infants and young women were buried there.

To dig up relics Col. MacCord used a small piece of pointed bamboo stick and a small paint brush. He says it takes 10-12 hours to uncover them. "I hate to find a skeleton," he admitted wryly. They take too much work. He also gets volunteer help from the state Archeological Society, which he calls his "right arm."

On a farm in Caroline County an English copper coin with a 1672 date on it was found and near it was a Spanish silver coin with an 1662 date. Also there were some 3,000 fragments of pottery, and a flintlock gun. Col. MacCord said an Indian family had lived in a cabin on the land about 1680. This was after the settlement of Jamestown. Also found there was a medalion inscribed "Ye King of Machotick," which was one of a number of similar ones presented to all the Indian chiefs by an early governor of Virginia.

Plowing has disturbed many of the sites, and road construction and civilization have destroyed more than 300 sites in the state that need to be dug," said Col. MacCord. "I can dig about six a year so I've got another 50 years of work."

As an afterthought he added, "By the end of this century, they'll be gone."

An unusual combination of gray wool knit was combined with a white satin panel for an evening jump suit.

Activities outlined

Cape Henry Woman's Club members received a pep talk along with an outline of Federation of Women's Club activities Thursday from Mrs. Norman L. Brown of Hampton, vice president of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs.

While following the general theme, "A Better Environment", the Federation will also devote special attention to:

Conservation: "What are you as individuals doing to stop pollution?"

Crafts: Therapy for youth and senior citizens in hospitals.

Pornography: "Know what movies your children are seeing."

Home Life: "Have church and God as basic needs."

Governments: "Know about the Constitutional amendments we will be voting on in November."

Mrs. Brown said that the first woman's club was founded 102 years ago by a woman who was indignant because she was not invited to a meeting where Charles Dickens was speaking. The Virginia Federation was chartered in 1907 and now has 440 clubs with a membership of more than 24,000 members.

Mrs. Brown pointed out that the Federation is "recognized as the most powerful lobbying force of women."

Thrift shop opens Tues.

A thrift shop will be sponsored by the Temple Emanuel Sisterhood from Sept. 22-Oct. 23 at 309 17th St., formerly the site of Moy's Restaurant.

The shop will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and will feature a wide variety of goods at low prices.

Parker-Mathias wedding

Miss Wanda Elizabeth Parker became the bride of Walter Thomas Mathias in a candle-light ceremony at 4:30 p.m. Sept. 12 at the First Baptist Church in Hickory, N.C. with Dr. J. Roy Robinson officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter James Parker of Hickory.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Roe Mathias of 23rd Street.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of candlelight organza over satin accented with peau d'ange lace trimmed with pearls. Appliques of lace and seed pearls also adorned the skirt and chapel train. A cathedral length veil of illusion fell from an ivory lace Juliet cap.

Miss Helen Craig Hammon of Hickory, N.C. was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Janet Faye Cobb of Chapel Hill, N.C., Miss Linda Kathleen Austin and Miss Margaret Gail Golden of Hickory and Miss Phyllis Anne Fox of Southern Pines, N.C.

James Grady Mathias of Virginia Beach was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Melvin Roe Mathias, Jr. and Robert Chenman of Virginia Beach, Carlos Daniel Jennings, III of Charlotte, N.C., and Julian Harris of Troutman, N.C.

Following a reception in the church Fellowship Hall, the couple left on a wedding trip to Atlanta, Ga. They will live in Burlington, N.C.

The bride is presently a senior at the University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy.

The bridegroom, a graduate of the University of North Carolina with a degree in chemistry, is an associate engineer at Western Electric in Greensboro, N.C.

Tradition enriches wedding

Rose Hall's BRIDAL LANE

"WHEN I AM GONE AND FAR AT SEA/FORGET NOT, LOVE, TO THINK OF ME"

During the 17th through the 19th centuries husbands carved bobbing for their wives to use in making beautiful lace to while away their time until the husbands returned from sea. Today, however, very little lace is handmade, and it is almost impossible to buy. Many families still have pieces carefully tucked away, and it is invaluable.

All the good lace we will ever have is in this world today, and we are its custodians. We should hand it down lovingly and tell our children something about its history and beauty.

Handmade lace is a token of the past and a nearly lost art. It is cherished through generations of a single family and is such a complex art that a diligent worker might produce no more than a third of an inch in a week.

The fine linen thread used in the composition of the finest laces is nearly extinct and what remains is so rare a woman who has a precious skein left for repair work will go so far as to keep it in a locked vault.

In our throw-away world of today, there are those who think hope chests and similar traditions are on the wane. Both are still around and we delight in the young ladies who follow or search for this trend. It's also an extreme joy to share it with them, as we recently did with Rose Hall's vibrant bride-to-be, Niki Christie.

Let's peek inside Niki's hope chest which is filled with handmade goodies. The really beautiful part is that these laces and crochets were begun for Niki when she was born so that she would have them when she got married. The big day is fast approaching and Niki will soon start transferring everything to her new home.

On her wedding day, Niki's ring bearer will carry the pillow shown here. It is not an ordinary ring bearer's pillow. Niki's mother, Mrs. Maria Christie, proudly explained the fine art of making the lace which borders and centers the pillow. Mrs. Christie began making the lace before Niki was born. It is an intricate and delicate design made with a tiny sewing needle and a skein of fine thread. It is a form of needlepoint lace referred to as "Punto in Aria" (made in the air). The stitches are made without any fabric background.

The literal definition of the term "heirloom" couldn't be more applicable since Niki is blessed with the hand-loomed treasures shown here. The bedspread is a story in itself. Niki's mother spent seven years crocheting the bedspread, and I know you are wondering why it took her so long to crochet an item even as large as this. We will explain.

Unsure at first...

Niki's grandmother, Mrs. Anna Jacovides, purchased "string" by the pound while in Europe. She needed five-strand yarn which called for five strings to be pulled together by hand and wound into balls. You will note in the picture the ball of string and mallet-type object on top of the bedspread. This mallet is what Mrs. Jacovides and Mrs. Christie used to spin the five strands together for the thread. This is done by rolling about 2" of string around the long handle, threading it through the metal hook at the top of the mallet, then giving it a sharp twist along her hip. This causes the mallet to spin while she feeds it the string, allowing it to weave itself together, thus giving her thread of the preferred consistency for crocheting.

Using this same method of weaving her thread together, Niki's grandmother spent six months crocheting the lace border on this bedspread. Out of thirteen granddaughters (daughters of her sons George and Jack, Mrs. Christie's daughters as well as the daughters of Theodosios and Nicholas Christie, nephews of Mrs. Christie, all of Virginia Beach), Mrs. Jacovides made 12 all- linen tablecloth bordered with an intricate designed crocheted lace for their hope chests. She died in March of 1969 before making one for the last grandchild, Peggy Jacovides. (See Tradition p. 9)

Inez (Mrs. John L.) Wascavage decided to accept her award with a smile after being named "Woman of the Year" for the Kempsville Woman's Club Tuesday. Mrs. Wascavage received her award from Mrs. Frances Newbern, chairman, for her work as second vice president and ways and means chairman of the club.

Shops for the Ladies and their Daughters

When you're not like yourself, Lydia Pinkham understands

All of a sudden you might feel you're changing—not a good feeling. You're tired, edgy, out of sorts and that's not you. Lydia Pinkham understands.

A long time ago, when ladies couldn't be as frank as we can today, Lydia Pinkham recognized the problem and set about finding a remedy. She knew it was not natural for women to have to suffer with what was obviously a natural process.

So she turned to nature for a remedy. She developed a marvelous compound of medicinal roots and herbs that turned the trick for the women she knew. Because it is a natural answer to your natural problems, it can turn the trick for you, too.

Try Lydia Pinkham's root and herb remedy to help you feel better, more like yourself.

If there is anything that benefits children it is patience and I think that you sometimes lack sufficient patience for a teacher. Some of the things I feel you would do quite well at are: selling fashions, decorating, designing, in fact anything that involves the nature of Venus (beauty, art, etc.), since it is very well aspected by the planet Mars and where it will be a definite asset as far as finances are concerned. There are many things you could do since you are a determined, capable person. I am not sure why you chose teaching, but I would consider other things before getting too far into it.

Lynnhaven

Business combined with candlemaking started the new year off with a bang for the Lynnhaven Garden Club in September with the new president, Mrs. T. N. Wood, presiding.

Mrs. Homer Fallman gave a very interesting and informative demonstration on candlemaking, explaining many methods and types of candles that can be successfully created by adding bees wax to regular household wax and coloring it to suit the individual color scheme.

The therapy chairman reported clothing and other articles taken to patients at Dumbur.

Arrangements in a Sea Shell were created by several members. Horticultural blue ribbons went to Mrs. W. I. Gresham, two; Mrs. W. E. Smith, one, and Mrs. Wood, one.

Kingston

The Kingston Garden Club held its first meeting of the season this week at the King's Grant Presbyterian Church. G. B. Straley, VPI Extension Agent, spoke on "Grass and Lawn Care." He discussed ways to remedy damage from the currently widespread army worms, as well as explaining difficulties of maintaining a lawn in the Tidewater area. His talk was followed by a question and answer period.

Prospective guests welcomed by the president, Mrs. K. E. Dearman, were Mrs. John Kilkeny, Mrs. George McGovern, Mrs. William Brush, Mrs. Richard White, Mrs. C. E. Swecker, Mrs. Charles Mansfield, Mrs. C. T. Dean and Mrs. Donald Roy. Recognition was given to Mrs. Robert Fagan, a returning charter member.

A blue ribbon for artistic exhibit was awarded to Mrs. David C. Harwell, in horticulture, blue ribbons went to Mrs. E. L. Greenwood, Mrs. C. E. Peverall, Mrs. Richard Rosche and Mrs. John Torbush.

Lynnhaven African Violet

The Lynnhaven African Violet Society had a slide program entitled "The Trend is Miniature" at the September meeting at the home of Mrs. Carl Salland, who also narrated the slides.

Blue ribbons for violets were won by Mrs. C. L. Hersherberger, Sr., two; Mrs. Salland, two, and Mrs. Nelson Charlton, one. Blue ribbons for arrangements went to Mrs. Curtis Diggs and Mrs. Dorothy Nichols.

Mrs. Salland won a subscription to the national African violet magazine for having earned the most points in the 1969-70 club year. Mrs. Hersherberger won second prize, her dues for the club year. Mrs. Diggs also won a magazine subscription for having the most points for arrangements.

However, Peggy and the other granddaughters received lovely lace bordered dollies, crocheted lace for their hope chests as well as for birthday and Christmas gifts.

This was obviously a lifetime project for Mrs. Jacovides since her daughters were given similar gifts prior to and after their marriages, but other items much more involved which we will explain below.

Niki and her mother have identical tablecloths made in the pattern shown here underneath all the other items. A matching buffet scarf is also a part of her hope chest with dozens of napkins to match. The tablecloth has a valentine design and is a bit more than "just a tablecloth." The outwork pattern was outlined with the aid of a treadle sewing machine. Perhaps this is faster and easier than doing it by hand, but it looked pretty difficult to us. We were so caught up in Mrs. Christie's excitement and pride in telling us how she did this, we learned a few things in spite of ourselves.

Mrs. Christie explained that a piece of paper was placed underneath the cutout and held firmly in place with the aid of a large embroidery hoop. The tension on the machine was adjusted so the cross-stitch would be uniform. For a smaller cutout, the tension had to be readjusted for proper width. She explained that in the old country (Cyprus), if a lady created a new pattern and a neighbor wanted a copy she simply brought her material to her house, basted her material over your completed work so the material would be taut. Then, amazing as it seems, a kitchen spoon was used (sometimes by rubbing it into the hairline), and briskly rubbed across the pattern. Voila! The pattern was transferred.

Michaelangelo's method of transferring the outline for his paintings in the Sistine Chapel was perhaps more exhausting and detailed, but for ladies to transfer the patterns with a spoon and a little oil from the hairline without spotting the linens seems a lot more fun and certainly less fatiguing, but just as ingenious. Naturally, the detailed "works" for the ladys came later and might not have taken them long to do by machine, but in comparison to hand stitching, it is still tedious work but obviously a source of pride and accomplishment.

Today we have a tendency to sometimes take so many things for granted. If we need sheets, we buy them. When they wear out, we buy another set. Oh, perhaps we stop to consider the thread count for longer wear and tear, and we would certainly consider ourselves very fortunate indeed to afford silk sheets. Yet take a look at the bed sheet shown in the left hand corner. Doesn't it look as though one panel is of one material and the other of another? Well, it isn't!

Mrs. Christie tells us another fascinating story about these bed sheets which were so proudly and lovingly shown to us. Mrs. Jacovides made these for Mrs. Christie's hope chest when she was just a child. They are pure silk! Did she get the silk fabric from a store? No! However, she did purchase something from a store in order to make the sheets. The little things that looked like black pebbles which were placed in a large flat container. Mulberry leaves were gathered and placed on top of the "pebbles" which suddenly came to life and began eating away. Yes, they were silk worms!

Each morning the silk worms were moved to a larger container and filled with fresh mulberry leaves with the worms busily weaving all the while. This process continued until the cocoons grew to approximately four inches in length. Mrs. Christie says when they heard strange noises coming from the cocoons, they were taken outside and placed on a large bamboo striping until the butterfly escaped. The empty cocoons were then dumped into a vat of water until they were completely saturated and the silk fiber could be unwound.

When the weaving of the material began, the silk fibers were tied to a homemade loom (nails in rows of ten across and down the wall). Alternate panels were achieved by pulling the fibers tighter for one panel and loosening the fibers for the next panel.

Other sheets were made in the same manner but with linen and silk combined. As Mrs. Christie began carefully folding the sheets to be put away we asked if these were to go to Niki, too. She answered with an emphatic "no" and added, "These sheets were made for me by mother and I have used them since my wedding night and I shall keep them. Maybe someday and Niki and my other daughters will have them, but not yet!"

The daughters and granddaughters of Mrs. Anna Jacovides have all benefited greatly from the craftsmanship and love which she bequeathed to them. What more could any of us want our mother or grandmother to leave us than something they patiently and lovingly made to give as an honored inheritance—gifts to be cherished for a lifetime and handed down to our children and our children's children. Something of which we are the custodians so we can tell our children about its history and beauty.

While her mother explained how all of this was made with such love and understanding, Niki had little to say. Finally, she said, "Mrs. Myatt, I haven't made any of these intricate designs, but I have done one thing. I crocheted an afghan!" As we can see, if this is the first thing Niki has accomplished she has certainly begun in a very skillful manner. Her stitches are all exactly the same which is most unusual for a beginner. Perhaps, then, Niki is well on her way in carrying on a family tradition and one that will serve her future children and grandchildren.

Perhaps it would be apropos to change our verse and have it read: "WHEN I AM GONE AND CANNOT SEE/FORGET NOT MY LOVE AND THINK OF ME!"

4 Golfers Sink Ace

Four Virginia Beach residents recently scored holes-in-one which could earn one of them two tickets to Scotland plus $1,000 in cash.

Clyde Barnett, 5432 N. Sunland Dr., scored his ace at Elizabeth Manor Golf and Country Club; L. N. Joyner, 1330 N. Penguin Circle and Vaughn W. Mumford, Jr., 116-B Pinewood Road, both sank theirs at Cavalier Golf & Yacht Club and David T. Rickard, 1936 Charla Lee Lane made his hole-in-one at Sewell's Point Golf Club in Norfolk.

All four names were entered in the Rusty Nail Hole-in-one Sweepstakes, an annual national competition for golfers.

Beach Visitor Establishing Zen Center

By RAY WILLIAMS

Delicate may seem a strange description of a man, but no other seems to fit the charming and intelligent Reverend Ilkwon Shin, who visited friends in Virginia Beach earlier this week.

Rev. Shin is one of those quiet, charming young men often associates with the Orient. He has come to Virginia to develop the World Zen Center, located in the mountains, just out of Newport, in Giles county. Rev. Shin was educated in Korea, receiving a Bachelor's degree in Engineering and a Master's degree in Oriental Philosophy. He is also a licensed pilot. He does not, however, speak English.

Headquarters of the World Zen Centers are under the guidance of Dr. G. Seo, formerly a guest professor of Philosophy at Temple University before returning to Korea to become more active in the Zen Centers of which he is the founder. What began as one Zen center in Korea has now grown to include several centers in nearly every country in the world.

When asked how it happened that the Zen center was established in Virginia, Rev. Shin stated that the property was donated by one of the students who wanted to see the center located in this area. He said the center was established in June of this year and that he came to Virginia about three months ago in the capacity of Master.

Rev. Shin explained the meaning of the word Zen: "Zen is usually considered a process of meditation to help one find self understanding."

"It is more than that, however," he continued. "Zen Buddhism is a religious or meditative way of life and the end result is enlightenment. It is possible to discover a much closer relationship with one's creator."

Reverend Shin arrived in Virginia Beach, via Hawaii and the San Francisco, and has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Greene.

He was a loser until he had a purpose

By HOWARD SWINDLE

Tom Edmondson, a 56-year-old former alcoholic who bummed his way through the United States for more than 20 years, takes a lot of pride in the old bread truck he bought a few months ago. As the proprietor, and the portable generator.

But the graying and balding Edmondson reflects even more pride in what he has accomplished with the bread truck he converted into a mobile theatre. Like the teenage girl who turned over a quantity of LSD after seeing one of Edmondson's drug films. Or the multitude of drug-using youths who gave up their habit after seeing the films.

Edmondson and his wife, Violet, launched their makeshift campaign against drugs on Memorial Day. That was when Edmondson backed his truck, appropriately dubbed "Good News Film Fair," into the lot beside Virginia Beach's post office on Atlantic Avenue. After a slow three weeks, crowds numbering more than 300 began stopping off to watch the movies projected on the wall of the post office.

"This is something God wanted me to do," Edmondson said, reflecting the religion he found two years ago in Portland, Oregon. "I just wanted to help these kids some way." Edmondson, a sign painter by trade, likens drug addiction to his former alcohol habit. "It is just a different kind of addiction," he said. And to help stem the addiction--admittedly rampant among youths at the Beach--Edmondson spent several thousand dollars of his own money gathering the essentials for his Good News Film Fair ("... notices that all of the words are four-letter words.")

Though Edmondson has received moral support and help "from a wide cross-section of Tidewater churches," he and his wife have continued to bear the brunt of the financial expenditures. "At our age, we don't need nice furniture and things," said Mrs. Edmondson, a quiet woman content to sit back and let her husband do the talking. "We feel we have to do this and, besides, we enjoy it."

Edmondson became aware of the youths and their drug problem when his sign shop was located at 17th and Pacific Avenue. "The kids would come by begging for money and I knew they needed it for drugs," Edmondson said. "But they were still human beings and they had a right to be helped."

His own alcohol problem still fresh in his mind, Edmondson said he prayed for "a new and unique way of helping the youths kick their problem like I kicked mine." After deciding on his method of help, Edmondson and his wife sat down at the kitchen table and made a list of things they would need for the movies.

And, by Memorial Day, Edmondson had acquired the projector, and antiquated portable generator and a discarded bread truck from a local bakery. He will proudly tell you that he missed only two days at the post office parking lot "and that was because of rain and a truck breakdown."

The Edmondsons keep a diary of people who visit their outdoor theatre. A quick glance reveals guests from throughout the U. S. College students and Navy men probably would account for a large part of the audiences. And Beach pastors would tell you that teenage traffic through their churches on Sundays has mushroomed since the movies began.

"A lot of these kids with beards and long hair are just letting themselves go for the summer and will return to school or work," Edmondson said. "They're just here for the experience." Unfortunately though, Edmondson said, many youths continue to sacrifice their meals for drugs.

"We served coffee and doughnuts at the movies and we began missing doughnuts by the dozens," Mrs. Edmondson said. "But nobody would steal food unless they were going to eat it. We were glad for them to have the doughnuts."

With most of the beach traffic making a mass exodus since Labor Day, the Edmondsons have turned their crusading thoughts in another direction. They plan to put the Good News Film Fair in city parks in the Tidewater area. They plan to team with Jim and Tammy, a puppeteering couple, "to educate the little shavers about drugs." "We hope to get to them while they're still young so they'll grow up knowing about drugs," Edmondson said.

Edmondson's enthusiasm and the gleam in his eyes makes you think his new idea will be successful.

Just like his last one.

The old and the new—Tabernacle United Methodist Church will begin its 140th year and dedicate a new building in special activities next week.

Tabernacle Church

140 Years Old — and Still Growing

Tabernacle United Methodist Church on Sandbridge Beach Road, celebrating its 140th Anniversary September 20-27. This Sunday will open a new building containing six classrooms and a sanctuary/fellowship hall for the first services. A series of Spiritual Life Services will be held Tuesday through September 24 with the Rev. Miss Mildred Long of Lynnhaven United Methodist Church conducting the services Tuesday and Thursday. Youth Night will be held Wednesday. The public is invited. The climax of the 140th Anniversary celebration will be Homecoming, September 27. Church School will be held at 9:45 a.m. with Morning Worship at 11 a.m. led by the Reverend Richard Norris of Bailey's Chapel United Methodist Church, Madison Heights, Va., who entered the ministry from Tabernacle.

A buffet lunch will be served on the church lawn at 12:30 p.m. An afternoon Fellowship Service will begin at 2 p.m. with a message by Mrs. Virginia McClanahan of Tabernacle, a candidate for the ministry. Former members, friends, and visitors are welcome to attend.

Tabernacle Church was built in 1830 on land adjacent to the present Lotus Gardens which was purchased in 1825 at a cost of $20.00. The church structure was remodeled in 1908 and classrooms were added in the late 1930's.

The new building has just been completed as the church continues its ministry which dates from the circuit riders of the late 1700's. Today the congregation is composed of nearly 200 members from the surrounding area.

Tabernacle ministers through worship, study and fellowship to the local community and the many visitors and tourists visiting the nearby beaches and camping areas.

Council Still Free haircuts— Plagued By Signboards

City Council Monday continued to defer any decision on billboard applications but heard from two citizens who voiced different opinions on the necessity of a signboard policy.

The 90-day moratorium council imposed on seven applications last session was continued for two applications made by G. Dewey Simmons and the Cardinal Sign Corporation until the Planning department can develop a billboard policy.

The Planning Commission denied Simmons' use permit application for a 25 by 10-foot billboard on Great Neck Road while Cardinal's use permit application for a 50 by 12-foot signboard on Dean Drive was approved.

The Cardinal application was questioned by councilman Reid Ervin, who noted that the sign would be facing the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway.

After learning that Cardinal president Carlton Miller had received verbal assurances from the Virginia Beach Industrial Authority that he could erect a sign, Ervin said he was "distressed" by the action between landowners and the authority.

Appearing before council to discuss the billboard issue was Adm. G. S. Patrick, who said he represented the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission, the Virginia Beach Garden Clubs, the Jaycees, and the Council of Civic Organizations.

Patrick thanked the council on behalf of his organizations for its 90-day deferral on signboard applications but asked that the city consider passing an ordinance making them illegal along the expressway or federally assisted highways.

He also asked council to go one step further and order all existing signboards to comply with the proposed ordinance within a "period of grace."

Opposing Patrick was Mrs. Gwynn Weeds, who said she was a member of the CCO's planning and zoning committee.

"We are billboard oriented nation," she said, and added that the signs told her where to eat, where to sleep, and where to shop when she was on the road.

Nothing should be done about the signs along the expressway since it was a high speed roadway and nobody sees them anyway, she said.

"They don't pollute the air, they don't hurt anyone, and I don't see why we shouldn't be left alone," she said.

In other zoning matters, council:

*Approved an application by Mast Farm Realty for a change of zoning from residence suburban to general commercial, and multiple family residence districts for a 160 acre site development on Holland Road 2900 feet West of Rosemont Road.

*Deferred for 30 days an application by Dr. John C. Benzenhaver for a use permit and change of zoning to construct an animal hospital and dog kennel on the North side of First Colonial Road 300 feet East of Great Neck Road.

*Deferred for 30 days an application by Rudee Inlet Yacht Basin, Inc. for a change of zoning and use permit for a 361 slip marina on the Western end of Lake Rudee.

*Approved an application by Gabor, Inc. for a use permit to extend and develop a cemetery on the west side of South Bird Neck Road 380 feet South of Beautiful Street.

This barber's chair is the newest addition to the Virginia Beach City Jail. It was acquired this week. Dr. Ira Hancock, jail physician, says the second chair was acquired through joint efforts of he and City Sgt. John Marr at a cost of $30. Dr. Hancock says the chair was purchased to enable jail prisoners to maintain a neat appearance. According to Hancock one prisoner has already requested to have his hair cut since the chair arrived. Hair cuts, incidentally, are offered to prisoners free of charge.

Shorn locks bring suit

A suit filed in U. S. District Court in Norfolk on Tuesday presented the possibility of the jail's barber's chair becoming an item of evidence in legal proceedings. The suit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of 15 plaintiffs is seeking $600,000 damages on claims that prisoners in the jail had their hair cut without obtaining permission of the prisoners, and thus violated their civil rights.

According to the suit the plaintiffs were placed in custody of the City Jail after being arrested in the crack-down by police on suspected drug pushers during the night of Aug. 28. Prior to their appearance in Municipal Court on Monday Aug. 31, according to the suit, the suspects were forced to submit to hair cuts at the hands of jailers.

City Sgt. John Marr, Dr. Ira Hancock, jail physician, and Police Chief Col. W. W. Davis have been named as defendants in the suit which seeks $30,000 compensatory and $10,000 punitive damage payments for each of the plaintiffs.

Marr and Dr. Hancock said earlier the hair cuts were administered in accordance with regulations established to maintain hygienic standards within the jail.

SOME PEOPLE THINK ELECTRIC HEAT IS ONLY FOR THE RICH.

Except those who have it.

Rich in expectations, maybe. Rich in possessions, not necessarily.

People who choose electric heat have one thing in common. When they make an important purchase such as a first home, they look for value throughout.

They prefer electric heat because it's cleaner, safer, quieter, and more flexible than any other heating system. It's the only system that will be as up-to-date when they sell their house as it was when they bought.

If you're considering a new home, consider all of the advantages of electric heat. Ask yourself whether any other heating system offers more value for the money than flameless electric heat.

Talk to your contractor or builder who sells electrically heated homes.

He's an expert in real heating value.

And if people want to think you're rich—enjoy it!

ASTRO-ADVICE

By Raymond Williams
noted Virginia Beach
astrologer

He's 'Beautiful People'

QUESTION: After being divorced three years ago I have finally met a man who interests me. Marriage still concerns me, but I would not want to lose this man as we really compatible? Signed Libra.

ANSWER: I get so many horoscopes of people who have so many problems that it is a delight to get a problem, with an answer so positive. To begin with you have the Moon in the house dealing with the marriage. Since the Moon is so "moveable" it was almost certain that you would marry more than once.

The reason that your previous marriage ended is that for the last five years or so you have had the planet Venus (ruling the love life) in opposition to the planet Mars. As I have stated before, the planet Mars is the planet of tremendous energy and it was inevitable that your marriage would be dissolved under these circumstances. There were several other things that indicated a change of residence and difficulties with money, but this is usually the case. The horoscope fits together in a neat little package, when we have the correct birth time.

As far as being afraid of marriage, one thing that we need to learn if we are to find happiness, is that we must leave the past behind. Life should be an adventure and each new step should bring a new life of its own. I have often felt that it would be wise for a man to change professions every five years or so, that way he would remain alive. Staying in the same position hardens us, but unfortunately most of us are so involved in "success" that we become little more than robots. If you can bury the dead, you can possibly find a new life. It is possible to remain young and vital into later life if we do not attempt to bring too many dead bodies with us through the years.

As for your compatibility there is no question that you have a great deal of mutual attraction. Mars is the masculine force in the horoscope, and his Mars is stationed very near your Sun. This simply means that the masculine side of his nature is the same, and therefore compatible with your innate nature. One of the most important things to you at this point in life is the fact that his Jupiter is almost exactly on your Moon. What this means is that he will be very benevolent toward you. He will be protective and charitable too.

One really interesting point is that his Saturn is almost sextile (a very good aspect) to your Venus. Many astrologers consider this a strong karmic attraction. It might be called the "soul mate" attraction.

As far as to what type of person he is, little need be added to what has been said as to how he will treat you. He has the planet Venus in close conjunction to his Sun. This is the mark of the "beautiful person". It is almost impossible for this type of person to be mean. It is usually fortunate for financial matters as well.

My advice to you, my dear, if he has asked you to marry him grab him by the collar and drag him to the preacher.

Finally I might add that you have been going through some rather difficult times but the future looks much better than it has for some time. The tide has turned, but there always must be some difficulties to keep us awake.

Changes Sure To Come

QUESTION: I've had it. Everything has gone wrong. I am now working two jobs and can make things work out at all. Can you help? Signed Horry

ANSWER: I'm sorry that I can not be of more help than to explain what is taking place in your life and offer a little advice based on years of observing this sort of thing take place.

The reason your world has come crashing down on your head is that the Midheaven, that point in the horoscope which deals with the career, is making a very malefic aspect to the planet Saturn. Since it is the nature of Saturn to bring everything to a halt you are having a difficult time making ends meet.

I often wish I could somehow make the scientific community see how clearly the aspects work in such cases as yours and the previous one. When this aspect hits anyone they will be halted in their tracks. I do not know of anything one can do to prevent it from happening, even if they know it is coming. Sounds fatalistic, doesn't it? Let me tell you a little story, quickly, to point up the reason I believe this to be true. Recently my older brother came to the Beach for a short stay. When I found out he was coming I quickly brought his horoscope up to date. I discovered that in a couple of years he would be going through a very difficult aspect dealing with the profession and it seemed to indicate a partnership involvement of some kind. Knowing that my brother might not take what I had to tell him seriously, I invited my friend Vicki Greene to look at the horoscope and tell him what she felt would happen. "Like it is," so to speak.

Now I want you to understand that my mother is quite a good astrologer and my brother knows that I have been at it for some time. Well, of course, Mrs. Greene told him the same thing I suspected, that is, that he stands to lose quite a lot of money in a partnership of some kind.

You can imagine my surprise when my mother called me to confirm what I had said, and to check an aspect in one of my other brother's horoscopes, which could be quite difficult. Feeling that I had made my point quite clear I felt rather good that they were considering the possibilities of what, the younger brother, had told them.

Would you believe that I received a card from my brother just a week ago stating that he and my mother had decided to buy this little business together? At first I thought they were kidding me and so I called them. They were not kidding!

Now as far as what you can do about situation, my advice is that sometimes it is only possible to coast. This is one of those times. Struggle if you must, but I suggest that you take this time to find out what your real values are. There is always a lot to be learned from one of these aspects, in fact, I am convinced that this is the purpose of experiences such as you are going through now.

Cannot Answer Question

QUESTION: I have been thinking about divorcing my husband for some time. Should I leave him now or wait until the children have grown? Signed Undecided.

ANSWER: I could not, of course, answer a question such as this. Even if the horoscope strongly indicated that it was the proper thing to do, I still would not recommend that anyone, male or female, divorce their mate. There is only one way in which I will counsel anyone on marriage problems, and that is

STATE LIBRARY

Park or School?

By CAROLYN McALLEN

It all depends on how you look at it.

"It" is 15 acres at the northeast corner of Seashore State Park which is under consideration as an elementary school site. It is separated from the rest of the park by Shore Drive, to the Citizens Committee for Seashore State Park the area is "the most unique part of the park."

To the School Board it is a free, and needed school site. To the State Department of Parks the area "does not have any significance so far as the preservation, development or usage of Seashore State Park is concerned."

The site in question is beautiful and desolate. Its location, and for that matter its existence, is unknown to the majority of residents of the city. The only access to it is from dead-end streets followed by a climb over the sand dunes.

The site has run into objections from North Virginia Beach residents since it was first mentioned as a school site. First they objected to the proposed access road to the school site because of traffic on residential streets. Plans were changed to have access from 95th Street with no further objections. The State Highway Department has said the busing the children on and off of Shore Drive would be dangerous, thus the other route.

School Supt. E. E. Brickell said Friday that objections are premature since the school system is "not committed" to the park site. "We're still looking for alternatives. There's nothing so overwhelming in its (the site's) favor except that it's free." The State Park Commission has leased the land at $1 a year to the School Board.

Brickell added that the people objecting to the site "offer no alternative." The Citizens Committee has suggested adding second stories to existing schools. The School Administration says this is not feasible. "This is a quiet, beach-oriented neighborhood," said Mrs. J. W. Sills, a resident of 86th Street and a member of the Citizens Committee for Seashore State Park, better known as president of the S.P.C.A. "Many who live here are retired—that's the neighborhood best. I just want to save Seashore State Park."

"Our fight is not the State Department of Parks for giving the land. We hope the School Board and City Council will take the lead in the fight for conservation and turn the area back over to the state."

The state, however, apparently doesn't want it. Ben Boien, director of the State Department of Parks, wrote in July, "We can see no possible way it could be used as a part of the park in the future because it would be impractical to consider taking visitors to the main part of Seashore Park across the heavily traveled Shore Drive."

Mrs. Sills suggested that over-passes could be built, as in the Norfolk Botanical Gardens.

Mrs. Sills pointed out that there are "over 200 species of birds" who stop in that area of the park on the Atlantic fly-way. She said that part of the "uniqueness" of the area was the concentration of plants and animals in that area. She added that the same plants and animals exist in the rest of the park but not in such concentration.

In addition, Mrs. Sills pointed out that the barrier dunes in the area are much sharper edged than those in the rest of the park. "You destroy this tract and you destroy something that's been making for 50,000 years."

"Apparently the State doesn't (See 'Acres' p. 5)

Retired Admiral Takes On Signboard Enigma

By JIM TURNER

For almost two months, realtors, landowners, city councilmen, and city planners have been struggling with the decision of signboards along the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, trying to resolve the conflict to everyone's best advantage.

Fisherman May Have Killed Fish

Officials of the Virginia State Water Control Board indicated Wednesday the death of an estimated 25,000 fish over the Labor Day weekend was apparently due to the actions of a commercial fisherman.

The remains of the fish, consisting mostly of spot and crabs, were discovered on beaches near the Little Creek Amphibious Naval Base a short distance from the southern extremity of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

Board officials have indicated their tests, including chemical analysis, have nearly ruled out the possibility of pollution being responsible for the massive fish kill.

These officials further indicated their investigation of the incident has all but confirmed the fish were either disposed of on purpose by a commercial fisherman, or had been injured in nets and were subsequently carried onto the beach by incoming tides.

Agonizing over the answer along with that group is a retired Navy admiral, Goldsborough Serpill Patrick, who has taken over the leadership of the city's Beautification Commission.

A former line officer, the admiral has taken over the front line for the city's garden clubs, concerned citizens, and several civic organizations in their battle against signboards. "We don't object to signboards per se, but we do object to them being placed right up against the freeway," Adm. Patrick said. "What could happen is that they will put them right up against the thing, block the view of the area and most importantly distract motorists."

The 'they' Patrick refers to are realtors and outdoor advertising companies who have applied to the city for approval of use permits and zoning changes. Thus far, there have been a total of nine applications, two of which have been approved by City Council.

After the first two applications which totaled four signboards were approved, the cry of an outraged beautification-oriented public grew so loud that City Council placed a 90-day moratorium on decisions regarding the billboards.

Most of the claims that signboards should be allowed along the freeway have been based on legal grounds, the essence of which is that the law does not prohibit the placement of advertising boards along the road and that the city has not passed an ordinance outlawing the boards.

And since the toll-strip is not part of an interstate system and did not receive federal funding, it cannot fall under any federal acts governing the operation of such roadways and prohibiting the billboards.

But what the Beautification Commission and many other civic groups want the City Council to pass is an ordinance similar to what the state presently has applied to its roadway systems.

That ordinance, said Adm. Patrick, states that no signboard shall be placed nearer than 660 feet from the road and that all signboards set any closer than that distance shall be made to comply within a period of five years.

In addition, he said, he would (See 'Admiral' p. 10)

College Night Is Scheduled

The Virginia Beach Public Schools will hold the annual College Night program October 1 at Princess Anne High School from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. It is open to all Virginia Beach High School students and their parents.

About 125 representatives, most of them directors or assistant directors of admission, from universities, colleges and specialized schools will participate and offer as much information as possible.

Cut-Backs Concern 540 Civilian Workers

Over 540 civilian employees at Oceana Naval Air Station are seeking the help of Congressman Thomas N. Downing for an "impartial" investigation into the employment cutback which has affected 102 blue collar workers since last October.

Downing is scheduled to receive a letter from the group this week asking for the investigation. A letter will also be sent to North Carolina Congressman David Henderson, chairman of the Sub-Committee on Manpower and Civilian Service on the Committee for Post Office and Civilian Service.

It will not be the first time the workers have asked for help and pleaded their case. Last October, when 63 persons were caught in a cut-back, letters of protest were sent to top officials, including the President, Secretary of Defense and various congressional leaders. They received no help.

The station has now suffered another cut-back. Seventy-two positions, involving 45 persons, have been eliminated, bringing the blue collar force down to 469, 231 less than it was in July 1968.

"And the ones who are being affected are the ones who can least afford it," said Gene Clark, representative of the 5th Naval District Metal Trades Council.

"These are men who have been with the station many years. They are in the 45 to 50 year old bracket, too young to retire and too old to move on to another area or outside the station. There is one painter who has been here 20 years. He may have to take a laborers job in order to stay here. He may even have to go out the gate."

"Those people in Washington don't have to deal with the people," he said. "They are just so many statistics to the big boys. But here they are men with families and we are very concerned."

Clark explained the cutbacks are "due to lack of funds".

Blue collar workers, or ungraded workers, do not get pay raises through additional appropriations as white collar workers do. Their raises are taken out of funds already appropriated. When these funds are inadequate some of the men are let go so that the others will receive raises.

Lack of manpower caused by these cutbacks is beginning to affect the station, Clark said. "In 1964 we had a maintenance work backlog of $34,000. Now there is over $300,000 in work to be done. We're contracting some of the work out and using some military personnel, but even that isn't helping."

Despite the cutback in civilian workers, military personnel has not been added to compensate for the decrease, he said. "We are not getting any relief. I wonder how far down we have to go before we start back up."

Clark stressed that the problem is in Washington, not on the local level.

The commanding officer here is doing what he has to do; he's doing the best he can with what he has to do with. But this new set-up is paying its toll on the base."

By set-up Clark said he means that the station now operates on break-down maintenance rather than preventive maintenance. "The equipment is going downhill, buildings need painting and it's just generally not up to par," he explained.

Clark said that the taxpayer should be interested because while the property value is increasing its maintenance and personnel is decreasing. Since 1960 Oceana's real property plant value has increased $29 million, he said. The base is presently valued at $80 million with an estimated replacement cost of $100 million.

"During that 10 years while the property value was going up the public works civilian employment ceiling went down from 302 workers to 200 and the backlog of work increased $886,000," he said.

Even though Oceana is the largest master jet base on the East Coast it seems to be the only installation suffering these civilian cutbacks. Other bases in Tidewater are increasing in civilian employment, Clark said.

"If these men weren't needed it would be one thing. I wouldn't want to keep people on the job if they weren't needed. But the efficiency of this base is going down because of lack of people and lack of funds."

Books To Close On October 3

Registration books for the November 3 election will close October 3, according to General Registrar Mrs. Anna Colton. Persons not registered by that time will be unable to vote for U.S. Senator and for proposed amendments to the Virginia Constitution.

Assistant registrars will have books open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on the closing day, a Saturday, during the same hours. The general registrar's office at Princess Anne Court House will maintain the same schedule. Information may be obtained by calling 427-4667.

Assistant registrars and their locations are: Roland White, City Hall Annex; Mrs. Naomi Thomson, 6313 E. Indian River Rd.; Malcolm Wood, Ocean Park Market; H.E. Kriesel, Oceana Feed & Hardware Co.; James Harrison, Hatteras Funeral Home; Mrs. Charles W. Beard Jr., Plaza Hardware Store; Mrs. Catherine Smith, Smith Grocery, Blackwater; A.C. Bryant, Womble Hardware; C.J. Ansell, Ansell Hardware; Back Bay; Mrs. Carrie Kewer, 4559 Virginia Beach Blvd.; Robert E. Harvey, Atlantic Beach Center.

Famous Men To Speak

Two international personalities will be featured in the annual Virginia Beach Forum, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Rotary Club, according to forum chairman R. Deal Lee.

Cabot

Sebastian Cabot, the distinguished actor and television personality, will address the forum November 9 while Bob Considine, a newspaper columnist and radio commentator, will appear at the forum March 5.

The forum speakers will be presented at Princess Anne High School. Each presentation will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Considine

A series ticket covering both speakers is $5. They are available at the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce office and from individual members of the Rotary Club.

U.S. Air Force Airman First Class Michael J. Swinney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex L. Swinney, 2309 Pinewood Drive, has arrived for duty at Sembach AB, Germany. He is a 1967 graduate of Floyd E. Kellam High School.

Margaret Lunsford - a free spirit

For Margaret Lunsford, success will never be measured by the number of cars or homes or boats she might own but by how well she can convey an attitude on stage.

A free spirit, Miss Lunsford is an actress of a noble and potentially lost tradition: "As long as I can do what I want to do and not have to worry about where money will come for the next meal, I'm satisfied."

An actress on most occasions, a waitress on others, and a cobbler on one, she is originally from Lumberton, Georgia, and got her start in the "real" theatre with puppets.

"I was working in a shoe shop in Atlanta, sitting there with a little hammer and awl, and found out about a little puppet theatre that was going on the road."

"I thought it might be fun to help, and by the time we got through making the puppets and recording the sound and voices and everything else, I was one of two people going on the road with it," she said.

The one-night stands were fun, she said, but after a while it got to be pretty rough.

"The other fellow in the troupe got to me with the politics and everything, and when we got to Norfolk for a three night stand, I saw an old friend of mine."

Having seen that friend, the two, along with another college roommate, decided to go to Europe, and Miss Lunsford's first trip to Tidewater was over as she continued the tour.

"I got back to Atlanta and went to work to get $1,000 to go to Europe. We got our passports and were all set to go; then we discovered we had only a $1,000 between the three of us. That ended that," she said.

Eventually, Miss Lunsford found her way back to Norfolk by this time a little more discouraged about theatre. "The cast of Madox had just come off the road, and they had been star-struck. Even with something like that, they thought it was the top and I left because of that attitude."

As Miss Lunsford sees it, the actress should exist only for the audience, and not for herself. "In theatre, if you're not for yourself, you shouldn't be in theatre. The audience is all that's important."

"When I go on stage, Margaret Lunsford has to cease to exist for two hours. You're out there for the audience and not for yourself," she said.

Miss Lunsford said she refuses to use theatre as a therapy to find a purpose for herself, so it was some time before she got involved in theatre in Tidewater.

The next play she did was "The Fantasticks" at the Cavalier Dinner Theatre. "I had done the part several times before and decided to try out; I got the part and that was it."

She said the decision had already been made to leave town after only a short time to go to Portsmouth, New Hampshire to the Theatre-by-the-Sea, because she still wasn't satisfied. But again she got caught.

"I had heard about a play at Lake Wright Playhouse but decided not to try out for it. Then one night we were at a party, and the director said 'Here, read this in a Japanese accent.'"

"The next thing I knew, I had the parts, and here I am." Now one of the stars in "Sunday in New York," she is still not satisfied with theatre or herself.

Miss Lunsford said she plans to leave after this one, "but when only the Lord knows." "Theatre has many levels, she said. "There's the education level, the commercial level, and the fine arts level. This is the commercial level."

The people who are culturally oriented and are the society-types chose things like Shakespeare that are established art and don't like to venture out and experiment at all, she said.

"Half the fun is trying new things different ways," she said.

"The thing that's missing here is that the area has nothing but commercial theatre," she said. "What I would like to see is groups who get together on Sunday afternoons and read plays."

"They could do things like 'Becket'. But the people could come and sit and listen or whatever."

"You can't stay in theatre without giving. Somehow, that's missing. I would stay here," she said. "If something was going on, something exciting. Another reason for staying would be that the South is where theatre's going to happen next, she said. "Broadway is sort of dead."

"They're all caught up in the big musicals and nudity and nothing's happening there. I guess what we need to do is give the theatre to the people."

And in the process of giving the theatre to the people, Miss Lunsford would find a purpose. "Generally, the audience comes first and gets the first consideration; of course it has to here because they're paying for it."

Miss Lunsford said she'll stay in theatre "as long as I have something to give, and I think I'm good." But even the decision as to what is good is relative.

"I don't know what makes you think you're good, other than maybe you set a role and gauge how good you are by how close you come to it," she said. "My goal is to create an illusion for the people."

It was with an illusion that Miss Lunsford got her start in theatre. "My parents wanted me to go to the University of Georgia but I wanted to go to Lagrange College because they had a very good drama department. When they gave the tuition money I sent it to Lagrange and didn't tell them."

"When it came time to go to school, I told them we'd have to leave a day earlier so I could get there. That did it," she said.

"I ended up going to Lagrange against their wishes and put myself through school," she said.

And there began the illusions, and the free spirit started to roam.

both parties are willing to seek my advice, and that if both parties are there at the period of counseling. The only type of counseling that I will give anyone, even if both people are eager to consult me, is to try to explain that we are under aspects, what those aspects mean, and possibly when those aspects will have passed. I make no attempt to advise anyone how to deal with their problems. This is the reason I stress over and over that I will be very happy when psychologists, physicians and teachers begin to study astrology. I will be relegated to selling soap again, but it will be worth it to see this sacred old science put to its proper use.

Some things inevitable

QUESTION: Would tell me what my outlook is for my job and health. Signed JFHS Flint, Mich.

ANSWER: Michigan is one of those states that drive an astrologer nutty. The correct time is essential for accurate horoscopic interpretation and Michigan is one of the states where the people use whatever time they feel suits their fancy. In some cities they use Central standard time but the hospitals, where the person is born will use Eastern standard time. Often there is a difference in the time used in the same city and therefore I am never sure what is the correct time of birth.

Considering this, I am going to have to be quite general in the analysis of your horoscope. I will be the first to admit that under the circumstances you would be foolish to take this analysis too seriously. For this reason I will be quite brief.

It would appear that you have Libra rising with the Sun (ruling the vitality) in close conjunction to the planet Saturn. This is a very difficult position as far as the health is concerned. To add to this, these two planets are in malefic aspect to the planets Mars and Pluto. This has surely been responsible for some rather difficult health situations with the possibility of serious surgery always present. You have surely had to watch your health most of your life. Mars in this relationship causes high fevers and often skin inflammations such as boils etc. There does not appear to be any serious aspects in the next couple of years, but the planet Uranus, by transit, has begun to move through the sign of Libra and since you have so many planets located in Libra, there is sure to be some changes in your life.

If the birth time is anywhere near correct, your life will go through a rather strenuous period of adjustment over the next year or two. Do not make any drastic changes that you can avoid. Enough will surely be forced on you. Try to hang onto the job you have and patiently ride out the Uranus transit. This takes some time, I would say at least four or five years to complete.

Do NOT misunderstand! I am not predicting any great disasters but am trying to prepare you for the changes which are sure to come.

Address your questions to Astro-Advice, Virginia Beach Sun, P.O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23451. All questions will be answered as space permits but must include date, time and place of birth.

Cox to Present 'Fantasticks'

With its production of "The Fantasticks", the Fine Arts Department of Frank W. Cox High School will open its 1970-71 theatre season.

"The Fantasticks" one of the longest running off-Broadway productions, has been playing since the spring of 1950.

A blend of satire and romanticism, bright comedy and serious verse, "The Fantasticks" is different from most musicals in that with its small cast, it is intended to be performed in an intimate atmosphere.

Since the performers frequently speak directly to the audience, the orchestra, and the audience, as well as the players, will be on the stage.

Baby Delays Mom's Prizes

Mrs. Rosalie Doss Westcott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Doss of Virginia Beach, recently won first place at the Blandford State Fair in Blandford, Mass., and second place at the Westfield Fair in Westfield, Mass. for her watercolor paintings.

In July Mrs. Westcott was also scheduled to enter her paintings in the Virginia Beach Boardwalk Art Show but the arrival of her five pound, 15 ounce son was scheduled for the opening day of the show which made it impossible for this year.

Due to limited seating, only 150 tickets will be sold for each performance. Appearing in the cast are: Gimmy Pulley, Brooks Gornto, Jim Larsen, Brian Humphries, Paul Gregory, Angeles Munden, Rob Chapman and Eric Johnson.

Student director is Sue Purvis and the design for the production is by Sharon Rork.

Members of the instrumental ensemble are: Wendy Thomas, Sue Whitaker, Valerie Berg and James Fox.

Performances are scheduled for Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2, and 3, at 8 p.m. nightly in the Cox High Auditorium. For ticket information, call 464-6207 or 460-0641.

Fishing Tournney

Sat.-Sun.

The 11th annual Virginia Beach Salt Water Fishing Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday from the beaches and piers in the city.

Open to the public, the event is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Anglers Club. There is no entrance fee.

Prizes will be awarded for the largest of each species caught, with special awards given for outstanding or unusual catches at the discretion of the tournament committee.

Awards will also be made to surf anglers who turn in outstanding or unusual catches.

Contestants who can not fish from boats, may pick up registration blanks and further information at the Virginia Beach Pier, Oceanfront and 15th Street, or at the Lynnhaven Fishing pier at Lynnhaven Beach.

Species for which prizes will be awarded include: black drum; blue fish; cobia; channel bass; croaker; false albacore; flounder; puppy drum; round head; sea bass; spot; striped bass; grey trout; and speckled trout.

Patriots Perform

The First Colonial Patriots Marching band will be among contestants in the University of Richmond Marching Contest in the Richmond City Football Stadium Saturday at 2 p.m.

The band will perform a half-time show, consisting of two precision drills and two concert compositions, and attend the massed bands program during the pre-game and half-time ceremonies at the Richmond-Davidson football game that evening.

De Hart

De Hart Forms Realty

Roy L. DeHart has announced the formation of DeHart Realty, a general real estate firm located in the London Bridge Shopping Center.

DeHart, a real estate broker for 21 years, has been active in construction, sales, rentals, residential and commercial development and property management.

DeHart has named Fred Soles as sales manager of the new firm. He has had eight years experience in real estate and is a past winner of the "Million Dollar Sales Award."

The new firm will handle both residential and commercial sales and rentals. Tradesmen will be accepted and houses built to client's specification.

DeHart Realty is a member of the Virginia Beach Multiple Listing Service, the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

DeHart is a member of the Better Business Bureau, the Builders and Contractors Exchange and the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Phillips Becomes Member

Edward K. Phillips, Virginia Beach, a representative of the Richmond/Eastern Virginia general agency of National Life Insurance Company of Vermont, has won membership in the firm's 15th President's Club.

General agent J. Monte Williamson adds that outstanding client service and sales have also earned Phillips attendance at the club's forthcoming educational conference. Its countrywide membership will meet at the Royal Sonesta Hotel, New Orleans, Sept. 20-24.

Phillips, as did the five other members of the Richmond general agency, achieved the club and conference honors in his first period of eligibility. He joined the agency and the Montpelier, Vt., life company in May 1969. The Williamson agency began operations the preceding February, and this is the first club and meeting for which its representatives have been eligible.

Company Names Meredith

Samuel R. Meredith, Jr., son of Mrs. S.R. Meredith of Pine-wood Drive, has been appointed assistant superintendent in the marketing programs division of the life, health and financial services department at The Travelers Insurance Companies in Hartford, Conn.

His appointment was announced Sept. 15 by Roger C. Wilkins, president of The Travelers.

Meredith joined the company in 1954 at Buffalo, N.Y., as an agency service representative in the life, health and financial services department.

He is married to the former Miss Carol Kress of Buffalo, N.Y., and the couple reside with their three children at 4 Wintergreen Lane, West Simsbury, Conn.

First Flood Policy To Sandbridge Home

Dr. Samuel N. Riggs of Sandbridge is the first Virginia Beach resident to take advantage of the new subsidized flood insurance program which became effective in the resort city September 11.

The first policy was handled by Ralph Stapleton of Kellam-Eaton Insurance Co. He said Dr. Riggs' beachfront residence has been insured for $17,500 and the contents of the home for $5,000.

He pointed out that these insurance policies are not the usual homeowners policy. The flood policies must be purchased separately and only for flood coverage.

The rate on single family residences is 40 cents per $100; 50 cents per $100 for the contents, Stapleton said.

Virginia Beach qualified for the program under the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 when the city agreed to adopt land use and control measures which will minimize flood damage to future construction.

Under the program owners of existing one to four family residences and small businesses may buy the insurance from their local agents and the Federal government will subsidize their rates and their loss in the event of a flood.

Now that the city has qualified, however, Virginia Beach property owners who choose not to buy the insurance will not be able to get federal financial aid for flood losses that occur after the first year anniversary of the city's eligibility date—Sept. 11, 1971.

For the first 30 days following the effective date, or through October 10, the policies will become effective immediately. After that date there will be a 15-day waiting period. At the present time the entire city is covered by the lower subsidized rate. There are areas of the city, however, which are considered special hazard areas and buildings in these areas will not be eligible for the lower rate if erected or substantially improved after September 11.

A map of these areas is available to insurance agents in City Clerk Richard Webbon's office at City Hall.

A survey of these special hazard areas is presently underway, Webbon said, and once the survey is completed the structures in these areas will be eligible for flood insurance but not at the same rate as the least hazardous areas.

Hotels and motels along the oceanfront are also eligible for the new insurance, providing they were not under construction or undergoing improvements after September 11. These buildings are limited to $30,000 coverage, Webbon said, and $5,000 on contents. The $5,000 limitation on contents is maximum for all policies.

"There are many areas in the city which come under the special hazard designation," Webbon said. "They are far more extensive than just the waterfront areas."

Persons interested in the flood insurance should contact their insurance agent. Agents wishing more information and appropriate forms may contact the Insurance Company of North America, 2133 Wisconsin Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007. This firm was selected by the National Flood Insurers Association as the servicing company for the City of Virginia Beach.

Hotel-Motel Course Set

The Distributive Education Services of Virginia Beach and Norfolk city schools will co-sponsor a Hotel-Motel Supervisor Housekeeping Course.

The course offered as an elective in the American Hotel-Motel Association Diploma program deals with the broad scope of the housekeepers position and stresses employee training, record keeping and executive responsibilities.

Classes will be offered from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays from Sept. 29 through Nov. 17 at Princess Anne High School. Thomas Rusnock, Old Dominion University instructor, will teach the course. He was with the Dillon Hotel chains, managed the Golden Triangle and two Sheraton Hotels.

For further information on registration call the Distributive Education Service of Virginia Beach (427-4574) or Norfolk (441-2197) City Schools.

Brydges Campaigns For Byrd

A Virginia Beach man has been named to a nine-man campaign committee, headed by James C. Wheat Jr., of Richmond, which will direct the Republicans for Byrd senatorial campaign in Virginia.

Richard G. Brydges was named to the committee by Wheat on September 23. A lawyer in the city, he was active in Gov. Linwood Holton's gubernatorial campaign last year.

Byrd, a longtime Democrat who announced he would leave the party and seek reelection as an independent, is running against Del. Ray Garland and George C. Rawlings Jr. for one of two Virginia senatorial seats in November.

Nelson

Nelson With New Studios

Randolph Bruce, President of Fountainhead Studios, has announced the appointment of John Nelson as copy chief and radio & TV producer.

Nelson, who attended Old Dominion University, had previously worked for Seamark Advertising and Chesapeake Advertising of Norfolk. He has written and produced advertising for such companies as Borden Chemical, Borden International, Dupont, Monsanto, Stauffer, and Echo Chain Saws of Japan.

Fountainhead Studios provides a creative advertising service to aid agencies and to deal directly with business concerns not needing a full agency operation.

Mrs. Jones Is Honored

Checks to Help Olympics

First & Merchants National Bank has become the first bank in Virginia and one of the first 10 in the nation offering "Olympic Checks" as a part of a joint nationwide effort by banks and check-printing companies to help raise funds for the 1972 U.S. Olympic Team.

The Olympic Check program works this way: new or existing checking account customers, instead of buying their regular checks, can choose to buy specially printed "Olympic Checks" for one dollar more than the normal charge for new checks. The additional dollar is sent to the U.S. Olympic Committee as a contribution towards its goal of raising $10 million for the 1972 team.

"Olympic Checks" are being offered to banks across the country on a non-exclusive basis. The program has been endorsed by Nat S. Rogers, president of the American Bankers Association.

Containers Are Short

Two area dairies have been selling short half-gallon containers of milk, a Consumer Protection Bureau spokesman said Tuesday.

Yoder Dairies of Virginia Beach and the Regis Milk Co. of Norfolk have been dealing with short containers, Assistant Sealer Eddie L. Whitehurst Jr. said.

He said the glass bottles used by Yoder would not hold a half-gallon but that the paper cartons used by Regis would hold a half-gallon but were not quite filled to the required amount.

Yoder's plant manager Eli Miller said that the bottles used were new and that none of them had been used. 6,100 bottles were tested at the Virginia Beach plant, found short and ordered not to be used, Whitehurst said.

He said that the Regis milk was sold to consumers through government commissaries at Little Creek and Oceana and that 13,388 cartons were ordered off the shelves.

Those cartons were short about half an ounce.

However, Regis manager A. T. Mitchell said that the cartons were short only about one-half an ounce and added that only 6,000 cartons had been removed from the shelves and only at the Little Creek commissary.

He said that the problem, which involved filling the containers too rapidly as they move down the conveyor belt, had been corrected.

Miller said that he would still use bottles produced by the Chattanooga Glass Co., and that his employees had removed those bottles that were short.

Pollution Group Elects

Citizens Against Pollution, a newly formed four-city group, has elected a Portsmouth man as its first president at a meeting Tuesday night at the Kempsville High School.

Dr. Michael Norman was selected president; Mrs. Mary Stephenson of Virginia Beach was chosen vice president; and Mrs. Linda Norman and Mrs. Cynthia Rubin, both of Portsmouth, were chosen recording secretary and corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Ellen Rowland of Norfolk elected treasurer.

The group was started by Mrs. Kathy Keay or Virginia Beach to act as a pressure group and to educate the public on pollution dangers.

The next meeting will be Oct. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the Kempsville library.

BOOST FOR BOYS' CLUB--Virginia Beach attorney Joe Canada, left, goes over plans with Richard C. Lindell, president of Thoroughgood Civic League, before addressing the group Monday night. Canada, chairman of the fund raising committee for the Boys' Club, briefed the civic group on the club's future plans.

Navy CWO Arthur B. Everett, Sr. of Bunker Hill Lane, was awarded the Navy Achievement Medal during ceremonies aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Long Beach in Vallejo, Calif. He was cited for outstanding performance of duties.

Words of Wisdom

He was not an old man, just an elderly man. Apparently retired. He sat and read while his wife crocheted on the balcony of the motel overlooking the marina. To while away the short time left before dinner, the man wandered down on the docks and watched the boats come in.

He walked up to a couple cleaning the day's catch of fish. "Mind if I watch you for a minute?" The couple welcomed him, discussed the events of the day with him and helped him while away those extra minutes. He was from New Jersey, he said. He was in Virginia Beach for the Shrine convention. "But it's so nice here overlooking the bay we decided to stay on a few days."

"You know, when I was a kid—and that's well over 50 years ago—I used to crab and fish, even clam, in a bay near my home. It was a beautiful spot and we had some great times there. But that's all gone now. Pollution took over."

"What kind of industry, or industries, destroyed it," he was asked.

"People. Just nothing but people. They dumped waste and sewage and garbage into that bay until they literally killed it. I used to bring home fifty to seventy-five crabs after an afternoon of crabbing. And there was plenty of fish and clams. Today it's a cesspool. There are no fish. You'd be lucky to get five crabs in a day and then you probably wouldn't want to eat them. The clams are so polluted that there's a thousand dollar fine if you're caught digging them. Yep, it's all gone. And it was a beautiful bay."

He looked out across Lynnhorn Bay. The sun was getting low and casting its glare across the softly rippling water. The ducks were quacking a call for food and a boat motor could be heard off in the distance.

"God, I hope they don't allow that to happen here!"

The couple stopped cleaning fish and followed his gaze across the water. They thought of the debris they had seen floating on Chesapeake Bay that day—beer cans, cigarette packs, pieces of cardboard boxes—carelessly discarded by the "Sunday fishermen".

"God, let's hope they wake up in time!"

Double Standard

Law Enforcement

The Shriners made Virginia Beach their headquarters for three days last week, and the city welcomed them with open arms, but the young people here must be a bit confused about the city's apparent double standard of laws enforcement.

Any resident of this peace-loving city knows it is unlawful to drink in public, to drive at excessive speeds, to roam the streets in large groups, to run people off the sidewalks, to give obscene signs from the car windows and to be generally disorderly in public. Young people especially know these things cannot, under any circumstances, be tolerated by local law enforcement officers. Each week the courts are filled with those who had to learn the hard way that they must grow up to be law-abiding citizens.

How do you tell a youngster now that these things are against the law? How do you explain a policeman's comment in a public restaurant that he had been told not to touch a visiting Shriner? How do you explain a double set of laws enforcement, one for the over 30 crowd, one for the youngsters? Maybe one more set should be added—one for the visiting conventioners.

Conventions are vital to the economy of this city, granted, but right is right and wrong is wrong and justice is justice and it should have nothing to do with age, race or money. Laws are made for all people. If a city wishes to promote itself as a convention center and be liberal with its ordinances in order to attract these groups, all well and good. But when those ordinances are adopted and put into effect, they must apply to the citizens, regardless of age and color, as well as the tourist and conventioners. They must apply to all people.

If there is to be justice for the citizens of this city there can be no double standard in its law enforcement. But that is certainly what existed here last week-end.

Signboards clutter Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Talent makes 'Sunday in New York' a happening

It isn't easy to duplicate a New York apartment, Fifth Avenue bus, a busy street, two different restaurants, a movie theatre and the inside of a sports car on a theatre-in-the-round stage. But the Lake Wright Dinner Theatre does it, and most effectively, in its current production of "Sunday in New York".

The stage is small, the cast is limited and the sets are simple, but the play runs through various locations with all the ease of a full Broadway production. There is never any question in the audience's mind where the actors are or what situation they are simulating. The theatre scene is especially created and imaginative. With nothing more than two sofas, a flickering projector and four very talented young performers, the audience is sneaked into the theatre to get a first hand glimpse of some pretty funny shenanigans.

The plot of this Norman Krass comedy is less complex than some of the staging. It is light and airy, it is tinged with just enough sex overtones to keep the swinging set interested, and it is sedate enough to keep the more diffident theatre-goer happy. It's a play for everyone. Basically it deals with a lovely young girl, played by the lovely young Julianna Fawcett, who finds that being a virgin causes her to lose one boy friend after another, the latest being a rich, on-the-ball, perfect catch type of young man, portrayed by Russell Bob Alcaide.

To forget her sorrows she arrives in New York to visit her brother (Bill Casper) a bachelor airlines pilot and before you can bat an eye is in bed with a visiting music critic (Glenn Graham) she "hooked onto" on the bus. The author adds a little spice with the arrival of her rich boyfriend who decides he wants to marry her after all because of her virtuous qualities.

It all works out the way the audience knows it will, but it's good wholesome fun, sometimes belly-laughing fun, every inch of the way. Part of the success of the play's fast pace rests with Margaret Lunsford and David Nichols who do everything from changing props to playing five different roles. Miss Lunsford never ceases to amaze with her exceptional talent. When she gets a part which allows her to pull out the props and one in which she can really sink her teeth into, Tidewater theatre is in for a shocker. This little gal hasn't even scratched the surface yet.

The entire cast in "Sunday in New York" does an unusually good job. There were a few slow moments opening night but as a whole they were good and as the performances roll on they will undoubtedly become even better.

Special laurels are due Miss Fawcett, Graham and Nichols, Miss Fawcett is, in fact, one of the freshest, most beguiling young actresses to be seen in some time. Her naturalness in the role makes her performance most convincing. She is unusually natural and at ease, quite an accomplishment for so young an actress, relatively inexperienced in leading lady roles.

Graham is equally accomplished in his role and shows an unexpected flair and timing for comedy. He is a real fun-type, swinging through the trees type of leading man but rather a warm and gentle, slightly cynical around the edges, type of leading man. His protectiveness toward the girl he has just met, the girl of whom he cannot bring himself to take advantage, wins the ladies immediately. And his bungling attempts to pass himself off as a karate expert are sure to win sympathy from the men.

Where Graham pits his charm and talents against those of Miss Fawcett and comes out a winner, or at least on an equal footing, Nichols manages to accomplish the same feat pitted against the experience of Miss Lunsford. He is a very funny young man and is a joy to watch in the various roles he undertakes in this play.

The combination talents of these four young people actually make "Sunday in New York" what it is. Casper is good but a bit weak as the brother and Alcaide is good but a bit "holsterous" as the rich boyfriend. But they are overshadowed both in role and performance by the other performers.

The direction of Bentley Anderson undoubtedly attributed to many of the small, but important, touches that turns the play, and the performers, into a special "happening".

You cannot help but enjoy "Sunday in New York". It is good rollicking fun, a little sentimental, slightly sexy, innocently romantic. It is just good entertainment.

Plight of the Suspended Student

To the Editor:

One of the great disciplinary measures of public education is the suspending from school those students who violate the rules of the school.

Although suspension in some cases may seem necessary, there is still a question in my mind regarding the benefits of this action. Who really benefits from this action? What good does it do to disband a student from the presence of his teachers and fellow students for a certain number of days?

Most of the students I have talked with throughout the state indicate that they enjoy being put out of school for a few days because it is the "in thing". Others say they welcome suspension because it allows them to lounge around and simply vacation with legal sanction.

Is it the purpose of the suspending administrator to provide this luxury? It seems to me that more than a disciplinary action has taken place at this point. The student who is sent home usually has no one there to supervise them due to the fact that their parents or other adults are working. Is this the kind of discipline that is intended by the public school administrator? If not, then we must admit that this policy is "an unfulfilled administrative dream". If so, then we must consider it to be "useless folly." If a student is sent home because his lack of discipline has provoked suspension, what amount of discipline is he expected to maintain at home in the absence of his parents? It seems to me that it ought to be clear to administrators throughout the nation that the suspending of a student from school does more to enhance his chances of becoming exposed to that style of life associated with delinquent behavior.

The student is also placed in a "tough guy" category. This generally causes him to try to live up to this role. Nothing follows but a repetition of trouble. Very few are ashamed into positive relationships with their teachers and other students.

Some male students look forward to being suspended so they can be with their girl friends. Anyone can see what could develop in this kind of situation. The real danger lies in the fact that the parents may not be at home to prevent their children from pursuing that type of conduct which will lead to future problems. Pregnancy is only one problem. The use of drugs and other undesirable habits are possible problem areas.

It may seem that I am suggesting that teachers and administrators take the role of the parents. Although this is not my intention, it appears to me that in some instances, teachers and administrators relate better to the child or children in question, than the parents do.

Whether this is true or not is not the point. The point is that valuable time is being lost by the student while at the same

By W. A. Leavell, Ph.D.

Who in our new hanged school systems have the most influence over your child and his or her future? The Teacher, principal, superintendent, coach? No, while all of those have a finger in the pie, they are not the King bee. The King of the roost is the GUIDANCE COUNSELOR.

I guess it is telling my age but when I went to school, my mother and father were my guidance counselors. If I wanted advice, I went to them. If they wanted another opinion they went to see my teacher or someone else and got it but the decision was always up to my parents.

Today, students and parents alike seem to think the guidance counselor knows best. I hate to be the one to shake them up but this is an assumption that just isn't always true. As one eastern college admission officer said: "Unlike Doctors, counselors can't bury their mistakes. The mistakes live on, sometimes in really miserable lives."

Guidance counseling in its present form is something new. In the last 20 years, since parents seem to have abandoned their rules as the decision makers for their children, professional teachers have taken on this responsibility.

Good old Uncle Sam has been the big push behind this new field. It started about 11 years ago when Congress, alarmed by Russia's early space successes, passed the National Defense Education Act that pumped huge sums of money into the U.S. educational system. At that time we were only blessed with about 12,000 guidance counselors. Today we have more than 50,000 to contend with.

Many parents and students have great confidence in these counselors when it comes to making important decisions regarding future jobs, colleges and careers. Good or bad, the advice being handed out has great impact on our future.

Serious flaws are coming to light in the advice some of these guidance counselors are giving. The flaws are leading more and more people to wonder if their children are getting good advice. One expert in this field Dr. Frederick Gammon, guidance expert and program director of Educational Testing Services, which administers the College Board exams, says: "I have to say that as many as 75 per cent of counselors don't do any real harm, or too much good either. Of the rest, about half do great harm by giving students inaccurate information."

In general agreement is Dr. William Bingham, the noted Rutgers educational psychologist: "You could say the substantial majority of counselors are pretty innocuous - they don't help they don't hurt. But there's too large a number who place unnecessary handicaps on thousands of students every year by giving the wrong advice."

This is not a very good recommendation. This is just one of many ways the students, parents and tax payers are being short changed by the present school systems.

Most counselors are former teachers who may or may not have taken graduate courses in educational psychology and counseling methods. The typical counselor today is over 40 and began his job before training standards were upgraded. Many are frozen into their jobs by tenure, no matter how bad they are. Only 20 states require counselors to have graduate degrees. Only 10 require them to have experience in the business world.

Many states are stiffening requirements, even so parents should still take a close look at the counseling in their children's school and find out how good it is or how bad, as the case may be.

Some things to look for are:

Are the counselors free of noncounseling chores? Do the principals understand what counseling is all about? Do your counselors have advance degrees?

Do they meet the latest state requirements? Do they often visit colleges, industrial and business places to keep up with the outside world?

If the answers to these questions aren't satisfactory parents should press their school boards for improvements or to do away with the job until competent counselors can be found.

Many students careers and happiness depend on good counseling. A youngster will have many chances to make his own mistakes. He doesn't need anyone to make them for him. Just because your school administrators say it's good doesn't make it so. Find out for yourself.

Leave Government Under City Manager

The question of two weeks ago concerning the possible renaming of Mount Trashmore continued to draw response during the week. Most of them followed the trend already set in holding on to the present name but there were two who opposed it.

One reader made this comment: "Dear Editor: I think the reason for Mount Trashmore is great. But let's try calling it Mount View."

Last week's question generated very little interest but those who did respond were adamant in their belief that Virginia Beach, along with all cities in the state, is much better off with the city manager form of government.

The question was "Should the Mayor be elected by the people and act as the city's chief executive officer?" The response was 100 per cent in favor of leaving things the way they are.

As one reader commented: "The City Manager form of government is considered by most scholars of city government as the most effective. The voice of the people and policy are elected in the council, while the city manager, away from politics, administers the policy. An elected Mayor usually ends with a kind of 'one man rule'."

The city has a number of boards and commissions which are appointed by City Council. Even though these board members oversee important matters pertaining to most residents of the city, the voters never have voice in selecting these members. This week we deal with this particular arrangement.

For the reader's information, following is a list of these appointed groups:

Administrative	Advisory
Advertising Board	Community College Committee
Building Board of Adjustments and Appeals	Virginia Beach Highway Safety Commission
Building Committee	Historical Review Board
Board of Electrical Examiners	Library Board
Industrial Development Authority	Parks and Recreation Board
Planning Commission	Rudee Inlet Authority
Board of Plumbing Appeals	Welfare Advisory Committee
Board of Plumbing Examiners	Airport Advisory Board
School Board	Civic Center Board
	Personnel Board

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Do you think members of the city's boards and commissions which most affect the general public, such as the School Board and Planning Commission, should be elected rather than appointed by City Council?

Your comments and signed letters would be appreciated also.

Group Effort Diagnoses Learning Difficulties

The Diagnostic Team wants to make its presence known. The team is a highly trained group of five who are working under a federal grant to diagnose and prescribe treatment for learning difficulties of Virginia Beach public school students. Included are a coordinator, two psychologists and two instructional specialists.

A learning disability is defined as any disorder that prohibits the acquiring and using of skills essential to learning. The team has been working at the Center for Effective Learning on Witchduck Road since July 1, and in that short time 61 children have been referred to them.

According to Edwin Brown, team coordinator, Virginia Beach has made tremendous progress in the last two years in recognizing the need for treatment of learning disabilities with the establishment of the Center for Effective Learning last year. Besides children with learning problems, the Center has classes for pre-school hearing impaired, emotionally handicapped, disabled readers, trainable mentally retarded, and educable mentally retarded.

Children who have learning disabilities but are not eligible for any of these classes are evaluated by the Team and a learning prescription is written. The child's strengths and weaknesses are evaluated and the teacher is told how to work with the child in class. One of the instructional specialists works with the teacher in implementing the prescription and checking progress.

"The average teacher doesn't get a course in learning disabilities unless they've been to college in the last two or three years," commented Mrs. Hazel Severance, one of the instructional specialists. "They've just been recognized."

"We're the last stop in the school system," explained Brown. Before a student is referred to the Team, other specialists are used first. This could be, depending upon the problem, a reading diagnostician, audiologist, vision specialist, corrective reading teacher, speech therapist, visiting teacher, supervisor, helping teacher or school nurse. Before a student is referred to a conference between parents, teacher and principal is held. The parents' permission is necessary for referral.

Next the students' cumulative record, anecdotal records and samples of class work are sent to the Team who then decide what course of action and what tests are needed, then whether the student should be recommended for placement in the Center. If the student is not eligible it must be decided what can be done for him. The student is also observed in the classroom. Conferences are held with the teacher by the coordinator, instructional specialist and psychologist to discuss what has been found and what is suggested.

"We explain to the teacher that it will take time," said Brown. "This isn't a hasty thing. If the prescription needs revising or extending she is told to contact us. It is a lengthy process because of the kinds of testing involved and the need for specialized material and prescriptions."

Brown added that sometimes the Team recommends an outside facility to parents for more sophisticated testing or treatment; for instance a neurologist or audiologist.

As a follow-up to the prescription the team coordinator and/or instructional specialist confers with school personnel involved to determine the effectiveness of the program and need for adjustment.

The Team is funded under Title III funds for innovations and services in the school system. The grant is for a maximum of three years, allocated one year at a time on the basis of annual progress reports. The grant is supplemented by city funds and will "hopefully" be fully supported by the city in three years, Brown said.

Team members have already made presentations about their role in the school system to elementary and secondary principals and guidance counselors. This week they began visiting school facilities to explain the program.

The backgrounds of the Team members are varied. Brown, a William and Mary graduate, has a masters degree, has taught fifth and sixth grade here, been an assistant principal and a coordinator for the school system.

Mrs. Severance is from North Carolina, taught primary grades in Virginia Beach, has a masters degree in guidance, taught eighth grade English and was a guidance counselor at Cox High School, was an elementary supervisor in Hawaii and is consultant for a publishing company.

Mrs. Nancy Andresen, also an instructional specialist, was originally from Texas, taught primary grades in Texas and California, worked with the Tidewater Association for Retarded Children here, then primary special education courses.

DeFord Names 'Friends' Acres

Robert H. DeFord Jr., has announced a ten member "Friends of Virginia Wesleyan College" committee for Virginia Beach. DeFord is Virginia Beach chairman in the 1970 "Friends" program.

An organizational meeting was held at the College on Sept. 23. At that time, Dr. Lambuth M. Clarke, president and James R. Bergdoll, Director of Development, spoke to the ten committee members and the members of their subcommittees concerning the 1970 "Friends" program.

This program is designed to seek operating support for the four year, private, liberal arts college. Wesleyan receives most of its budgetary support from student fees and an annual appropriation from the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church. College officials hope to receive at least five percent of the $1,500,000 budget for this year through the "Friends" program.

Bridges Appointed Counselor

Dr. Douglas M. Montgomery, president of Tidewater Community College, has announced the appointment of David W. Bridges as a counselor for that institution.

Bridges, a native of Orlando, Fla., attended schools in that city. He received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Florida and also attended Tulane University and the College of William and Mary. He received his master of science degree in guidance and counseling from Old Dominion University.

He resides with his wife and two sons at Red Coat Road in Virginia Beach.

think it's valuable," said Brickell. "The School Board has absolutely no desire and absolutely no intention of building a school where it would be detrimental. The people that support this thing haven't been heard."

Brickell said that last Friday he met with a biochemist and a botanist to get their opinions of possible damage to wildlife in the area, but he has not received their reports yet. "Hopefully they will be neutral," said Brickell.

The Citizens Committee for Seashore State Park states that its sole purpose is to "Save the Park. We are dedicated to the proposition that park land is a valuable, scarce commodity, too precious to lend, lease or sell, that it must be kept in trust for future generations; that the portion of the park north of Route 60 is part of the Cape Henry historical area, part of the small barrier dune area, contains one of the highest dunes on the East Coast, supports about 200 species of birds, and is a valuable open air classroom."

"Government - the great land is held for use of the highest number of people," said Brickell. "The state would not have turned it over to us if it had greater use otherwise."

What are the present uses of the land? For one thing the 4-H Club has leased part of the 50 acre track north of Shore Drive for some years now. The State Department of Parks expects them to continue there. Their cabins adjoin the proposed site.

According to Bolen complaints have been received from local citizens who are concerned about "young people gathering there for noisy parties and leaving debris strewn over the grounds."

Mrs. Sills refuted this by saying, "We don't have drunken adults here anymore. The only ones who come here are teens. Where else is there for them to go? We've seen more groups of young people during the day too."

However, at the time she made the statement, both remnants of campfires and scattered beer cans spoiled the natural landscape.

Another use has been by a few teachers for field trips. The Committee has letters from some of them objecting to the destruction of their outdoor classroom. However, the main Seashore State Park not only has marked nature trails, it also has a nature center, plus adequate parking spaces for school buses.

The site triangular is bordered on one side by Fort Story and on another by a swamp - which also separates it still further from the main park - and on the third by homes and the 4-H camp. There are no marked trails, nor are plants identified.

Although the site has not definitely been accepted as the one for the North Virginia Beach school, an architectural firm, McClurg & Wall, is working on preliminary plans for a school which is to include an indoor swimming pool and tennis courts. If the park site is used dirt will be hauled in and grass planted.

A pool has long been desired by the School Board to provide swimming lessons for all elementary school children. At present fourth graders are bussed into Norfolk for lessons at the Boys Club pool. Those who do not take lessons during the winter have a chance to learn in summer classes at a rented pool near Kempville.

Brickell said that building the school on the park site "is economically feasible since it's free. No site comes ready for building. We spend from $50,000 to $200,000 on site preparation every time we build a school. People don't realize this. Thorough engineering studies have been made. We don't just jump in."

Another question raised by the committee has been that of sewage. Homes in North Virginia Beach are on septic tanks. Preliminary plans call for the school to have a septic tank. If the Virginia Beach Health Department approves, until sewer lines are extended to the area.

Mrs. Sills also said that a school is not needed in that area. She said that a count by the Citizens Committee showed an average of three school children per block from 72nd Street to 89th Street. The school is to be for 900 children.

"We need to relieve what is going to take place in the next two years at Dey, Linton Park, Alanton and W. T. Cooke schools," said Brickell. He explained that Virginia Beach Junior High School would become eighth and ninth grades only to relieve First Colonial High School. The seventh grade of the junior high school, that is students who would attend seventh grade there, will have to be absorbed elsewhere. Thus the need for an additional school.

Brickell said that another complaint he has heard is that the widening of the streets for access roads will encroach upon private property. "One man said 'You're taking my front yard.' What he didn't realize is that there's an 80 foot right of way along there."

The Citizens Committee has been asked to get a complete file on the site for the Conservation Council meeting in October. "Hundreds of people have been contacted," said Mrs. Sills. "We've sent out hundreds of notices of meetings. Conservationists have been advised of the situation."

Other Citizens Committee members include Dr. David Delzell, biologist-ecologist at Old Dominion University; Scott Sterling, owner of Princess Anne Inn; Rev. Joseph W.

Pinder, All Saints Episcopal Church; Mrs. M. F. Fogarty, conservation chairman of the Garden Club of Virginia; Mrs. Charles M. Lovitt, headmistress of the girls division of Norfolk Academy; Joseph C. Davis, Jr., a Virginia Polytechnic Institute graduate with a degree in forestry; Mrs. Mary Frances Morrisette, president of the Virginia Federation of Humane Societies; James E. Rinehart, attorney; Mrs. Ralph Ramsey, sociologist and president of the North Shore Civic League (She is not a permanent resident.)

This is not the first time the land has been sought for a school site. In 1954 Princess Anne County sought 20 acres in the same area and was turned down.

Mrs. Sills said that whether or not the Citizens Committee wins its present fight, she will go before the General Assembly to get a law passed that will put state park land back under the control of the General Assembly as it was in the past.

Mrs. Sills said she had been accused of fighting to save her own back yard. "I can't blame me with a yard line that?" The land is valuable - at least locally. The question, which may not be settled any time soon, is to whom is it the most valuable?

Local Commander Retires

LI, Cmdr. Everett E. Ishie, Administrative Officer, of the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base retired from the U. S. Navy on July 31 after 30-years of active service.

LCDR Ishie was a Merchant Marine Engineer from 1934 until 1940 when he joined the U. S. Naval Reserve Training Program, at Jacksonville, Fla. In Sept. 1940 and was called to active duty in Dec. 1940.

LCDR Ishie is a native of Jacksonville, Fla. He is married to the former Barbara Dee Campbell also of Jacksonville, and they now make their home on Bradley Way, Virginia Beach.

Kids Day Saturday

The Virginia Beach Kiwanis Club will hold its ninth annual "Kids Day" outing this Saturday at the Oceana Naval Air Station, program chairman Tom Follary said Tuesday.

Buses will pick up any children interested in the event at the Civic Center at 18th Street and Pacific Avenue at 9 a.m. They will be the guests of the air station for lunch, and will return to the Civic Center at 2:30 p.m.

Follary requested that any group of children who would like to attend be accompanied by a responsible adult.

As one of Veeco's Customer Service Representatives, Stefani Gendron can answer almost any question about your account in a matter of seconds. And the question asked most often recently is this: "Why was my summer bill higher than usual?" The reason, as Stefani can tell you, is threefold:

- 1: Because of increased costs of fuel, environmental controls, labor, freight and interest, Veeco has just been granted its first rate increase in 17 years.
- 2: Under the new rates, there is a higher charge for electricity in the summer than in the winter because the higher summer demand requires the use of expensive production facilities not fully utilized during the balance of the year.

(Bills vary, too, from customer to customer, depending on the amount of electricity used by each customer, and how he uses it.)

And 3: Some communities have increased the tax they place on your electric bill.

With all these factors occurring at once, your summer bill was higher than usual. Veeco, and all the Stefani Gendrons, can understand your concern. So if you have a question regarding your bill, please call one of the Customer Service Representatives in your area. She'll be glad to help.

Tobiasse Committed To Hospital

Edward Tobiasse, facing Municipal Court proceedings on a charge of attempted murder, has been committed to Central State Hospital for a 90-day observation period.

Tobiasse, 46, has been charged with the wounding of Mrs. Mary E. Catlin on July 26. Investigators say she was shot five times in the chest with a .22 caliber rifle during an argument in Tobiasse's home in the 1100 block of Carver Avenue.

The commission of Tobiasse came on the recommendation of Dr. L.L. Hancock following his examination of the accused after the shooting.

Safety Programs to Be Offered to Local Groups

The Virginia Beach Safety Council during its meeting last week outlined plans to offer a series of various safety programs to business, civic and fraternal organizations of the city.

A survey of the various organizations is being conducted to determine what fields of safety would be of interest to these groups in order for the Council to prepare presentations to fill the largest demands.

A number of presentations have already been prepared, including such topics as highway and traffic safety, boating safety and motorcycle safety, by the Council and are available upon request.

Organizations who desire to make use of these presentations should submit their request in writing to the Virginia Beach Safety Council, P.O. Box 6163, Princess Anne Station, Virginia Beach, Va., 23466.

Sgt. F.R. Scarborough, of the police Traffic Division, informed Council members he is finalizing plans for a safe boating training program which he hopes to offer in the public schools of the city in the near future.

Scarborough indicates the program will be designed to instruct young people in the basic fundamentals of safe boat handling and acquaint them with regulations governing the operation of boats on the waterways of the resort city.

Elmer Barbour, City School Coordinator of Driver Education, informed the Council of the recent completion of a "Driver Education Range" at Princess Anne High School and the method the range is being implemented in the training of high school students in getting their drivers license. Barbour also pointed out construction is underway on a second such facility at Kellam High School.

Samuel B. Ferrell, Jr., vice president of the Norfolk Safety Council, attended the meeting to brief Council members on the planned operation of the "Safety City" which will be established in the Military Circle shopping center in Norfolk.

Members of the Council reaffirmed their intentions to continue efforts towards establishing a "Safety City" within Virginia Beach.

Frank Williamson, recently appointed assistant to the director of the city's General Services Department, attended the meeting.

Williamson has just been appointed as a full time member of the Safety Council, and pledged his support in efforts to implement Council programs and recommendations in the operations of the various departments of the city government.

Flag Defacer Sentenced

Lawrence John Lucke was fined $250 and sentenced to 45 days in jail by Judge F.B. White Wednesday following his Municipal Court conviction of defacing the American flag.

Authorities said Lucke, 21, stationed at Ft. Story was charged with defacing the flag on Sept. 17 at his E. Stratford Road home.

According to officials investigators went to Lucke's home on a drug abuse law investigation and witnessed a small American flag sewn to the seat of his blue-jeans.

Investigators said they also charged Lucke with the alleged sale of LSD. This charge has yet to be aired in court.

Plastic bags, such as these being loaded onto a City Sanitation Department truck, have become of concern for the safety of trash collectors.

Care Asked with Plastic Bags

The cooperation of residents and employees of business firms of Virginia Beach is being sought to correct a situation which has resulted in the injury of a number of city employees collecting trash.

According to Cecil Land, supv. of the dept. of sanitation, a number of trash collectors have been injured by broken glass and other sharp objects being disposed of in large, plastic garbage bags which are becoming a popular replacement for the standard metal garbagecan.

Land indicates the glass fragments and similar objects, in a number of cases puncture the plastic garbage bag and thus present a hazard to trash collectors. A number of collectors have already been injured in collecting such material by receiving cuts about their hands and arms.

In requesting public cooperation, Land points out he is not being critical of the use of these plastic garbage disposal bags nor is he in any way attempting to discourage their use.

Land said, "We'd like to encourage the use of these plastic bags, but when disposing of broken glass and other sharp objects the items should be wrapped in some type of heavy paper or similar material which would prevent the breaking of the bag."

Reward Fund Established

Dewey Howell, owner of the Village Auction House near Suffolk, has established a reward fund for information leading to the location of those responsible for the slaying of Ralph W. Young of the Eastern Shore.

Howell indicates he intends to donate receipts of an Oct. 14 auction at his place of business into the reward fund.

The partially decomposed body of 51-year-old Young was discovered Sept. 10 in a drainage ditch at the end of Bonnydale Road in Acredale.

An autopsy indicated that Young had died of multiple stab wounds of the chest and neck, that he had been beaten about the head with a blunt instrument, and that his body had been in the drainage ditch three to six days prior to being found.

Young was reportedly last seen alive on Sept. 5 when he left his Northampton County home on a business trip in his car. Police say one of the key factors in their investigation into the killing of Young is the location of Young's missing car, described as a gold and black 1969 Buick Electra bearing Virginia license A212E.

600. Officials say the search for the missing car has extended from Virginia Beach throughout the Tidewater area, the Eastern Shore and Maryland.

Virginia Beach police are being assisted in their search for the missing car by other law enforcement agencies throughout Tidewater and the State Police, who have utilized helicopters in the search.

Investigators have requested anyone who believes they may have any information which might lead to the location of the car to contact the Virginia Beach police Detective Division.

With a Little Help...

Whether he needed it or not, Virginia Beach police Sgt. K.A. Belangia got a little help from a little friend during the Shriners' Parade Saturday. Although the man in front is the real law in town, the Keystone Cop got more response from the crowd as he followed the Sergeant through precise maneuvers down the parade route.

"The happy I am when I'm straight is more beautiful than the happy I seemed to be when I was stoned."

The girl in the picture is named Chris. For over a year, she was on amphetamines, powerful drugs known as "speed." This is how she describes it:

"I think 'speed' is a lot worse than heroin. Kids have got to know about it, because they can fall so easily into taking it through the diet pill hassle, or needing something to help them study. You know, that's crazy. Because the combination of amphetamines and no sleep just blows your memory completely. There are whole sections of my life which I just can't remember. It got to be just 'do a little more, do a little more,' until that was all there was. And the 'crashing'... sometimes the 'crashing' is just really awful!

"For me to stop taking it, I had to feel that people were caring. And they were. I was really lucky. I was very close to two people that were really into amphetamines very deeply, and I loved them a lot. But as far as they were concerned, the only thing that they had was the 'meth,' and that was their life. And they're both dead now."

"Dexies," "bennies," "meth" are all called "speed" these days. And people who know "speed" know "speed" kills!

caused by inflammation. Doctors have found a medication that in many cases gives prompt, temporary relief from pain and burning itch in hemorrhoidal tissues. Then it actually helps shrink swelling of these tissues caused by inflammation.

The answer is Preparation H. No prescription is needed for Preparation H. Ointment or suppositories.

Lovisis Await Sentencing

Margaret and Aldo Lovisi are awaiting sentencing after being found guilty Tuesday by Circuit Court Judge Philip Russo on charges of sodomy.

The charges resulted from the alleged discovery by police of a large quantity of photos, movies, books and magazines, which have been classified as obscene, in the Lovisi home on Alantone Drive on April 18, 1969.

The indictments against the Lovisis were returned by a grand jury but at the outset of the trial the Lovisis entered pleas of not guilty to the charges and elected instead for the case to be heard by Judge Russo.

After finding both Mrs. Lovisi, 32 and her husband, 41, guilty as charged, Judge Russo granted a defense motion to withhold sentencing pending the outcome of background reports on the Lovisis.

Judge Russo also permitted the Lovisis to remain free on bonds.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, September 24, 1970

Future club women with their mother--Kimberly, Lynn, Mrs. Winfree and Laura.

Activities earn recognition for junior club's president

Before Fred Winfree, III leaves for work in the morning, he asks his wife Mattie her agenda for the day. No wonder. She's on the go all the time.

Mattie Winfree has just been named an "Outstanding Young Woman of America" and her biography will appear in the 1970 edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America." Her name was submitted for consideration by the Virginia Beach Princess Anne Junior Women's Club of which she is serving her second term as president.

During her terms the club's pre-school for mentally retarded school has been expanded by the addition of a second class which began this fall at Wycliffe Presbyterian Church. The first began at Galilee Episcopal Church two years ago. They are supported by the annual "Folies."

Her membership in the club came four years ago--just after she finished her term as president of the Virginia Beach Jayettes. Since she has joined the Jayettes, she has been Folies co-chairman, advertising chairman for the program for the folies and a member of the board of governors.

But her offices spread beyond that. She is also publicity chairman of the Tidewater District, Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, assistant junior director for the district, and vice president of the Tidewater Presidents Council. Mattie also attends meetings of the Virginia Beach Council of Federated Women's Clubs.

In between she is a teacher's aide in the reading program at Star of the Sea School where she is also a member of the Home and School Association and has volunteered for cafeteria duty. Her three children are Laura, a fourth grader; Kimberly, a third grader and Lynn in the first grade.

Since club meetings and school activities dropped off during the summer, Mattie completed a modeling course at Charm Associates. She and her family also found time to sail to Maryland for a week. They are active members of the Broad Bay Sailing Association.

Mattie says she really enjoys club work. "I think a woman can really get in a rut of everyday routine. In club work you meet friends your own age. It's a good outlet and a chance to do things in the neighborhood that need to be done."

Although she laughed and said Fred might express a different opinion of her club work, she said, "I think he enjoys it--I know he does the socials. He gets with the other husbands and jokes about what all the wives do."

Mattie, a native of Troy, N.Y., has lived in Virginia Beach 11 years since her marriage. No wonder she likes activity, though. While in New York she was assistant to Gov. Averell Harriman's executive secretary.

"We used to work until one or two in the morning. It was a lot of work but a lot of fun. I met James Roosevelt and Harry Truman and talked to Eddie Cantor on the phone. I still pick up the newspaper and read about people I've met or corresponded with. It brings back pleasant memories."

As to the future--"I'd like to get back in secretarial work." She said, though, that she would prefer to work parttime or in temporary jobs because ordinary office routine is too confining.

Her selection as an Outstanding Young Woman was based on involvement and civic activities. No comment needed.

Are Wedding Bells Ringing?

If you are announcing an engagement or wedding, why not do it in the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN?

Brides are asked to submit their photographs (5x7 or 8x10 glossy) by Monday of the week they want the announcement to appear on Thursday. Wedding and engagement forms are available at the newspaper office, 3108 Pacific Avenue.

All weddings and engagements received will be used. However, photographs will not be returned by mail but may be picked up at the newspaper office.

Judging symposium scheduled

The Virginia Council of Accredited Flower Show Judges is sponsoring a symposium on judging, Tuesday through Thursday, Oct. 6-7, at the Norfolk Botanical Gardens Auditorium.

The program is sponsored by the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc., and the Cooperative Extension Service, department of horticulture, Virginia Tech.

The program is open to the public and anyone interested in learning about judging may attend. The symposium is part of a regular series designed for nationally-accredited flower show judges. Several courses also are held at Virginia Tech during the year.

The program will include discussions concerning various flowers, flower arranging, the judges image and his role, and other topics. In the afternoon of each day, there will be a point scoring examination for the participants.

Other aspects of the program will feature discussions of plant classification by Albert Beecher, professor of horticulture at Virginia Tech, and of conservation and environment, by J. C. Garrett, extension specialist in community landscape improvement.

Richard Lafean, head of the Norfolk Museum Art School, will discuss ceramics and "new techniques."

Other participants in the program include: Mrs. Frank Lukanich, president of the Virginia Council of Accredited Flower Show Judges; Dr. Henry P. Orr, professor of ornamental horticulture at Auburn University; Mrs. John W. Knight, president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs; Mrs. Ivy Engrat, Richmond, historian for the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, and others.

For more details, contact Albert Beecher, professor of horticulture, Smyth Hall, Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va. 24061.

The Birthday Girl and her daughter, Mrs. Dolgins. (VU Photos)

She's 70 years young the children or my husband my true age before, but now that 70 I guess it's alright."

The best toast of the evening was made by husband Morty to the birthday girl: "To my sweetheart, with all my love."

The party was held at the Dolgins home on Deary Lane. The Ethelsons also celebrated their first year as residents of Virginia Beach; they have an apartment at Birdneck Village.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dolgins, and son Gary of Virginia Beach had a "70 Years Young Party" for Mrs. Morton Ethelson, who is Mrs. Dolgins mother.

On hand for the event in addition to the Dolgins family, were Mr. and Mrs. Bob Etelson and daughter Tracey who came down from Pomona, N.Y. for the party. They are Mrs. Etelson's son, daughter-in-law, and granddaughter. Granddaughter Robin was not able to make the trip but had just been down for two week visit with her grandparents. Of course Dad Etelson, "The Candy Man," shared the happy event with the "70 year young star."

Although the big party was Saturday evening the family who had not been together for over a year started celebrating on Friday and continued all weekend.

The birthday cake, in the form of a "70" and iced in chocolate, was the outstanding decoration of the evening. A gay dinner party was held for all the family and a few close friends came by later to share the unusual birthday cake.

Mrs. Etelson was truly the star of the evening looking beautiful and very, very, young for 70. She said, "I've never told

Goodbye, Hermie

Hermie has gone the way of all good hermit crabs.

The sad news was brought to me (literally) by the nine-year-old as she hunted me down two houses away where I was busily engaged in giving her seven-year-old sister a permanent. She had the shell in her hand--with a couple claws sticking out.

(Miss America fans will note that this year's winner while serving as Miss Texas brought a hermit crab all the way from Texas to Atlantic City by airplane as a lucky charm.)

Well, anyhow, the nine-year-old, after I agreed that it looked pretty lifeless to me, decided to put the crab back into the aquarium one more day to see if it would revive.

It didn't.

The next day she made up her mind to bury it in the backyard. That was fine until the following day when the nine-year-old next door came over to visit. She also had two hermit crabs and she proceeded to tell our nine-year-old that she had buried Hermie alive; that Hermie wasn't really dead, he was only shedding his old shell.

So they went to dig Hermie up.

Thank goodness they couldn't find him (her, it?)

There might be something in the fact that Hermie's demise came the day after he visited the nine-year-old's fourth grade class. Too many cookie crumbs maybe? The crabs eat cookie crumbs, lettuce (when we can afford it), corn meal and raw apple. Come to think of it, with a diet like that no wonder he died.

Now I have been instructed to bring home another one. But it has to have red claws. You see, there's still one left (with black claws) and the nine-year-old doesn't want him (her, it?) to know Hermie is gone.

The seven-year-old got into the act by demanding a bath. She's being ignored.

Lyles

Attorney Joe Lyle told YWCA members Tuesday that the crackdown on drugs should be aimed at organized crime which provides the drugs rather than sentencing marijuana smokers to long jail terms. Lyle, who is a former assistant Commonwealth's Attorney now in private practice, spoke at the Y's first forum of the fall. He works along with other doctors, lawyers and clergymen at the Free Clinic which operates at the beach to advise and rehabilitate people on drugs.

"If you're not interested in drugs you'd better get interested," said Lyle. "It's spreading."

He pointed out that conviction of a young person on a drug charge really restricts their future because 95% of the cases are felonies. If convicted of a felony, the young person involved can never erase it from his record.

Lyle said that 90% of drugs are imported illegally and that Customs agents have the heaviest responsibility for stopping the smuggling of drugs. He said that 900 new inspectors have been added in just the past few months.

"When my wife and I came back from Spain last month, there was a very pregnant looking woman who got off the plane with us. The Customs inspector searched her, and she wasn't pregnant at all. She had a bird cage full of marijuana strapped around her waist."

"A five-year-old child with an ice cream cone was with its parents. Customs inspectors found two grams of heroin in the bottom of the cone."

One of the biggest dangers of "hard" drugs (heroin, cocaine, morphine) besides addiction is the impurities in them, Lyle said. "In this area a given parcel of heroin is five percent pure. In N.Y. it averages 20%. Death is instantaneous if a local drug user should get the stronger dose. And they don't know where it comes from."

Lyle said that although marijuana cannot be proved to be harmful, the real danger is in a pusher mixing a hard drug with the marijuana and the marijuana user becoming addicted to it this way, eventually needing stronger drugs. He is not in favor of legalizing, however, because although the pusher and profit would be eliminated ($20 2.5 lb. package imported from overseas could be divided and sold for $2,000), there is still the danger of weak persons becoming addicted to hard drugs.

"In all societies there are weak people that need a crutch. These people go on to stronger things, not the others."

"It's against the law and we ought to obey the law," said Lyle. "It's as simple as that."

"Why make such a big deal about drugs? Burglary is much more prevalent. It really gets me that otherwise productive, intelligent young people, except for their smoking marijuana, are caught and prosecuted and burglars are not."

"The problem ought to be met head on. We've got to keep the lines of communication open." He estimated that more than half the high school and junior high school students in the city have had some experience with drugs.

"I'm convinced that anyone who saw what hard drugs and marijuana would do to them in terms of jail sentences would get off," commented Lyle. "There's not just one thing that will work for them." He suggested taking young people to court to see a drug trial. Other suggestions were talks with parents, schools or clergymen or a visit to the clinic.

One of the problems with marijuana, he pointed out, is that it is legally and morally acceptable in Vietnam. "Everybody there does (smoke it). An 18-year-old goes over and sees people doing it. He does too. He sends some home to his sister or brings it home in his duffel bag."

Young people today say that adults are hypocrites for condemning marijuana and then drinking liquor Lyle said. "The difference is that liquor was ingrained in our culture when the first settlers came to America. Marijuana was not."

The next forum will be at 11:30 a.m. Oct. 5 when Rev. Richard Woodward will discuss "God's Plan for a Family" at the United Community Fund Service Center in the Princess Theatre Building.

Mrs. Dodson

Craft-Dodson wedding

Miss Linda Louise Craft became the bride of David Eugene Dodson in a 5 p.m. candlelight ceremony on Saturday, Sept. 19 at Azalea Baptist Church in Norfolk with the Rev. C. Norman Bennett, Jr. officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louise Elwood Craft, Sr. of Pinewood Drive.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Stanton Dodson of Delray Court.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length Juliet-style gown of satin with an empire waist and a Juliet head piece. Miss Sandy Jean Craft of Virginia Beach was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Carolyn Dodson and Mrs. Louise Dodson, sisters in law of the bridegroom, both of Virginia Beach, and Miss Sally Verner and Miss Brenda Poff of Virginia Beach. Stephanie Dodson, the bridegroom's niece, was flower girl and Tommy Hutcherson of Virginia Beach, and Joseph Nicolay, also of Virginia Beach.

Following a reception in the church Social Hall, the couple left on a wedding trip to Atlanta.

Ga. They will live in Virginia Beach where the bride is employed by Government Employee Insurance Company. The bridegroom is employed at Norfolk Naval Air Station.

Mrs. Green new pres.

N.W.C.A. Dam Neck #207 held its eleventh annual installation of Officers Saturday, at the CPO Club, Dam Neck.

Mrs. Harold Payne, outgoing president, conducted the evening's program. Guest speaker was Capt. Alwyn Smith Jr., Commanding Officer of the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center, Dam Neck.

An Outstanding Member Award was presented to Mrs. Len Wolfe after which the following incoming officers were installed: President, Mrs. Thomas A. Green; Vice-President, Mrs. Mort Dagenkolb; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Robert Klotz; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. William Watson; Treasurer, Mrs. Donald Yancy; Parliamentarian, Mrs. Ray Tschellin; and Chaplain, Mrs. Lawrence Hansberry. Sponsors installed were Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Cassaboom.

During the course of the evening a brief history of the club was given by Mrs. Wolfe, guards of office were presented by Mrs. Payne and Area Council pins were presented by Mrs. John C. Beard.

Miss Buffington (Boice Studio)

Miss Buffington engaged

Mr. and Mrs. James Wagner Buffington of Princess Anne Station announce the engagement of their daughter, Ann Winslow, to George Sitgreaves Attmore.

Mr. Attmore is the son of Mrs. Harold Thomas of Greenville, N.C. and the late George Sitgreaves Attmore.

Miss Buffington, a 1968 graduate of Norfolk Academy, is a junior at East Carolina University where she is a member of Chi Omega social sorority and Psi Chi honorary psychology fraternity.

Mr. Attmore graduated from Washington High School in Washington, N. C. and served as a commissioned officer in the U. S. Army, returning from Vietnam in 1968. He is also a junior at East Carolina University.

The wedding will take place Jan. 2 in Nimmo Methodist Church.

Apple Amber, apple meringue pie seasoned with cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, is a popular English dessert.

When a pie is not a pie

Give an Englishman a pie and he's liable to call it something like "Apple Amber", because the British just don't see pies as we do. They taught us how to take some fruit and spice it with aromatic cinnamon and nutmeg and perhaps a bit of cloves, and wrap it in dough, but they call that a tart. A pie to them means a meat or poultry filling.

And when the "Jacks" leave off the top crust, as in the spicy applesauce "pie" we offer today, they just don't think of it as either pie or tart. It's a "flan" or then again, Apple Amber.

Let stand 10 minutes. Stir in applesauce and lemon juice. Turn mixture into pie shell. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (375 F.) 1 hour or until pie is firm in the center and crust is brown. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add remaining 1/4 cup sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Spread meringue over filling, sealing it to edges of pie shell all around. Increase oven heat to hot (425 F.). Bake 5 minutes or until meringue is browned. Yield: 1 9-inch pie.

FRENCH PEAR TART

2 cups flour
3 tbs sugar
1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp grated lemon peel
3 hard-cooked egg yolks, mashed
2 raw egg yolks
1 tsp pure vanilla extract
3/4 cup butter or margarine
1 pkg. (3-3/4 oz.) French vanilla pudding and pie filling
1 can (1 lb. 13 oz.) pear halves
2 tsp cornstarch
1/4 cup brown sugar
1 tbs lemon juice
1/2 tsp anise seed

In a mixing bowl place flour, Make a well in the center; add sugar, salt, lemon peel, mashed egg yolks and raw egg yolks, vanilla and butter. With fingers make a paste of center ingredients, gradually, but quickly, working in flour to form a smooth firm dough. (Dough should leave side of bowl when finished). Wrap in waxed paper and chill until firm enough to roll. Roll pastry between 2 sheets of waxed paper to fit bottom and sides of pan. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350 F.) 30 to 35 minutes or until browned. Set aside to cool. Meanwhile, prepare pudding following package directions. Cool slightly. Turn into pie shell. Chill until almost set. Drain pears reserving 2/3 cup of the syrup. Arrange pears in pinwheel fashion over pudding; set aside. In a small saucepan combine reserved syrup with remaining ingredients. Bring to boiling point. Cook and stir until thickened and clear. Cool slightly. Spoon syrup mixture over pears. Chill thoroughly before serving. Yield: 1 10-inch pie.

Fundraising can be fun, if one uses the facilities of the Vepco auditorium, with Mrs. Betty Curran, Home Economist, as hostess in her kitchen and dining area, where she demonstrates with skill and alacrity her culinary arts.

The Linkhorn Park Garden Club, members and friends, met Thursday to watch Mrs. Curran create such delightful dishes as Smithfield Ham Dip, with Cream Cheese Squares, Party Chicken, Herb Baked Tomatoes, Crunchy Pineapple Mold, Meat Balls with Poppy Seed Noodles and German Pound Cake.

Mrs. Jack Harvey is ways and means chairman. She was in the welcoming line, with Mrs. J. James Davis, president of the club, whose table arrangement of marigolds and abrown, orange and black shrub and berries creation called "Halloween Bride" was won by Mrs. Wool, while Mrs. Jerri Malloy, a past president of the club, carried off the door prize, an electric casserole.

The first regular meeting of the Linkhorn Park Garden Club will be held at the Princess Anne Country Club at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 2, when, according to Mrs. Thomas Rose, first vice-president, the speaker will be Mrs. W. Clyde Simpson, Australian native, who will discuss "Australian Gardens and Flowers," using colored slides. Members and their friends will then have lunch. Call Mrs. Davis at 428-6032.

For this lad, it was a day to sit in a swing and take in the activities.

Seatack Park Comes to Life

A dream came true Saturday afternoon for the Virginia Beach Jaycees but more importantly it finally happened for the youngsters of the Seatack community, for Saturday was the long-awaited day of dedication for the Seatack Community Park. After months of work and planning by the armed forces, the Seatack Community League, the Jaycees and other groups, the courts were finally finished, the swings in place and the trash barrels set out; the park was ready for play.

And while the children may enjoy the new additions to their neighborhood—which played a key role in the All America Cities presentation—it was obvious that the people who were enjoying the celebration most were the Jaycees, for it had been a pet project from its inception.

Jaycees President Robert Warren declined to put a price tag on the park, which includes a football field, baseball diamond, and basketball court, but it was apparent that payment had already been made.

like the council to adopt an ordinance the city once passed in the form of a resolution in August, 1965.

The resolution states: "On a motion by Mr. Darden, seconded by Mr. Pollock, and by unanimous vote, the council authorized the planning commission to refuse to accept any applications for a use permit on the proposed Virginia Beach toll road."

Any resolutions passed by one city council are not binding on successive city councils, and thus the 1965 resolution is not binding on the present council. What the admirals would like is something that would apply uniformly to all councils.

"The long established practice that business can do what it wants has gone by the boards," said the commission's executive vice president, Joseph W. Viner, and Patrick agrees. "It has to be a balance. It has to be what the people themselves want and when a subject comes along and becomes a political issue, there should be a adequate number of people down there at city hall with a spokesman," Patrick said.

And that's exactly how the admirals has been working. He has appeared before several informal sessions and a formal session of City Council, each time with the same pleas: consider the beauty of the area, the safety factors, but most importantly, how fast the commercialism involved can spread.

"We're not trying to put signboard companies out of business, but we do want to have a little distant vision about the thing," he said.

"It's far better to beautify the expressway with trees and shrubs than signs. We would like to see adequate trees and shrubs, and from what we've heard from Mr. Orange, the director of the expressway, he's going to put some up this year," he said.

The toll road can put up adequate green and white signs that indicate where the shopping centers and other major areas are located, he said, and once the people get off the freeway, the advertisers can put up all the signs they want, within reason.

"What we're after is an attractive approach to Virginia Beach through expanding residential and business areas in the city," he said, "and the areas we're interested in are Shore Drive, Northampton Boulevard and the expressway."

Patrick said that Planning Commission Chairman Ben Wooten has invited suggestions for a potential ordinance to be sent in to the Planning Department in order to assist them in getting out a policy. "We're looking for an alternative and what the people want to do," he said.

Assistant Planning Director Timothy R. Barrow said that the department is attempting to draw up a policy statement and guidelines, but that he didn't know what council was seeking so the department was limited in that respect.

The policy which is due within the 90-day deferral period set by council, will be worked on after presentation of the Kempville Borough development plan, which was due for presentation yesterday.

Barrow said the planning staff will be meeting with the signboard industry, the council, Adm. Patrick, and other interested parties to determine the most feasible set of guidelines. But until that time, it's up to local ecologists, botanists, garden clubs, signboard companies and other myriad groups to flesh out the situation and look for potential solutions to a problem that's plaguing the nation.

As for the admirals and his group, the solution is simple: to see that Virginia Beach is a more beautiful area to live in than when the year began. Even if it means no billboards.

Admiral Patrick said that the admirals has been working. He has appeared before several informal sessions and a formal session of City Council, each time with the same pleas: consider the beauty of the area, the safety factors, but most importantly, how fast the commercialism involved can spread.

"We're not trying to put signboard companies out of business, but we do want to have a little distant vision about the thing," he said.

The policy which is due within the 90-day deferral period set by council, will be worked on after presentation of the Kempville Borough development plan, which was due for presentation yesterday.

Barrow said the planning staff will be meeting with the signboard industry, the council, Adm. Patrick, and other interested parties to determine the most feasible set of guidelines. But until that time, it's up to local ecologists, botanists, garden clubs, signboard companies and other myriad groups to flesh out the situation and look for potential solutions to a problem that's plaguing the nation.

As for the admirals and his group, the solution is simple: to see that Virginia Beach is a more beautiful area to live in than when the year began. Even if it means no billboards.

Admiral Patrick said that the admirals has been working. He has appeared before several informal sessions and a formal session of City Council, each time with the same pleas: consider the beauty of the area, the safety factors, but most importantly, how fast the commercialism involved can spread.

"We're not trying to put signboard companies out of business, but we do want to have a little distant vision about the thing," he said.

"It's far better to beautify the expressway with trees and shrubs than signs. We would like to see adequate trees and shrubs, and from what we've heard from Mr. Orange, the director of the expressway, he's going to put some up this year," he said.

The toll road can put up adequate green and white signs that indicate where the shopping centers and other major areas are located, he said, and once the people get off the freeway, the advertisers can put up all the signs they want, within reason.

"What we're after is an attractive approach to Virginia Beach through expanding residential and business areas in the city," he said, "and the areas we're interested in are Shore Drive, Northampton Boulevard and the expressway."

Patrick said that Planning Commission Chairman Ben Wooten has invited suggestions for a potential ordinance to be sent in to the Planning Department in order to assist them in getting out a policy. "We're looking for an alternative and what the people want to do," he said.

Assistant Planning Director Timothy R. Barrow said that the department is attempting to draw up a policy statement and guidelines, but that he didn't know what council was seeking so the department was limited in that respect.

School Board Assn Meets in Roanoke

George C. Lyon, vice-chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board, has been appointed as an official delegate and will attend the 1970 Annual Convention of the Virginia School Boards Association which will be held in Roanoke, Oct. 8-10. Also attending will be E.E. Brickell, division superintendent.

The meeting with its theme, "Changing Dimensions in School Board Leadership" will convene at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 8, and will adjourn at noon on Saturday Oct. 10.

The keynote speaker for the opening session of the meeting will be Dr. Ralph B. Kimbrough, chairman, Department of Administration and Supervision, University of Florida. Dr. Kimbrough is a prolific and widely-read author, particularly in the area of the politics of education. Also, he is noted for his research in this area of specialization.

Following Dr. Kimbrough's presentation, an informal reception will be held for all school board members in the Commonwealth and their guests.

On Friday morning, Dr. Robert F. Savitt, superintendent of schools, Old Bethpage, N.Y., will present a major address on the topic: "A Constructive Approach to Student Militancy." Dr. Savitt has gained national-wide recognition for the "Plainview Plan" which was developed and introduced in his school system for "constructive student involvement" in educational programs.

Friday afternoon will be spent in small group discussions with outstanding consultants on topics such as: "Student Militancy," "Long-Range Planning," "Evaluation of Personnel," "Collective Bargaining in the Public Sector," "Vocational and Technical Education," "Drug Abuse," "Accountability," and "Guaranteed Performance Contracting."

Hugh T. McDade, public relations manager, Tennessee Operations, Aluminum Cooperation of America will address the Convention at the Annual Banquet on Friday evening. A native of Mississippi, McDade is nationally known as an after-dinner speaker.

On Saturday morning, A.E. "Dick" Howard, professor of law, University of Virginia and executive director, Virginia Commission on Constitutional Revision, will address the group and answer questions on the topic, "The Proposed Amendments to the Constitution in Virginia." The Annual Business Meeting of the Association will follow Howard's presentation. At that time, the Virginia School Boards Association will discuss and adopt its program of legislative action for the year.

Terms of Sale: Cash A Bidder's Deposit of Ten Percent (10%) of the sale price will be required when the property is sold and settlement in full shall be made within ten (10) days thereafter.

Judge P.B. White, aboard his "Pee Bee", waited near Lynnhaven Inlet all day Thursday to give aid to any of the arriving boats. Just before dark his day-long wait, paid off when one boat, which had been lost, arrived too late to tackle the Judging of the boats was held at dockside early Saturday morning. Serving as judges were Vice Adm. H.C. 'Rap' Moore, (USCG Ret.), Captain Ed Deacon, (USN Ret.) and Captain Jack Eady (USN Ret.), all of Virginia Beach.

The entire event came under the supervision of the convention's yacht committee which Judge White headed. Working with him were T. Lewis Johnson, Jack Ferrell and Jim Hunt. Hunt, in fact, supplied the press boat for the event.

The judges had a tough job for some of the decorations were quite elaborate. The best decorated trophy went to the "Seastace" out of Philadelphia, an exceptionally well decorated boat stressing an Hawaiian theme, complete with palm trees, hula skirts and even saronged Shriners. The best theme boat was the "Jean-John IV" with a wheel chair representing the 19 orthopedic hospitals and three burn hospitals the Shriners support for afflicted children. The Baltimore, Md. temple supplied the largest number of boats—six—and the "Unwashed X" out of Maniquan, N.J. traveled the farthest distance.

The IN SIGHT photographer heard about a fun place and decided to pay a visit to Lake Lynn Saturday afternoon. We found several of the neighborhood young people enjoying the swimming and the sun.

TARA CARPENTER readies for a dash back in to the water as-----

This group enjoys a little horse play. Riders are DEBBIE LANG, and MICHELE and KATIE TODD. The "horses" are DAVID ROACH, TOOTIE LELAND and PAT ROE.

The IN SIGHT photographer caught SANDRA DE VINE in one of womans most natural poses—drying her hair.

Even watching is fun. EDDIE SCHUMACHER and MIKE ROE rode their bikes down to watch the fun.

There are also fish in Lake Lynn. JAMES BAKER and WHITNEY VINES caught and released several.

Focuses On

John C. Calloway

JOHN C. CALLAWAY is a busy man. He's a teacher at Bayside High School. He's a Distributive Education coordinator and department chairman. These jobs require lots of paper work so JOHN might be found in his office when he doesn't have a class.

The INSIGHT photographer followed along as JOHN went to the office of CHARLES MURELLO, also a teacher at Bayside, who is president of Virginia Beach Education Association, to discuss an upcoming meeting of the association.

Know a busy man?

Throughout the city of Virginia Beach there are men and women who are making substantial contributions to their community and city and are never recognized beyond their immediate neighborhood.

It is the intention of IN SIGHT to focus attention on such individuals each week. If there is someone in your neighborhood who is heavily involved in community activities, whether it be little league, civic clubs or service organizations, let the IN SIGHT staff know about it. It can be a man or woman.

Outline briefly the persons activities and organizations, his address and phone number and mail it to IN SIGHT, P.O.Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451.

JOHN discusses the school activities calendar with Bayside principal LETCHER A. HILL, JR.

JOHN CALLAWAY is also a captain in the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Department and can be found there quite often, according to his wife, when his other duties permit. Here he is shown discussing fire department business with chief B. E. TODD seated, ARTHUR MAPES and JIM GOWER. JOHN, who was born in New Jersey and raised in Smithfield, lives in Windsor Woods with his wife, BETTY and children, EVAN 7, and ALLISON 5.

Another Wartime Ship Retired

With appropriate ceremonies the Navy last week decommissioned the amphibious transport U.S.S. CAMBRIA. The highly decorated World War II ship was commissioned in 1943 and was awarded the Asiatic-Pacific Area Service Medal with six battle stars for her participation in the Saipan, Tinian, Leyte, Lingayan Gulf, Okinawa and Eniwetok Atoll campaigns.

Executive Officer Commander A. JOACOBSEN and Commanding Officer Captain H. R. BIVIN at the decommissioning ceremonies aboard the USS CAMBRIA.

Crewmember Receives Jack

CAPTAIN BIVIN and COMMANDER JACOBSEN present the ship's jack and a transmittal letter to VALENTIN PAGULAYAN. It is traditional in the Navy that on decommissioning of a vessel the ensign or American flag is presented to the man having served on the vessel for the longest period of time. The ensign of the CAMBRIA went to CESAR BALLISIL, Stewardsman. The jack was presented to PAGULAYAN for having served the second longest time on board.

Non-participant

At every ceremony there are those who do not participate, JOHN ANTHONY was one of those who watched the proceedings.

The biggest happening in Virginia Beach last week was the Shriners Convention and especially the parade. The Virginia Beach Shrine Club of Khedive Temple, the hosts, had their own little get together at the Windjammer Motor Lodge for members and their wives. J. F. BELYEU of Norfolk and VERNON BURRIS of Virginia Beach are shown in discussion while their wives JO BELYEU and RUTH BURRIS listen.

Young people, of all ages, lined the parade route and some of the grandmothers and grandfathers enjoyed the parade as much as the grandchildren they accompanied.

There were lots of clowns-riding all types of vehicles.

These young ladies, like so many others, came prepared with cold drinks, lunch and made themselves comfortable, as ladies are wont to do, by taking off their shoes.

And finally...

DOUG WOOLARD, member of the Kehdive Oriental Band, also enjoyed himself, as evinced by the big smile.

Kehdive Temple Honor Guard was among the smartest marching groups in the parade. Kehdive Temple members are from the Virginia Beach-Norfolk area.

Game

LANCE PLATZ, halfback, did the scoring for BAYSIDE in last week's game with GRANBY. TOM CHIPOK passed to PLATZ who ran 45 yards for the TD then carried the ball over for the two point conversion tying the score at 8-8. The previous week PLATZ racked up 118 yards rushing against COX. COACH BOB HICKS says he is also expecting a good performance from PLATZ against FIRST COLONIAL this week.
